Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Leonidas Butt, Adam Q. Flaherty, Frank Jenkins, Stuart H. Greene. 4.

LEONIDAS BUTT.—To Paul, Tychicus was "a beloved and faithful minister in the Lord"; so to his brethren was Leonidas Butt. Tychicus could be trusted by the Apostle to make known to the church at Ephesus all things committed to his charge: so Leonidas Butt never betrayed the confidence of the Baltimore Conference, nor proved unfaithful to its commissions. Of fine presence, sensitive, gentle, cautious, inclined perhaps to shrink from public notice, but the soul of honor,

"his tribe were God Almighty's gentlemen." He was born in Lewisburg, W. Va., the third and youngest son of Dr. Shannon and Mary Reese Butt. In his ninth year the family moved to Monroe County, and there under the influence of a pious household he soon became conscious of religious aspirations. However, a sense of youth and immaturity, rather than lack of religious purpose, delayed his confession until a camp meeting in Monroe County not far from his home, when he was converted and united with the Church. Religious activity now became a relief rather than a cross to his hitherto pent-up spirit; the second day he led the congregation in public prayer, and then came his call to preach. Lack of preparation united with a native modesty precipitated a struggle; prayers and tears evidenced its intensity; but the end was a triumph for the Holy Spirit. In his own words: "Hoping to get rid of this call, I began the study of medicine under the tutorage of my father, but by day and by night I knew I was called to preach." This experience and his conversion were two facts that ever after rose clear and strong above all doubt. At Centerville, Monroe County, January 14, 1860, he was licensed to preach, and at once began seriously his preparation for the work of the ministry. In March, 1860, he was admitted on trial into this Conference; and at Salem, Va., March 13, 1865, he was ordained both deacon and elder by Bishop Early. In this relation he remained until God said, "It is enough; come up higher." That year he was appointed junior preacher on Blue Sulphur Circuit; the next, junior on Frankford; and the third year of his ministry, junior on East Rockingham. In 1863 he was sent to Highland as preacher in charge; and the next, junior to Peterstown. The soldier of the cross as well as the soldier of the country was at this time following the fortunes of war, which, doubtless, accounts in part for the frequency as well as character of his appointments. In 1865 he was appointed preacher in charge of White Sulphur, and in 1866 again of Highland. From 1867 to 1869 he was junior preacher on Springfield Circuit; 1870 to 1871, preacher in charge of Frederick; 1872 and 1873, of Sinking Creek, now Newport; 1874 to 1876, of La Fayette; 1877, of Morgan; 1878 to 1881, of Franklin; 1882 to 1885, of Springfield; 1886 and 1887, of Berkeley;

1888 to 1891, of Frankford; 1892 to 1894, of Shenandoah City; 1895 to 1898, of East Rockingham; 1899 to 1900, of Glen Wilton; 1901 to 1904, of Linden; 1905 to 1908, of Fincastle; and 1909, of Goshen. As proof of his acceptableness it may be observed that he served four charges twice, viz.: Highland, Frankford, East Rockingham, and Springfield. At the session of 1910 he asked for and was granted the superannuate relation, and went to spend the remainder of his days on earth at Woodstock, Va. There he fully identified himself with the best interests of the community; joined the various organizations of the Church; by request organized a Sunday school a few miles from the town, and there delivered his last message to the people, from the words of Micah: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Then, on July 8, 1912, after having exemplified for seventy-one years and three days, by his own gracious life, the words of this his last text, he went to God. March 1, 1871, Robert W. Parker, of near Springfield, W. Va., gave him his daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, in marriage, and God gave them one son and four daughters to receive their affection and care. All survive him save one. Daisie, the youngest, after taking the A.B. degree at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and serving in many gentle ministries to the sick, went, four years before her father, where they never say, "I am sick." Her body lies beside his in Massanutton Cemetery in Woodstock, and so to his departing spirit the farewells in Woodstock were mingled with the welcomes of Heaven. While for several months he apprehended his end as near, he was not seriously ill more than a week, and much of that time he was unconscious. However, he was not taken unawares—he had set his house in order; for just before this period of unconsciousness he said to his wife: "I've been making this a subject of prayer, and I feel perfectly resigned to God's will and am ready whenever he sees fit to call me." "In death a hero, as in life a friend."—Henry P. Hamill.

STUART HARDY GREENE, eldest son of Luther B. and Mollie Greene, born near Lexington, Va., February 20, 1884, died near Asbury, Greenbrier County, September 8, 1912, aged twenty-eight years.

Brother Greene was married May 22, 1906, to Miss Virginia, daughter of Rev. Wesley Hammond. Unto them three children were born—Wesley Hammond, Stuart Wilson, and Luther Ward Greene—two of whom survive. Brother Greene was converted at an early period in life, devoting his life from that time on to the cause of Christ. Profoundly impressed with a call to the ministry, he was licensed to preach September 5, 1907, at Cumberland, Md., and was admitted on trial in the traveling connection in 1908, serving the following charges: Frostburg, 1908; Gainsboro Circuit, 1909-10; Blue Sulphur Circuit, 1911-12. His ministry was signally successful. In each of his charges there were great revivals. His one passion was to win souls for his Lord. On the afternoon of the day of his death, looking out upon a mountainous section where the gospel was not regularly preached, he said: "I cannot rest until I have done my duty to all." His preaching was of the most earnest, practical, fearless type. The "I must" was in all he did. He shunned not declaring unto men the whole truth. The hour of his leaving his work on earth came very suddenly. After delivering what he hoped would not be his last message, the end came. It was an end, however, for which due preparation had been made. One Sunday evening, while on his way home to loved ones and friends, his Master called him, and Stuart Hardy Greene was no more. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."—Lewis S. Rudasill.

FRANK JENKINS, son of Francis M. and Mary R. Jenkins, was born April 9, 1878, near Newton, Dale County, Ala., and died after a brief illness of pneumonia, Sunday night, January 5, 1913, at Greenville, Va. Funeral services were held in the Church at Greenville, Tuesday morning, January 7, by Rev. B. W. Bond, D.D., presiding elder, assisted by Revs. D. H. Kern, C. L. Potter, W. D. Eye, and G. W. Staples. Dr. Bond and Brother Kern made appropriate remarks to the large congregation that had gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to the loved and faithful pastor who had been called so suddenly from labor to reward. A prominent citizen of Greenville said: "This is the greatest blow this town and circuit have ever experienced. It is not simply a case of a people liking a man, but of a community loving him." The body, accompanied by Dr. W. B. Dodge, of Stuart's Draft, was taken to his home at Osark, Ala., and there by loving hands lowered into the earth. His body in the Southland, the land he loved, waits for the coming of the King. Brother Jenkins was happily married March 21, 1905, to Mrs. Elizabeth McMillan, who with a little daughter six years old, survives him. May our God be very near them in their sorrow. Brother Jenkins could not, like many, give the exact time or place of his conversion, but from early childhood knew that he was in a state of acceptance with God. Early in life he knew that he was called into the ministry of our Lord, and began to prepare himself for his life's work. He was a hard student in his boyhood, and at both the public school and home was found at his books. After attending the school near his home, he went to the High School at Newton, Ala.; from there he went to Kinsey, Ala., and entered Mallilieu Seminary, from which he graduated with honors, easily leading his class. His teachers speak in the highest terms of his Christian character, and his habits as a student. Brother Jenkins was blessed with a superior mind, and was no stranger to his study; at the time of his death he was taking a correspondence course with the University of Chicago. Brother Jenkins was licensed to preach at Mariana, Fla., in 1898. He was admitted on trial into the Baltimore Conference at Alexandria, Va., in March, 1904, Bishop Wilson presiding. Brother Jenkins was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Wilson at that Conference. In March, 1908, in the City of Roanoke, at Greene Memorial Church, he was ordained elder by Bishop Wilson. He served the following charges with great acceptability: Frostburg, Md., 1904; Goldsboro, Md., 1905-8; Brunswick, Md., 1909-10; Augusta, Va., 1911-12. It was here that he "fell asleep"; ceased both to labor and to live. He was a forceful and practical preacher. He had the happy faculty of knowing what to say and how to say it. His one effort was to secure results. His illustrations were usually from personal experience or observation, and he rarely failed to drive the truth home. He was successful in seeing material advancement on his charges, but was especially successful in soul-saving. He was a winner of souls. When he was taken ill, it was not thought that it would terminate in death. He would have preferred to wait, if it had been the Master's will; for he, like all true ministers, saw the fields ripe for the harvest and laborers few. But he was ready to go. The gospel he had preached to others was a comfort to him. He knew whom he had believed. Just before he died, he called his loved wife and child to his side, and said, "Good-by! Be good!" And then, before the watchers around the bed realized what was taking place, he passed away to be with Jesus. One who knew him well, a member of another Church and Conference, wrote: "As to my estimate of him, I do not hesitate to say that his was a substantial, a noble, holy, exemplary, and most beautiful life. He was a godly man. I knew him well enough to say that as a Christian gentleman and minister he was of the highest type." Life is not to be measured by length of days, or by what men may think or say; life only reaches its highest place when it is surrendered to the will of God. By the record of the life as given here, Frank Jenkins met that test, in giving his love and life to his Lord. His spirit has returned to God; his body rests in the grave; his memory is in our hearts.—L. Hammond.

ADAM Q. FLAHERTY was born March 2, 1827. He died in Craig County, Va., March 19, 1913. He was married to Miss Lucy Bishop in 1850. The following data of this long and useful life was furnished by himself, and is, therefore, authentic. He received a good high-school education, and taught for some time in his early life. His call to the ministry came to him at the time of his conversion, which was when he was about fifteen years old; but being of a timid and shrinking disposition, he stifled the conviction to preach until urged to do so by the Church. At the instance of the late Dr. Armstrong he was licensed to exhort in 1857, and under the late Dr. Martin was licensed to preach in April, 1859, and that year was placed on Lexington Circuit, to which work he was returned the next year under Rev. Samuel Regester, presiding elder. In 1861 he applied for admission into the Conference, but, being a married man, had some difficulty in getting in. His cause, however, was espoused by such men as Martin and Regester, and he was received. He was ordained deacon at the session of the Holston Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held at Bristol, Va., in 1863, by Bishop Early. At the same time Rev. L. R. Jones, of our Conference, was ordained both deacon and elder. These brethren were compelled to go to the Holston Conference for ordination because of the disorganized condition of our Church in our territory at that time. He was ordained elder in 1865. He filled the following appointments: Sent to Huntersville in 1861, but transferred to Lexington on account of unfavorable war conditions there; 1862-3, Jacksonville Circuit; 1864-5, New Prospect; 1866-7, Covington; 1868-9, Montgomery; 1870, Buchanan; 1871, Linganore, Md.; 1872, Baltimore Circuit; 1873-5, Collierstown; 1876-9, Monterey; 1880-1, Crabbottom; 1882-4, Centerville; 1885-6, Roanoke; 1887-8, La Fayette; 1889-'92, Newport; 1893-4, Amsterdam. In 1895 he retired from active work, but as long as he lived, when weather conditions would permit, he was busy in the Master's service, holding protracted meetings at many points with marvelous success. His work was especially successful in Highland County, Va., for here some of the greatest revivals of his ministry occurred. Prior to his going to Highland in 1876, no camp meetings had been held since ante-bellum days, and these were revived by him. These camp meetings were largely attended both by ministers and the general public, and it was through these remarkable meetings that Brother Flaherty's personality was indelibly stamped on the hearts and minds of so many people. One incident of the Crabbottom meeting will suffice to illustrate his shrewdness, originality, and rare type of man. On a certain night during the progress of the meeting, some scamp stole an overcoat from the preacher's tent, and all efforts to locate it or get a clue failed. At the following evening service, he called attention from the stand to the theft, announcing in thunder tones that the thief was known; that he had been seen by three persons; but if he would return the coat to the preacher's tent before morning, he would be forgiven; otherwise, he would have to be punished. Next morning the coat was found near where the thief had gotten it. He was congratulated on the success of his plan, and some one asked who the three persons were who had seen the theft perpetrated. He smilingly answered: "The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." He was a man of great faith.

and his style was most practical, positive, and pointed in preaching. Implicit faith in the Word dominated his efforts, energies, and life. He was liberal "to a fault," depriving himself and his noble wife of actual comforts by his gifts. He made no reference to his charities except to intimate friends, yet it is known that he gave his entire estate to Foreign Missions many years before his death, his contributions in that direction alone amounting to more than $8,000. He was buried in the family burying-ground at Roaring Run, Botetourt County, Va., March 21, 1913. The service was conducted by Rev. L. L. Lloyd, assisted by Revs. A. Van Devender and H. C. Fehrey.—J. Howard Wells.

JAMES WILLIAM COMPTON died at his home in Milton, Ore., surrounded by his own family, his brother, Alexander Compton, his wife's uncle, D. R. B. Winniford, and Rev. J. G. Garrick, at 3:30 o'clock P.M., August 20, 1913. This pioneer minister of his Church in the great Northwest was born in Prince William County, Va., March 5, 1847. His home was located on the Bull Run battlefield, and the family lived there and were present at the time of the battle. As a result of the fighting, several of the family died, the shock being too great. James William viewed the conflict from behind a little hill back of the house. Late in life this was one of the most real of all the experiences he ever had. He was educated at Randolph-Macon College, and should have received his degree only for the lack of a little work in mathematics. He was licensed to preach at the Salem and Bethel Circuit, Baltimore Conference, August 17, 1869—Rev. John F. Martin presiding elder. Ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce at Baltimore, March 7, 1873; ordained elder by Bishop Doggett at Staunton, Va., March 8, 1874. He was transferred to the Columbia Conference by Bishop Marvin in March, 1875, from the Baltimore Conference. He reached Salem, Ore., in May, where he took charge of the work in the capital city of Oregon, and remained there till fall, when, at the session of the Conference at Albany, he was sent by Bishop Kavanaugh to the Grand Ronde and Powder River Circuit, where he, with R. C. Oglesby, presiding elder, and F. W. D. Mays at Walla Walla Circuit, supplied what is now the East Columbia Conference. Brother Compton traveled three thousand miles this year, mostly on horseback. The fall of 1876 was memorable to Southern Methodism in the Northwest, because it was the first time one of the bishops ever visited the Inland Empire, that great section of country with Walla Walla and Spokane in its center, and the richest country in the whole section. Bishop Marvin, on his great trip around the world, came through Baker City, Grande Ronde Valley, and Walla Walla, coming over from Salt Lake, Utah, on stage to Baker City, and at Brother Compton's urgent request to Walla Walla. The Conference was held at Corvallis, Ore., and Brother Compton was appointed to the Grande Ronde and Baker City Circuit, but took Powder River Circuit also. This was the year of the Nez Perce Indian wars. In 1877 the Conference was held at Walla Walla by Bishop McTyeire. Brother Compton was elected delegate to the General Conference, which met at Atlanta, Ga. He was the only representative from the Northwest. The Annual Conference at Roseburg, Ore., is interesting in this connection, because it was while on his way to Conference that he climbed to the top of Mount Hood, and also because he met the lady who has walked so faithfully and shared his joys and sorrows through life. This Conference was held by Bishop Wightman. Brother Compton's first appointment as presiding elder was in 1878. The district was divided, and Grande Ronde, Powder River, and Willowa (pronounced Willow) were put in one district, and Brother Compton appointed presiding elder. In 1879 Bishop Keener put both districts together and appointed Brother Compton over both. The district included what is now the entire East Columbia Conference, and not a railroad in it that one could use. It was during this year (1879) that he was happily married to Miss Eliza Winniford, of Oakland, Ore. This was the young lady whom he had met the year before on his way to Conference. In the fall of 1880 the Conference was to be held at Weston, Ore., by Bishop Doggett, but on account of sickness he did not come, and J. R. N. Bell was elected president of the Conference. This year the district was again divided, and J. W. Compton was appointed to the Walla Walla District. Bishop Kavanaugh held the Conference in 1881 at Corvallis, Ore. J. W. Compton was continued on the Walla Walla District, with headquarters at Milton, Ore. Bishop Hargrove held the Conference in 1882, and appointed J. R. N. Bell to the Walla Walla District, but after Conference changed him and put Brother Compton on the district again. This year he was the only preacher his Church had in Washington Territory. He also served the Spokane Circuit, which he had organized. Bishop Hargrove held the Conference of 1883 at Independence, Ore., and sent Brother Compton to the Spokane Circuit. In the fall of 1884 the Conference was held at Dayton, Wash., by Bishop Granbery, and Brother Compton was returned to the Spokane Circuit for the third year. In 1885 Bishop Hargrove held the Conference at Corvallis, Ore. Brother Compton was returned to the Spokane Circuit, which covered an area of four hundred miles long. In 1886 Bishop Keener held the Conference at Weston, Ore., and founded the Spokane District and appointed Brother Compton to it. This is the district which has had its name changed to what it is at present, the Washington District, which in itself is now the strongest district in the Conference, and probably in the Northwest. It was during the year 1886 that our first property was bought in Spokane. It was bought on the naked faith of J. W. Compton, without a single dollar to pay down. Bishop Hargrove held the Conference in 1887, at Tangent, Ore., but came through Spokane and started what afterwards became, with development, the Hargrove Church of Spokane. In 1888 the Conference was held at Pendleton, Ore., by Bishop Galloway. Brother Compton was returned to the Spokane District. In 1890, at The Dalles, Ore., Bishop Hargrove presiding, J. W. Compton and R. C. Oglesby presented a memorial to the Conference asking the General Conference to divide the Columbia District, which request was granted at the General Conference of the same year. Bishop Hendrix held both Conferences the next year, the East Columbia at Spokane, and the Columbia at Lebanon. Brother Compton's time being out as presiding elder, R. B. Swift was appointed to the district, and J. W. Compton to the Palouse charge. In 1887 R. B. Swift had been transferred from the Memphis Conference, and took up the work in Spokane. He preached in halls and in one place after another until he sold the property Brother Compton bought for an advanced price, and secured another lot and built a parsonage in 1888, and a church in 1889, which was dedicated by Bishop Hargrove. This property was sold a few years ago, and the money reinvested in Spokane. We have in Spokane now property worth, in 1912, $14,500. The property upon which Brothers Compton and Swift built Hargrove Church is worth to-day from $45,000 to $60,000—more than all the rest of the property in the district, probably. The first lots that Brother Compton bought are worth more to-day than all the rest of the property in the East Columbia Conference. Brother Compton was at Palouse four years. He built a nice church there, one of the best in the Conference. It was while pastor there that he saw converted at his altar and received into the church Rev. J. G. Garrick. He has been closely associated with this brother, having united him in marriage and helped him into the strong ministry he has given to the Church. While he lived, they were true friends. Brother Compton was not a revivalist, but as a pastor beloved he had few equals. No man among us has been called back oftener to his former pastorates to marry their living and to bury their dead members. After four years at Palouse, he was appointed to the Spokane District again. This he served faithfully and acceptably, but at his own request he was moved to Genessee, Idaho. This was probably the only request for a change that he ever made to any bishop. He served Genessee two years. While there he had an experience that few ministers have in the course of a lifetime. He stayed up a whole night in prayer for his people, so burdened was he for them; but they did not apparently appreciate his efforts. Again in 1911, during the revival series at Milton, Brother Compton suggested to the pastor that it would be well to call an all-night prayer service and ask for volunteers. It was done, and twelve persons, including Brother Compton, spent the whole night in prayer. On the next night there was a breaking up, and many souls were brought into the kingdom during the rest of the services. He was preeminently a man of prayer. In the last year of his life, while he could do little active work, he was known to pray much for the Church and his brethren. At the end of two years at Genessee he was sent to Bethel Circuit, where he built a parsonage and organized our work at Troy, Ida. He did a fine work there and served one of the first country churches, if not the first, of any preacher in any denomination in Northern Idaho. He served this charge three years, and in 1900 was sent to Walla Walla. He served Walla Walla faithfully, but his family lived in Milton, where he moved them to educate his children in the only Church school of his denomination in his reach. He lived at home part of the time, but succeeded in doing something that no other pastor had ever done there—that was, to bring up his collections in full. In 1902 he was sent to Covello and Waitsburg charge; 1903 to La Grande. These were small charges, where he had no chance, and did not do a very large work, but the sacrifice he made to serve them and be faithful to his work only himself, his family, and God knew. But no word of complaint ever fell from his lips. It was during these trying times that he lost his youngest son, Howard, a boy of twelve years. Brother Compton took a supernumerary relation in 1904, and worked as a supply at Wingville in 1905, Weston in 1906, and in 1907 and 1908 he supplied Leland and did excellent work. No man could be more faithful as a pastor. In 1909 he took a superannuate relation, and so continued to his death and transfer above. Brother Compton was the Secretary of the Conference for thirty-five years, serving his brethren faithfully till the time of his death. He had a family of six children: one died in childhood; another son, in young manhood, was removed suddenly in a railroad accident. This was a great shock to his family, and particularly to Brother Compton. He was faithful in all his house as well as in his church. Nothing grieved him more than to see his brethren mixed up in things questionable. His life was spotless, his character as high as the Blue Mountains that surround his home. His greatest desire was to see the triumph of the Kingdom of Christ and his Church, and God wonderfully blessed him in his last request. His desire was to live until the convening of his Conference, which met in his home town, and to be laid to rest by his brethren of the ministry. His request was granted, and he passed away on the first day of the Conference, and was borne to his last resting place by his brethren. His last prayer was like that of Christ for his brethren, "that they might be one"; for himself, that he might be submissive to the will of God, and not his own. Our lives are better, our homes happier, our Church richer, and our country more religious because J. W. Compton lived and wrought. "He sleeps well."—J. G. Garrick, J. H. Dills, S. G. Rogers, Committee.

was converted at the age of nineteen, and in 1848 he became a member of the Kentucky Conference, where he remained for two years; and at the organization of the Western Virginia Conference in 1850 he became a member of this Conference, and remained a member of it until the day of his death. He was a strong man, physically and mentally, and so was enabled to endure the many hardships of the itinerancy as a circuit rider. He traveled many charges in this Conference, which, at the time of his traveling, were very hard fields, but have since become better charges and more accessible. Brother Hedges was a great preacher and an expounder of the doctrines of the Church of his choice, and woe unto him who called in question the truth of the doctrines that had become a part of himself in his experience as a Christian man and as a minister of the gospel. He was a gentleman in the highest sense of the word, and his powers were recognized by all who knew him, and he had a large circle of acquaintances and choice friends. He was of a cheerful disposition, and in a remarkable degree possessed the power to impart that cheerfulness to others. Not only was he a great preacher, and his great sermons are yet remembered by many, but he was a brilliant conversationalist, and many are the homes that have been made better and hearts more cheerful by his visits and helpful conversations. When he spoke he was admired by all for what he said and the way he said it. He never pretended to be what he was not. He was honest in thought, in purpose, and in deed. He was married first in 1849 to Miss Sallie Anderson, of Harrison County, who died a year later; and he was married a second time in 1853 to Miss Margaret McClung, of Greenbrier County, who died just thirteen hours earlier than her husband. To this union seven children were born, two sons and five daughters. Brother Hedges was a loving husband and father, and stood high as a citizen of Greenbrier County, where he has lived for many years. This man of God came to the end of his earthly career November 15, 1912, in the full joy of faith in which he had lived. Not many men are permitted to live to be ninety-three years old, but this good man came to the fullness of years with tenderness of heart and childlike faith, and it was a pleasure to see his patience. He and his wife were buried at the same time, side

THOMAS HART BENTON ANDERSON was born in Chariton County, Mo., May 26, 1842, and entered into rest in Salinas, Cal., just a little before midnight, November 30, 1912. He was converted when fourteen years of age, under a sermon preached by the Rev. E. K. Miller, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Four years later, with his parents, he moved to California, and for thirty-five years made that the State of his love and adoption. At a Quarterly Conference held in his father's house, June, 1862, he was licensed to preach the gospel, and the following October was admitted into the Pacific Conference as a traveling preacher. On April 27, 1867, he was happily married to Miss Sarah J. Brooks, who for forty-one years walked by his side in loving companionship, and in all his labors was a helpmeet indeed. Three years after her departure he bore this testimony to her Christian character: "She was a noble soul, great, great, great! She was always ahead of me in faith and good works, and I have never known a more unselfish soul. She died in Gallatin, Mo., fourteen minutes past midnight, August 5, 1908. The closing scene was peaceful, like a wave dying on the shore." Of the eight children born to them, three passed on before. One sleeps in Chico, one in Sacramento, one in the State of Texas, and the mother in Gallatin, Mo.; a most pathetic illustration, says Bishop Waterhouse, that in this world the itinerant preacher has no abiding place. Dr. Anderson was married the second time October 23, 1911, to Mrs. Mary Curtis, an elect lady of Sacramento City, who after a year of wedded felicity mourns his departure. Fifty years a preacher of the gospel, the greatest work to which God ever called a man, is a long and enviable record of service. In it all our ascended brother made good. Beginning his ministry a poor boy, the son of a ranchman, without the training of the schools, he rose with great rapidity to the highest places of honor and responsibility. Endowed with a great intellect, a heart that loved his fellow-men, an indomitable energy, all barriers gave way before him. He filled the leading charges of his Conference again and again, and always with efficiency and acceptability. Repeatedly he represented his Conference in the General Conference, and was possibly the best known, best loved preacher on the Pacific Coast. In the fall of 1897 he transferred to the Missouri Conference, and served Richmond, Moberly, Shelbyville, Gallatin, and Excelsior Springs stations. The friends he made in these charges were legion, and many who sat under the fervor and eloquence of his ministry saw the light and rejoiced in it. At the Annual Conference at Plattsburg, 1910, his name passed to the roll of our honored superannuates, and he returned to the scenes of his early ministry to await the call of his Master. Two busy years were spent writing a history of the Pacific Conference and supplying Salinas Station. After being appointed the second time to this work, with his wife he came to Missouri to visit the charges he had served, and after greeting his friends, while returning home contracted a serious cold which resulted in pneumonia and his death. On December 5, in Sacramento City, where he had labored as pastor for fourteen years, in the presence of a vast multitude of sorrowing friends and relatives, Bishop Waterhouse conducted the last sad rites, and his body was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery of that city. God buries his workmen, but carries on his work.—R. H. Cooper.

WILLIS CARLISLE was born in Kentucky, August 20, 1869. He departed this life in Savannah, Mo., January 2, 1913. He leaves here his wife, two daughters, and one son. Brother Carlisle was a highly educated Christian gentleman. He took his A.B. degree in Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., June, 1910. He loved men and truth and books. He was laudably an ambitious man. Some way he pushed on, expecting to be among the leaders of his generation. The teaching quality seemed to dominate, though he loved to preach the gospel. He loved to live and work and win souls. He did not expect to leave for the other life so soon. Being large and strong and invincible, he appeared to have a long lease on life. But one morning he fell like a towering tree. He combined so much that was thoughtful, graceful, and useful. He had mastered the fine art of gathering about him the men of his community. Savannah, the city that knew him last, and probably best, will have long, strong, sweet memory of his life and his teachings. His death-chamber became an upper room for men who were seeking to find the light. They came, by scores, both saints and sinners, to look upon the face of a passing chieftain. They came, they saw, they heard, they lowered their heads, and and moved noiselessly out, convinced that Jesus Christ was on hand to comfort and claim a dying prophet. During his membership in the Missouri Conference he had been preacher, presiding elder, financial secretary of Central College, and preacher again. Memorial services, not a funeral, were held in Savannah. Churchmen, non-churchmen, and preachers spoke. Doubtless there was never a service like it held in that little city. The heaps of floral offerings were scattered throughout the town, a rose in a place. Those speaking at the memorial service were two laymen of his church, Samuel Murphy and Samuel Wells; Prof. G. F. Nardin, the Rev. A. J. Quirin, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the following preachers of the St. Joseph District: Dr. C. H. Briggs, presiding elder; B. P. Taylor, of Francis Street Church; H. C. McPherson, of Hundley Church; and Brother J. T. McDonald. There were other pastors of the district present. The body of Brother Carlisle was taken to Gossett, Ill., and laid away in the old home cemetery, close by the graves of two little children who had slipped away ahead of their father. He took leave of us believing that the brethren of the Conference whom he loved would render to his bereaved wife and little children efficient service. His last words were that he wanaed to live and serve; but knowing that his hours were numbered, he left this message: "I brave the unknown sea with my Pilot true and tried; there is no storm in front of me, there is no night, there is no death; the morning has come, it is day forever."—Hugh C. McPherson.

CHARLES LYNCH was born near Covington, Va., September 30, 1866. His early education was secured in the public schools of his native town. Later he was graduated from Grant University at Chattanooga, Tenn. He was admitted into the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in September, 1887. After his ordination as deacon, he transferred his membership to the Holston Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He served charges in Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Oklahoma, until September, 1911, when he transferred to the Missouri Conference and was stationed at Troy, Mo. He was married in 1888 to Miss Anna Given, of Alleghany County, Va. She died a few months afterwards, leaving a son who now lives at Monkton, Md. October 18, 1893, he was married to Miss Florence Collins, of Cheatown, Tenn., who, with four children, two boys and two girls, survives him. He died very suddenly at his home in Troy, Saturday evening, February 1, 1913. In his death the Church has lost a faithful minister of the gospel. In his estimation, to be an ambassador for Jesus Christ was not a thing to be lightly esteemed. This high conception of his work gave him an earnestness in all he did and made him scrupulously conscientious in the smallest details. He was a diligent worker. At the time of his death he was engaged in his fifth successive revival since Conference. In these meetings more than fifty persons were converted. He was a strong and helpful preacher, honored and loved by the people he served. His body sleeps near the old homestead at Covington, Va. His spirit has returned to God.—C. B. Duncan.

HENRY THOMAS LEEPER was born July 3, 1836, near Spring Hill, Mo. His parents, John L. Leeper and Amanda F. Leeper, were lifelong Methodists, whose home influences were worthy of the ministry their son accomplished. August 20, 1845, in his tenth year, he was converted in a meeting held by Rev. Horace Brown, near Spring Hill, Mo. In time he felt a call to preach, which he described as a "necessity laid upon him" from above, and without reserve he gave himself to the work of the ministry. July 15, 1868, Brother Leeper was given license to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Spring Hill Circuit—Rev. W. E. Dockery, presiding elder, and Rev. S. W. Cope, preacher in charge. He was admitted on trial into the Missouri Conference in August, 1872. September 14, 1873, Bishop Wightman ordained him deacon at Carrollton, Mo.; and at Macon, Mo., September 15, 1878, Bishop Doggett ordained him elder. He labored at pleasant Park two years; Mandeville, two years; Bedford, two years; Kingston, two years; Mandeville, one year; Maysville, two years; Dearborn, two years; Lineville, two years; Edinburg, two years; Jamesport, one year; Breckenridge, one year; Pattonsburg, one year; Jameson, three years; Ashland, two years; Clifton Hill, three years. In his twenty-eight years of service he received into the Church over eleven hundred persons, built churches on the Kingston and Ashland charges, and was instrumental in securing parsonages at Mandeville, Dearborn, and Jameson. In December, 1869, he married Miss Cordelia Leeper. Four children were born to them: David R. Leeper, Mrs. Margaret H. Knight, James E. Leeper, and Mrs. Ruby L. Cammock. Though quiet and unassuming in manner, yet his ministry was a deeply influential one. He was a strong pastor-evangelist, and was blessed with rich results in both pastoral and revival work. He had an especial care for young men, and was skillful in developing church leaders among them. The last months of his life were characterized by continuous and extreme suffering, but this only brought into clearer light the sacred contents of his life—faith, hope, love. He passed away at his home in Gallatin, Mo., Tuesday, June 10, 1913. Funeral services were conducted in the Methodist church at Gallatin, Thursday, June 13, 1913, after which the body was interred in the Brown Cemetery just north of the city. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Boyd, conducted the services, and was assisted by Rev. W. A. Hanna, of Chillicothe; Rev. W. O. Medley; and Rev. J. H. Tharp, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Gallatin. The closing scenes of his life were a benediction to all who looked upon them, and constituted an imperishable testimony to the truth he had so long and fervently preached to his fellow-men.—W. P. Wynne.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except C. B. Day, who withdrew from the ministry and membership of the Church, pending his trial on the charge of immorality that resulted in suspension for one year.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? J. L. D. Blevans, J. Tillery, J. B. Landreth, J. W. Bond, W. B. Bull, C. N. Scrivener. 6.

J. L. D. BLEVANS was born in Miller County, Mo., June 25, 1836. He was converted in Jefferson City, Mo., in 1850. Was married to Mary F. Yocum in 1865. Of this union there were born five children—Mrs. L. V. Sullivan, of Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. H. M. Ellis, Mrs. Mary Abbot, of Tipton, Mo.; J. T. D. Blevans, of Dallas, Tex. He joined the Southwest Missouri Conference at its first session in Kansas City, Mo., 1871. He practiced medicine from the year 1856 up to his joining the Conference. His first wife died in August, 1872. He was married the second time to Miss Marcia Ellis, September 9, 1874, by J. R. Bennett. The last charge he served was Arrow Block, in 1899, when he was given a supernumerary relation, and was superannuated several years ago. He died at Tipton, Mo., February 4, 1913. His funeral was conducted by Rev. W. F. Wagoner, and he was buried at Walnut Grove Church, Cooper County, Mo.

JEPHTHA TILLERY was born near Plattsburg, Mo., in 1828. He joined the Missouri Conference in 1854, and served a number of charges, including the Neosho District for four years and the Springfield two years. He was a delegate to the General Conference in 1874. He died at the home of his son-in-law, Nelson Ingram, near Springfield, Mo., September 6, 1913. His wife died about ten years ago. He is survived by the following children: G. D. Tillery, John W. Tillery, Mrs. Mollie Gibson, Mrs. Frances Ingram, Miss Laura Tillery, and Dr. J. S. Tillery. Funeral services were conducted at New Salem Church by his pastor, Rev. John Klingner, and his remains were laid by those of his wife at Mount Comfort. He was a good preacher and successful revivalist. He gave directions for his funeral, sent a message of love to the Conference, and died triumphant.

JEDEDIAH BAXTER LANDRETH was born in Maury County, Tenn., December 11, 1829, and died at Morrisville, Mo., September 28, 1912. He came to Missouri with his parents in 1837 and settled in Polk County. He was converted in 1846 and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In 1856 he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was licensed to preach and admitted into the traveling connection the same year. He traveled circuits and districts in Missouri, Texas, and California. He was superannuated in 1895. Brother Landreth was a physician, and practiced his profession at different periods of his life. He was a strong preacher, and often discussed the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. He was twice married, and leaves behind a widow and three children. Our brother was a good man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He is now with the redeemed host on high, while his body sleeps in the cemetery at Pleasant Hope, Polk County, Mo.

JOHN WESLEY BOND was born in Simpson County, Ky., March 25, 1834, and died in Waldron, Ark., August 5, 1913. He was the son of Rev. Joseph Bond, who, for many years, was a faithful itinerant preacher. Brother Bond was twice married. Ten children survive him. He was converted in 1852 and joined the Methodist Church. In 1855 he was licensed to preach, and the same year he was admitted into the traveling connection. He was a faithful man, true to his vows, serving for many years on poor circuits and missions. He was a good preacher, and sometimes preached with great power. Many were brought into the kingdom through his instrumentality. He lived a godly life and went away from it in great peace. His body sleeps in the cemetery at Waldron, Ark.

WILLIAM B. BULL was born in Lexington, Mo., June 18, 1885, and died at Metz, Mo., April 26, 1913. He was converted at the age of fifteen years and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Brother Bull was a graduate of the University of Missouri and of the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University; and he was one of the most scholarly and cultured men of his Conference. Admitted on trial in 1895, the following year he was happily married to Miss Tina Thompson, who, with two children, survives him. He was a minister of the gospel fifteen years, and served charges at Buffalo, Cross Timbers, Bolivar, Archie, Calhoun, Moundsville, and in 1910 at Metz. Brother Bull was an ideal Methodist preacher. He never left anything undone. Though his health had been bad for several months, he preached as usual; and in the midst of his preparation for the coming Sabbath, the summons came. He was true to every trust, and his place will be hard to fill. The local paper said of him: "He was an encyclopedia in one volume, and we had use for him. He was truly a good man." His body rests in the old family lot in Lexington Cemetery.

CHARLES N. SCRIVENER died March 19, 1913, his death being caused by an acute attack of appendicitis ending in an operation. Through the short but sharp struggle between life and death, he showed the same patience, fortitude, and bravery which he had developed and used in the various severe conflicts which had come to him in life. His ministry of twenty-two years had been marked by more than ordinary experiences, which developed him into a large and important factor of Conference and pastoral matters. Out of the furnace of fire he came forth a man of power and energy which gave their greatest fruitage in his two last charges at Mount Washington and Independence. Not afraid to die, every thought and preparation for his children and Church was given as calmly as if he was going on a temporary journey. The high esteem in which he was held by his fellows was shown by the attendance and expressions of regard for him at the funeral services, held in Independence and conducted by his presiding elder, W. T. McClure, W. G. Beasley, C. M. Simpson, and Dr. McGinley of the Presbyterian Church. Nearly all of the preachers of the Kansas City District and many from other parts of the Conference were in attendance. He leaves two children, Miss Irene and Charles Arthur; his wife, a charming Christian character, having died at Mount Washington, Mo., July 29, 1910. He fought the good fight. He kept the faith. He has received his crown of eternal life. His brief life was as ointment poured forth. We cannot forget him, and we shall meet him again. Peacefully his body sleeps beside his loved helpmeet at Springfield, Mo. His spirit is with his God.—Thomas M. Cobb, Chairman of Committee.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Brinkley M. Messick, Thomas V. Joiner. 2.

B. M. MESSICK.—On the last day of September, 1912, while his brethren of the Louisville Conference were getting ready to receive their annual appointments, Brinkley Morris Messick obeyed the summons from the great Head of the Church to come "up higher." And there passed from earth one of the knightliest souls that ever bore the Christian armor. Nature did much for him. He was cast in a handsome, aye, a distinguished mold. The best blood of Kentucky flowed in his veins. He was a son of the "Bluegrass," and was born in Lexington, February 3, 1837. His father and mother, Charlton and Martha Messick, were devoted members of the Methodist Church, and he grew up with every advantage of Christian nurture. He must have been a clean, high-minded boy, for he carried all through life a singularly clear and transparent countenance. His educational advantages were of the best. He attended Center College, where he was deeply influenced by the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Breckinridge, one of the greatest men of his day. Later he graduated from Transylvania University with first honors, being valedictorian of his class. We do not know the date of his call to preach. He entered the Kentucky Conference in 1858. After serving two or three charges, among them Maysville and Danville, he was transferred to the Louisville Conference and stationed at the old Twelfth Street Church. This was the beginning of a long and blessed ministry in the city of Louisville. As pastor and presiding elder he served Louisville Methodism altogether twenty-six years. This was not continuous service, for there was an interval of fifteen years in which he served St. Louis Methodism as pastor and presiding elder. He gave these two large cities forty-one years of consecrated service. It is impossible to measure the influence of such a life. Well it was for Methodism that it had such a representative—a clean, high-minded, scholarly, thoughtful, accomplished Christian gentleman. His simple, beautiful, noble life was worthy of his great calling and the great Church which he represented. To social qualities of a high order and a pastoral fidelity that grew out of a real love for men and the Christ who died for them, he added pulpit ability of a very high order. A constant student of the best literature, never weary in his explorations of the Word of God, he brought to bear upon the gospel message a simple and winning delivery, a note of sympathy and subdued pathos that never failed to attract and hold men. He was in the truest and best sense a great preacher. And yet eloquent and thoughtful as he was in the pulpit, it is not too much to say that his daily life was his greatest sermon. Men knew that he lived the gospel which he professed. He had a close communion with things eternal, and he labored to bring his life in line with the eternal order. He was the very soul or honor. He abhorred a little or mean thing. He was incapable of deceit or the subtle arts of the Church politician. Sometimes his righteous indignation flamed forth against questionable methods and questionable men. Himself so transparent and noble, it was difficult for him to understand how any brother of Christ could be less so. Had he been less of a Christian and less of a man, perhaps higher honors had awaited him. It is a matter of history that had it not been for serious differences in the Louisville Conference delegation in the General Conference of 1886, he would in all probability have been elected to the episcopacy. No one who knew him can doubt but that his noble qualities of mind and unsullied character would have graced that high office. But as we pause beside his grave, how petty seem all human dignities and the passing prerogatives of place. Into that great white court of eternity where the Son of God reigns in the perfection of moral grandeur, Brinkley Messick has carried his unstained and unpolluted soul. And yet, though gifted beyond the ordinary run of men, he realized that all he possessed he owed to the vast and unmeasured love of Jesus Christ and his atoning grace. This was the secret of his inner life, of the unfailing sympathy, of that gentle and perfect courtesy, of that abiding interest of his kind. Nothing so tests a man as the afternoon of life. To those of us who had the privilege of watching the sun of life go down to the horizon, his life was a benediction. This writer regards it as a providential privilege to have known him in the testing time. Once I served a charge of which, many years before, Dr. Messick had been pastor. As I entered many an old home, I seemed to hear the echo of his footfall, for he had been such a faithful and loving pastor that his memory was still held in affectionate remembrance. Only the last day will reveal how many aching hearts he was privileged to soothe and how many despairing spirits he cheered in this valley of darkness. It was my privilege to follow him as presiding elder of the Louisville District. I can never forget how in every wise way he tried to make my untired feet smooth in their goings. With his wonderful influence in every charge, he could easily have hampered me in every direction. But in so many thoughtful ways he helped me. He would call at times to cheer me, and what a beautiful radiance he would bring into our home! It was a delight to see how universally he was beloved. Nor was this respect and admiration confined to Methodists. He was admired in all communions. Shortly after his death, a Jew said to the writer: "Ah, that Dr. Messick. I tell you, one fine man." He was indeed a fine man—fine in every sensibility, refined and purified until it would have been difficult to find anywhere in the world a nobler gentleman. We miss his gentle, refined presence; we thank God that we were permitted to know him and to have been honored with his friendship. Dr. Messick was a fortunate man in many respects. His home life was one of excellent beauty. His wife, née Eliza Thurston Rogers, to whom he was married in 1862, was a woman of rare personal charm, both in body and in soul. Together they walked for nearly forty-two years, and when the Death Angel came for her, great was his grief and sorrow. From this time until his death he leaned heavily on his children, especially Miss Mattie, who gave him her undivided attention in the last years of his life. Though a great sufferer from some form of heart trouble, he was not confined to his room for very long. He would have a serious spell, suffering great pain, and then would be out again greeting his friends, visiting some lonely heart, radiating the charm of his rare character. But at last the fatal hour drew near. The attacks became more severe. Bravely he bore up, but at last the physical man could bear no more. The weary heart ceased to beat. He passed away, as we have said, on the morning of September 30, 1912. His funeral services were conducted from the Fourth Avenue Methodist Church, which had been his last pastoral charge. The funeral discourse was delivered by his beloved kinsman, Dr. J. C. Morris. The preachers of the Louisville District acted as honorary pallbearers, and the tired body was laid to rest beside that of his wife in beautiful Cave Hill. To the children, Mrs. E. W. Senseney, Miss Mattie Messick, Mrs. Jennie Severson, Mrs. Leona Weller, and Mr. Charlton Messick, we tender our loving sympathy.

"We say good-by, for every road must end,
All pleasant journeys underneath the sun;
Clasp'd hands are severed, hungry lips must part,
The long night comes at close of every day,
And men must slumber when their work is done.
Nay, it is better—light is not light alone:
Were there no shadows, even suns were blind;
Only by parting do men meet again."

—Frank M. Thomas.

THOMAS VANCE JOINER.—Many noble and faithful itinerants have led the hosts of God's army over the battle-grounds of our fair Kentucky soil, fought valiantly against the popular encroachments of worldliness in the Church and sin in high places, raised the standard of personal faith in a personal Christ, and carried to victory the unsullied banner of the Cross; but among them there has not been a more constant and devoted leader than Thomas Vance Joiner. For thirty-two years he has reported ready for action at the sound of the bugle call, and faithful to every commission, has gone to the front with a courage and a zeal that have won for him a name among the elect. A man of deep piety, unwavering faith, unswerving fidelity, large charity, genuine catholicity, he has proclaimed a gospel that carried conviction to the sinner and turned many to righteousness. He had a heart to love a friend and forgive an enemy; well poised, he was a safe counselor. Not a trained collegiate, yet a hard student, a safe theologian, an unctuous and fervent preacher, a devoted pastor, he succeeded in serving well his generation. Because of his poise and conservatism, he was always in demand for service on the Conference committees and boards. His board of stewards in his last pastoral charge, in writing their appreciation of him, have very properly said: "In disposition he was an optimist, always looking at the sunny side of a question. He had caught the vision and inspiration of the 'Higher Life,' and walked and talked with God. Without being a dreamer of dreams, he had made the vision of the invisible world the dominant note of his life. Without pride of opinion, he clung with an unwavering faith to the Man of Galilee, and the God of Revelation. In all ways he was kind and gentle, tender and considerate of the feelings of others, yet firm and consistent in his own views and opinions. With smiling face and cheerful heart, and with full knowledge of the fact, he walked for many months in the shadow of death, only he and his physicians knowing it. In the great age-long, world-wide struggle for his Father's kingdom, he fell full armored on the firing line, and beneath the stainless banner of the Cross. He walked the highways of life a Christian gentleman in all his dealings with his fellow-men. We shall miss his cheery voice and pleasant face, his devoted Christian life and wise counsels in the affairs of the Church." He was the son of Nathan and Nancy Joiner, and was born in Trigg County, Ky., on the 26th day of September, 1854. He was converted in his young manhood under the preaching of the Rev. P. A. Edwards; he was licensed to preach at the Quarterly Conference of the Wallonia Circuit, at Cave Spring Church, March 12, 1881; was ordained deacon by Bishop Wilson on the 20th day of September, 1885. On the first day of September, 1886, he was happily married to Miss Eufaula A. Harris, who proved a most worthy and helpful companion throughout his ministry. They were blessed with seven children, who, with his wife, survive him. They are Eugene Harris, Mary Ray, Margaret Allen, Samuel Edward, Robert Marion, Emma Franklin, and James Clinton—the last a babe one year old. During his ministry, he served the following pastoral charges:

1881-2, the Empire Circuit; 1882-4, Shady Grove Circuit; 1884-6, Livermore Circuit; 1886-9, Calhoun Circuit; 1889-90, Springfield Station; 1890-3, Morganfield Circuit; 1893-5, Corydon Circuit; 1895-7, Hopkinsville Circuit; 1897-1900, Cloverport Station; 1900-4, Marion Station; 1904-6, Russellville Station; 1906-10, Franklin Station; 1910-11, Clifton Station; 1911 to January 22, 1913, he served Hartford Station until he was stricken down with apoplexy. Henceforth he will answer the roll call in the New Jerusalem Conference, whither he has been transferred.—R. W. Browder.

JOSEPHUS STEPHAN.—On February 26, 1860, while George M. and Felicite Stephan were residing in Madison, Ind., there was born to them a son who was christened Josephus by a Catholic priest. A few months later they moved to Baton Rouge, La., where Josephus grew to manhood. The parents were divided in their religious views, the father being a member of the German Reformed Church, and the mother a Catholic. They finally compromised on the Methodist Church, and this put Josephus under Methodist influence. At seventeen years of age, while in Houston, Tex., he gave his heart to the Saviour and joined the Methodist Church. October 7, 1878, he was licensed to preach by Shearn Memorial Quarterly Conference, Houston. In 1883, while attending Vanderbilt University, he was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial, and on October 16, following, he was admitted into the Tennessee Conference at Shelbyville, Tenn. He received local deacon's orders from Bishop Keener at Franklin, Tenn., October 22, 1882, and elder's orders from Bishop McTyeire at Austin, Tex., December 6, 1885. He served a few charges as a supply, and as junior preacher on Stone's River Circuit, Tennessee Conference. November 15, 1883, he was transferred to the St. Louis Conference and assigned to Caledonia charge. A year later he took a transfer to the Texas Conference, where he served the Franklin Circuit one year and then returned to the St. Louis Conference, being assigned to Bonne Terre Circuit, which appointment he filled for three years, adding greatly to the membership of the church as well as to its spiritual tone, and enlarging the building. It stands to-day as he left it, except as to the spire. This splendid work marked him as one of the coming men of the Conference, which expectation his life fully met to the end. While serving the Bonne Terre charge, he became acquainted with Miss Mattie, the second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Keith, whom he married

November 22, 1887. The Doctor was then and until he died the leading layman in the Bonne Terre church. The union was a fortunate one for Brother Stephan, for while she was not prominent in Church affairs as are some preachers' wives, her cool head, wise counsel, and sympathetic nature enabled her to make sure that obstacles were kept out of his way, and that he was always free to expend his energies in loving service for the Church. Brother Stephan served important charges in the Conference, among which, in addition to Bonne Terre, which became an important charge under him, were Farmington, De Soto, Marvin Memorial (which he served almost two quadrenniums), Shaw Avenue, where he built the present beautiful church, and Mount Auburn, where he was serving his second quadrennium when he answered the final roll call, January 29, 1913. It was the sweet privilege of the writer to spend an hour with him the afternoon of the 28th, and thus to be blessed by this interview with one whose life had always been an inspiration and a charm to him, and who now being, as was evident, on the very threshold of the Golden Gate, was radiant with joyful experience in the baptism of dying grace. Like the sweet singer of Israel, he could truly say, "My cup runneth over." And when the appointed hour came the next day for him to move out of this earthly house, he simply closed his eyes and went away so silently that not even his vigilant wife knew he was going. Brother Stephan was never troubled with doubts. With the man of Uz, he could say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth"; and with "that disciple whom Jesus loved," he could declare, "I know that I have passed from death unto life." His conversion was as well known a fact as any other in his life. How could he doubt? Jesus Christ, his Saviour, his real, ever-present personal Friend and Elder Brother, had assured him, on that eventful day of his spiritual birth, that he was the child of the King, and had ever since kept him reminded of that fact by the presence of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. He had that perfect assurance which gave him perfect peace and joy. Nor was this all. He was a loyal subject of the kingdom of God. Eighteen years ago the Conference was held in Jackson by Bishop Galloway. Brother Stephan had served for two years one of the leading churches outside the city of St. Louis, and was expecting to be returned. His presiding elder wanted him for a less important charge, which was burdened with debt and divided into two factions; but the Bishop stoutly resisted the presiding elder's appeals, on the ground that it would be unkind to the preacher. When the Bishop took his seat in the Conference room Monday morning with the appointments in his hand ready to be read, one more appeal was made. "Is your mind perfectly clear on that?" said he. "Clear as the noonday sun," was the reply. "Send him to this place and he will remain four years, harmonize the factions, pay off the debt, and build a new church. If you will make the change, I will tell him before we get to Allenville that you did so under protest, yielding to my request not until the last moment, and then only on my promise to tell him what induced you to make the appointment." The appointment was made; the preacher was grieved. Only a few years before, the church to which he had been appointed had notified him that they did not want him, and he felt sure the one he was leaving did want him. But in spite of all this seeming humiliation, he went promptly to his new charge, remained four years, united the factions, paid off the debt, greatly improved the spirituality of the membership, and left the well-laid groundwork for the new church which his successor soon had under way. Let it be noted that he was a man of positive convictions; but his ideas were clear, and his sense of justice was an enlightened one, hence his spirit of fairness was large. His convictions, therefore, were laid on a broad foundation, and he had a right to the feeling of certainty that he was correct, and to the courage born of such certainty. Strongly, yet lovingly, did he hold on to his convictions, and enforce them. His work among the children was a marvel to most ministers as well as to every one else. They would follow him around like pet lambs. His wise foresight revealed to him the immense value of early training, and his love for them and for his Master gave him the inspiration needed to make one a successful child-leader. If he had never done anything else, his work among the children would make his name great for a generation. The most remarkable characteristic of the man was his lovable spirit. He loved everybody, and so bore himself as to compel all to love him. The intensity of his love was exhibited by his activity in pastoral service. It is doubtful if his equal as a pastor can be found in the Conference. The poor he never neglected. He was indeed a ministering angel to every one about him that needed his services. He was truly great in mind and heart, and will be long mourned by the Church and missed in her councils.—Nelson B. Henry.

JEROME C. DENTON was the son of Wilkins and Sallie Denton, and was born in Maury County, Tenn., March 20, 1851. Being an orphan, he was kept in the common school and then in the Mooney Training School at Franklin, Tenn., by his older brothers. On July 21, 1869, he married Miss Sarah Vancleve, of Calloway County, Ky. Four sons and four daughters were born to them, the following of whom are still living: James W., a farmer, residing near Clay City, Ill.; Lyman C., professor in Sedalia Business College; Mrs. Pearl Bray, of St. Louis; Misses Obera E., teacher, Benton, Mo., and Iona Elizabeth, teacher, Campbell, Mo. Brother Denton was a deputy sheriff at the time of his conversion, which he ever remembered as a definite experience and complete revolution in his life. Soon after this event he felt the call to preach and applied to the Birmingham, Ky., Quarterly Conference for license to preach; but some of the members of that august body thought a deputy sheriff ought to prove himself before being licensed, hence he had to wait until the next Quarterly Conference, June, 1880, when he again applied and his license was granted. He served a number of years as a local preacher, the last two as a supply. At Jackson, Tenn., December 12, 1886, he was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Duncan; and at Pana, Ill., October 12, 1892, he was ordained an elder. He was received on trial in the Illinois Conference in October, 1888, and at once became an influential member, serving some of its important charges. Brother Denton transferred to the St. Louis Conference in 1900, and was assigned to the Lutesville charge to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. L. L. Pinnell, who had transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference. The next year he served Kennett charge, and built the pretty little country church at Sumac, about seven miles north of Kennett. His last year in the itinerancy was crowned with the building of the elegant church at Benton. He was a church-builder. Previous to his transfer to this Conference he built churches at Potter Town, Ky., and at Pulaski, Center, Preston, Patoka, and Number Five (a mining town), in Illinois. In addition to the churches at Sumac and Benton in this Conference, he remodeled the church at Bloomfield, making it practically a new church, and built a temporary church at Walton Road, where he had organized a class, while serving Bridgeton. Not many preachers can have put to their credit the building of ten churches. However, it must not be thought that he was effective only as a builder of houses. He looked after the spiritual interests of his members, and was quite successful as a pastor-evangelist. The minutes of the Conferences show that he always strengthened the membership of his charges. He had a religious experience he could not doubt. It would have been impossible to convince him that the Father had not, for Jesus' sake, forgiven his sins. He had an ever-abiding sense of the presence of the Saviour with him. Hence, he attached little importance to a mere show of hands, or even to the calling of the names on the church register. He wanted conversions that involved a complete surrender of the soul to Jesus Christ as Lord of all. He knew his members, was an enthusiast in every undertaking, consequently he always had a good following of enthusiasts, and was thus enabled to catch the tide at its flood and carry it on to fortune. But he knew the needs of his members also, and ever responded to those needs as best he could. He could not be idle. Wherever there was poverty, or sickness, or sorrow, he could be found. But his home-life must not be passed over, for here he appeared to excellent advantage also. His home was a very happy one. While he was his wife's companion, ever thoughtful, kind, loving, he was the chum of each child. With him the matter of family government was not founded upon the exercise of authority, though he did not hesitate to do this when he felt that duty demanded it. His children were taught to think and act for themselves as far as was consistent with their best interests; but at the same time they were trained to yield gracefully to parental preferences when they were expressed. It is not surprising that they are all Christians. At the last session of Conference, his health having steadily declined for several years, he took a superannuate relation, and moved to his home in Campbell. Bernie Circuit, a small charge contiguous to Campbell, was without a preacher, and his presiding elder put him in charge of it. He entered upon his duties with his old-time zest, but the old-time strength was gone. On Sunday, November 10, 1912, his appointment was at Carman Chapel, a few miles from Campbell. He preached both morning and evening, but at the latter service he had the second slight stroke of paralysis, was unable to kneel in prayer, and though he was able by holding to the pulpit to go through with the service, he required the assistance of his devoted wife and one of the brethren to walk at all. The next morning he said: "Wife, I am going home soon." Thinking he had reference to Campbell, she replied: "Yes, I'll see that you get there soon." "Oh! not to Campbell," said he; "I mean my real home." And then noting her sorrowful expression, he added: "But you can come, too." Through the kindness of the Drs. Brown, he was soon at his Campbell home—the home he had purchased with his earnings for himself and wife while in the flesh; and then on Wednesday, the 13th, at 4 P.M., in spite of those excellent physicians, he went to his "real home"—the one his Elder Brother had purchased for him with his own precious blood. Two days later the funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Campbell by his pastor, Rev. L. D. Nichol, assisted by Revs. R. L. Russell and Arthur Kesler; after which his remains were taken in charge by the members of the Masonic fraternity and gently laid to rest in the cemetery at Campbell according to the beautiful ceremony of that order. He has simply gone home; and some sweet day, not far hence, we can go, too.—Nelson B Henry.

JAMES OGLETHORPE STRALEY was born in Carter County, Ky., March 22, 1864. Unlike the great majority, his stay in the home of his childhood was brief. At the age of six years he set out to make his way in the world, building up his character and carving his fortune single-handed and alone. Only occasionally he found opportunity to get into a schoolroom, and hence he acquired his education largely outside of the text-books, though with an alert and questioning mind he learned much and rapidly while driven about by the changing currents of circumstance. He did manage to spend a year or two at college, the one which he afterwards served with conspicuous success as agent and as trustee, and near which his body now rests in peaceful sleep. Often did he refer to this privilege—the privilege of contact with his teachers and the student body, accounting it as of 'unmeasured value to him in equipping him for life and its varied demands. It was in the year 1884 that he identified himself with the Holston Conference. Two years later Bishop McTyeire ordained him deacon; and two years later still he duly received the orders of the office of elder. His Conference biography is briefly this: Cleveland Circuit, one year; Pigeon River Circuit, one year; Cranberry Mission, one year; Rogersville, one year; Bristol City Mission, two years; Big Stone Gap, four years; Pennington Gap Circuit, one year; Whiteside Street, Chattanooga, three years; Trinity, Chattanooga, four years; Wise, three and one-half years; Emory and Henry College as Financial Agent, one year and a half; Wytheville District, four years; and Tazewell District, one year and one month. He was married to Miss Lula M. Anderson, of Bristol, in 1890. The family circle included seven children, but two of these had gone ahead to give him greeting as he followed. The day preceding his death, he conducted a funeral service in the home of one of his preachers. A babe had been taken from its mother's bosom. Among the comforting words he spoke there was a feeling reference to his two little ones in the bliss of heaven, "who," as he put it, "could not be taken away from him." It seemed to be a matter of unspeakable satisfaction to him that the temptations and griefs of this present and unending sphere could not project their withering blight up into the skies where they lived. A singular circumstance brought him into the Methodist Church. He related this only a few days before his departure. Somewhere back in his early years, homeless and alone, he found a welcome in a Christian home for a night. It was a home with a family altar. A godly, widowed mother gathered her children about it each evening and commended them to the Lord in prayer. On that night she prayed fervently for the little stranger within her gates. It was an abiding balm to his boyish spirit, and long afterwards, when he gave his heart to God by faith, he searched out his friend of his wandering days, learned her Church and put his life at its command. Brother Straley was far from being an ordinary man. The mold in which he was cast is not frequently used by the Architect of our human nature. He was independent, resourceful, persistent, and notably successful. In his thinking, he was incisive. He did not travel the beaten paths in reaching his conclusions, but preferred to push his way through the tangled territory eschewed by minds of less energy and daring. He seemed, however, sure of his ground, and did not hesitate to express himself with boldness and emphasis. In his doing, the same characteristics appeared. He addressed himself promptly to his tasks, and ended them with dispatch. As Emerson says of Napoleon, he would shorten a straight line to get to his object. If the undertaking was a difficult one, it appealed to him with the greater force. As a matter of fact, he seemed inclined to leave the easier things for others to do. It was in that part of the field where the battle was hottest that he was ever to be found, and he never raised the white flag in a contest except when he surrendered his life to Christ. The twenty-eight years of his itinerant life were years of great usefulness. Much of his work will long be visible to the natural eye. Worthy of mention are the seventeen churches and one parsonage that he erected, and the three buildings that adorn the grounds of his alma mater. Much more that he did was of the kind that the eye cannot see. For he literally spent himself in behalf of the tempted, the suffering, the erring, and the bereaved. And he was a cheerful minister to the needs of them all. At eventide of November 6 he ceased at once to labor and to live. He had spent a busy day at his home, and was seemingly in his usual health. Without an instant of warning, the summons came and his earthly labors were done. He died as he lived, bravely and well. The voice of the Lord of the Harvest called at high noon of his life, and he promptly laid down his sickle and obeyed. Often he spoke of the sudden call that would come to him, but never without adding that he was ready to go. And ready he was. Brother of ours, thy going hence leaves us with a compelling sense of loss. We loved thee in life. A very sacred memory of thy comradeship lingers in our hearts now that thou art gone. The wife and children left behind, for whom thou didst nobly live, are remembered with abiding interest in our affection and prayer.—E. E. Wiley.

JAMES WALLACE BELT was born in Charleston, S. C., in 1824. He was converted in early life and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was admitted into the Holston Conference on trial at Asheville, N. C., in 1852, Bishop Capers presiding. According to the minutes as shown in "Holston Methodism," by Dr. R. N. Price, there were a number of breaks in Brother Belt's regular connection with the itinerancy. He took the superannuate relation at Knoxville in 1856. He must have returned to the active list later; for the minutes show that he was located at Morristown in 1862. He was then readmitted at Bristol in 1884, Bishop Keener presiding. He was superannuated at Chattanooga in 1891, and retained that relation until his death. I have not a complete record of the charges served by Brother Belt, but know that among them were Big Stone Gap, Blountville, Cleveland Station, Jonesville, Bluff City, and Bristol Circuit. But there was no break in his work as a preacher. I have in my possession two books of memoranda, covering all of the time that he was located at Speer's Ferry and at Pattonsville, and the record of dates and texts shows that he preached as regularly and extensively as the most diligent traveling minister. The writer has traveled some in the territory in Southwest Virginia where Brother Belt had labored in earlier years, and found that his name was as ointment poured forth in all that region. He was, in his prime, a great revivalist. The older members, the pillars of the Church in many of the strong charges of Lee and Scott Counties, Va., were converted under the ministry of this man of God. Brother Peters, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who assisted the writer in the funeral services of Brother Belt, said that he had heard few preachers in his day approach him in popular appeal, vivid imagination, and genuine evangelical fervor. Brother Belt was married to Miss Sallie Richmond, daughter of the late William Richmond. To them were born seven children. William died after reaching manhood. The surviving children are Mrs. Florence Bolton and Mrs. J. W. Erwin, of Bristol; Gaines Worley, of Morristown, Tenn.; Mrs. D. T. McKee, of Pecos, Tex.; and Mrs. M. L.

Johnson, of New Mexico. Brother Belt spent his declining years with Mrs. Erwin, in Bristol. It was a benediction to visit him. He was ripe for the kingdom, and in all his conversation there was a mellowness and a suggestion of the Beulah Land in which he lived that touched the soul as a spiritual tonic. He often told me that he was "just waiting." He was as humble as a little child. To his latest hour his trust was in the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. On Saturday, October 12, 1912, he passed quietly away, and on Monday, October 14, we accompanied his remains to Speer's Ferry, where, in the home of Mr. J. M. Horton, a lifelong friend, the last rites were performed. Despite the steady downpour of rain, a large concourse of people gathered to do honor to this faithful servant of Christ.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ."

Sleep on quietly; thy crowning and triumphal day is coming. In the clear, serene light of the eternal morning that Scripture shall be fulfilled which declares that "they that be wise shall shine as the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever."—J. A. Baylor.

HENRY CLAY NEAL, one of the sweetest, gentlest, most Christlike, and among the most heroic of spirits, made his advent into this world in Anderson County, Tenn., May 4, 1829, and from his earthly home in Abingdon, Va., took his departure to his home above, May 9, 1913. If there is anything in the "law of heredity," Brother Neal was among the most fortunate of men. The best blood of Tennessee flowed in his veins. His parents were honest, upright people, and deeply pious members of the Methodist Church. A deserving friend remarked that Brother Neal was born into the Methodist Church and never got out of it. He was always good. Both of his brothers, Rev. W. W. Neal and Hon. John R. Neal, were men of high character and distinguished ability. W. W. Neal lived and died an honored member of the Holston Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and John R. Neal represented his Congressional District in the United States Congress with honor and distinguished ability. When Brother Neal was only five years old, his father moved from Anderson to McMinn County, Tenn., where he grew up and received his primary education. Soon after, he matriculated in Emory and Henry College from which he graduated in 1861. He greatly loved and honored his alma mater; but that which revolutionized his whole life occurred when he was about sixteen years old at Cedar Springs Camp Ground, where he was happily converted to God. He felt called of God to proclaim the gospel, and was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Bristol Circuit, at Sprole's Camp Ground, September 2, 1862—Dr. J. S. Kennedy, presiding elder, and his brother, W. W. Neal, secretary. He was admitted on trial into the Holston Conference at Athens, Tenn., October, 1862. He mastered the Conference course as rapidly as the law allowed. Two years later he was ordained deacon at Bristol, Tenn., by Bishop Early; and again two years later he was ordained elder by Bishop McTyeire, at Marion, Va. On October 17, 1871, he was united in marriage to Miss Rachel Mitchell, of Abingdon, Va. This was a union of spirits. Their love and devotion to each other in joy and sorrow, sunshine and shadow, life and death, was most beautiful to behold. Their home was blessed with four children, three of whom preceded the father and mother to the better country. Miss Pearl died only a few weeks ago. John W. Neal, a strong young lawyer, remains to mourn his loss. Brother Neal, both by birth and character, was a gentleman. He was a clear, strong, tender, and spiritual preacher. He filled acceptably every charge to which he was appointed. His social qualities were of the highest order. His presence in the home was like a burst of sunshine. Free from all cant, his religion was always prominent. His personal attachments were strong and constant. He loved and spoke of his personal friends to the last. His friends were legion. The sweetness of his character and his spiritual goodness attracted all who knew him. When he was too feeble to preach, few if any persons died near him that he was not called to take charge of the funeral service or take a prominent part in it. It is a recognized fact that the tenderest heart makes the bravest and most heroic soldier. With all of his sweetness of temper and Christlike spirit, he was among the bravest, most heroic, and most gallant of souls. We glorify the gallant soldier who, under the inspiration of martial music and the inflammatory speeches of gallant officers, with a chance to deal blow for blow and shot for shot, faces death in the desperate chances of the battlefield. He is worthy of all admiration and praise. But what of the man who, without a chance of self-defense, and with no inspiration except a fixed purpose to obey God rather than man, faces danger and death, never faltering for a single moment. Brother Neal was called of God to preach. He felt, "Woe is me if I preach not." Like all members of Methodist Conferences, he had promised to "reverently obey those who had the rule over him." He had been sent to the Maryville and Louisville Circuit; he coolly and deliberately faced a fanatical mob of ignorant whites and insolent negroes, not counting his life dear unto himself so that he might finish his course with joy. The mob only demanded that he desist from preaching. This he would not and did not do, because he regarded it as treason to the Master and a violation of the sacred vows he had taken. Here is heroism of the very highest order. History furnishes us no sublimer specimen of courage and true bravery than that displayed by Henry C. Neal, in the hands of that Blount County mob by which he was abused, cruelly whipped, and left bleeding by the roadside. He was an itinerant Methodist preacher a little over fifty years; all but one year was spent in the Holston Conference. During that time he filled the following charges: Wytheville Circuit, Powell's Valley Circuit and changed to Abingdon Circuit, Rye Cove Circuit, Jonesville Circuit, Rutledge Circuit, Maryville Circuit, Salem (Va.) Station, Cleveland Station, Abingdon Station, Wytheville Station, Jeffersonville Station, Lead Mines Circuit, Loudon Circuit, Evansville Circuit, Dickensonville Circuit, Strawberry Plains Circuit, and Abingdon Circuit. At the end of his quadrennium on the Abingdon Circuit, his name went to the honor roll, where it remained until he was called from labor to rest. We will miss him here, but will find him hereafter. A large concourse of friends, white and black, filled the church where the last sad rites were celebrated, and followed him to the cemetery at Abingdon, where he was laid to rest until the resurrection of the just.—George D. French.

JOSEPH ANDERSON DARR was born in Giles County, Va., July 16, 1847. He attended the public schools, and spent four years at the State Normal in Athens, W. Va. He taught school for several years in Virginia and West Virginia. He joined the Methodist Church at old Wabash Camp Ground in 1866, with Rev. John Chrismond preacher in charge. He was licensed to preach near Athens, W. Va., in 1869, Rev. George Stuart being the presiding elder of what was then the Jeffersonville District. In 1873 he moved to Tennessee, taught school for two years, served charges as a local preacher, and then entered into journalistic work, purchasing the Valley Herald at Jasper, in the Sequatchie Valley. He was married November 7, 1878, at Rising Fawn, Ga., to Miss Rebecca Jane Rogers, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. E. T. Rogers. Of the eight children born to them, six are still living. Brother Darr was admitted on trial into the Holston Conference at Abingdon, Va., in 1887. His first appointment was the Coal City and Aetna Circuit. In 1888 he was sent to Battle Creek Mission; in 1889 to Jasper as junior preacher under W. A. Thomas; in 1890 to Spring City and Evansville Circuit; in 1891 to Whiteside Street Church, where he remained for four years. In 1895 he was placed on the superannuate list, and remained there ten years. In 1905 he was sent to the Orme Circuit, and served it one year, when his health again broke down and he went to the wornout ranks for the remainder of his years. Brother Darr was a man of sunny spirit. His genial disposition made him a happy conversationalist and a delightful companion. He seemed always bubbling over with good cheer. A letter from one of his sons says: "His cheerful disposition held till the last, and was, I firmly believe, the outward flow of the inward peace that passeth understanding." During the few weeks previous to his death he talked often of his going, and declared that he had no fears. His suffering was intense, and he welcomed expected relief. In some notes of instruction to his sons concerning business and the care of his loving wife and daughters, he added: "My peace and triumph are secured by the blood of Christ and the plan of salvation." Surrounded by his devoted family, he passed out of this world in the afternoon of July 6, 1913. His funeral services were conducted from our church in Jasper by the presiding elder of the Chattanooga District, assisted by the pastor, Rev. W. D. Dew, and the preacher in charge of the neighboring circuit, Rev. W. T. Evans. As evening shadows fell he was laid to rest in Pine Grove Cemetery, near Jasper, Tenn. From active and superannuate ranks our itinerants are going home. May we all be ready.—James A. Burrow.

JAMES ROBERT HUNTER was born January 25, 1864, at Ducktown, Polk County, Tenn. He attended the country school of Polk County until the age of eighteen years, at which time he went with an elder brother to the mining section of Colorado to secure money to complete his education, returning after four years. He entered Hiwassee College, and was graduated from this school in two years. He was admitted on trial into the Holston Conference at Morristown, Tenn., in the fall of 1889, and appointed to Cherry Street and Citico Mission, Chattanooga. Here he served two years faithfully and successfully. He then entered Vanderbilt University, where he remained four years, graduating in June, 1895. During these four years of school life he was engaged in missionary work in Nashville, serving three years as chaplain of the penitentiary. August 25, 1895, he was married to Mrs. Ada Woodhead, of Chattanooga. About this time, he spent one year in Vanderbilt Training School at Bridgeport, Ala. In the autumn of 1896 he was appointed principal of Pryor Institute, Jasper, Tenn. Here he did some of the most efficient work of his life. I was intimately associated with him during these four years, and know whereof I affirm. In 1900 he was principal of Bridgeport Public School. In 1901 he was appointed to Northfork Circuit in the Tazewell District. Here he remained two years, and was appointed to Orme, a mining town in Tennessee. In 1905 he was appointed Financial Agent of Emory and Henry College, and afterwards elected to a professorship in that college, where he remained until 1911, at which time he went to New York, where he took a special course in the Columbia Teachers' College, taking the degree of Master of Arts. He was called to Emory and Henry in the summer of 1912 to establish the department of secondary education. Having been born and reared in the mountains of Tennessee, and having come in touch with the need of this Appalachian range, his heart burned to give to every son and daughter of this Anglo-Saxon people the best educational facilities. The Appalachian school improvement foundation was developed and incorporated about two years ago. Southwest Virginia will never be able to measure the influence of Professor J. R. Hunter. In recognition of this work he was called to the Georgia School of Technology in Atlanta. Professor Hunter was not only a diligent student, with a burning desire to help his fellows, but he was a devout man, an honest man, self-sacrificing for the good of others. He was genial, pure in heart, a gentleman to the manner born. To know him was to love him. He had no children, but was very much devoted to his stepchildren, and they to him. Our brother was ready. There is no doubt as to his future well-being. May God bless the dear wife in her loneliness, the brothers and sisters in their great loss, and the good old father, nearly a hundred years old, who will soon go hence, simply worn out in a devotion of love to God and man.—S. S. Catron.

ROBERT A. HUTSELL was born December 16, 1847, at Asheville, N. C., and died September 7, 1913, at his home in Fountain City, Tenn., after an illness of several weeks, in the first year of his superannuate relationship. He was the son of Rev. Eli K. Hutsell, who was one of the most successful revivalists in the history of the Holston Conference. His mother was Mary Ann Wells, a woman, according to Dr. R. N. Price in "Holston Methodism," of vigorous intellect and unusual force of character. The impress of his pious parents was early prominent in his life. At the tender age of ten years he was converted and joined the Methodist Church. He was married in 1878 to Miss Lucile Seabolt. To them were born four children: Robert K., who lives at Fountain City, and who is one of the most successful Sunday-school superintendents in this Conference; Harry, who is a traveling preacher of promise and ability; Mrs. J. L. Bragg, of Chattanooga; and Miss Pearl Hutsell. Brother Hutsell's life was lived above willful fault. His words were chaste, his home life was one of rare charm and beauty. No wife ever had a kinder and tenderer husband; no children ever had a father who combined firmer discipline with more motherlike compassion. He joined the Holston Conference in 1872, and served, among others, the following charges: Dandridge, Decatur, Sweetwater, Spring City, Jasper, King Memorial, Mary Street, La Follette, Welch, Wise, and Straw Plains. In 1889, on account of continued ill health, he located, and for thirteen years he engaged in the practice of medicine at La Follette, Tenn. But during this time he preached with remarkable regularity. Partially regaining his health, he returned to the pastorate in 1897. As a preacher and pastor he served each charge with conspicuous fidelity and success. He never sought preferment, but went cheerfully to whatever field of service he was assigned. As a preacher Brother Hutsell was out of the ordinary. In the early part of his ministry he was especially distinguished for evangelistic power. In this respect the mantle of his sainted father had fallen upon him. In his usual pulpit ministrations his themes had to do with profound Christian truth. As Dr. T. J. Eskridge, presiding elder of the Knoxville District, said of him, in his funeral eulogy, no one ever heard him announce from the pulpit a subject in the least savoring of the sensational, or in anywise calculated to attract the merely curious. He believed that the simple gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and that when presented it would attract men and women to Christ as nothing else. His mind dwelt upon the noblest themes of Christian theology. His reasoning was not only profound, but also as clear as the dewdrop. Measured by the standard of a preacher's success—of good accomplished—he was a great preacher; and had he been blessed with robust health, he would have risen to the front rank of pulpit masters. To an eminent degree he had the graces of an orator. He had the loftiest sentiments, and expressed them with a choice diction and fluency rarely surpassed. "His sermons," said one who lately wrote of him, "would have delighted any audience in the English-speaking world, however learned and refined, just as they thrilled and electrified those who were fortunate enough to hear him." It was easy for him to master and hold his congregations. In unction, in depth of earnestness, in triumphant faith, his prayers were powerful. They were effective in convicting sinners and strengthening saints. Of all the men I have ever heard pray, I think he could pray most effectually. He talked with God as a friend talks with friend. But his unusual power in public prayer grew directly out of the fact that he lived in the sphere of secret prayer. He relied implicitly upon God's promises. There was another trait in Brother Hutsell's character which deeply impressed all who knew him. It was a perpetual calm that hovered over his spirit. He had tried and found true one of the most precious promises to the child of God, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." The things and circumstances which made turbulent the ordinary soul never assailed him. I never knew a man who came nearer living out the sublime figure with which Goldsmith describes the character of the preacher of the "Deserted Village":

"Like some tall cliff that lifts its awful form, Swells above the vale and midway leaves the storm;
Though round its base the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

Soldier of Christ, well done! Thou hast fought bravely the battle of life; thou hast finished thy course with joy, and now a crown of righteousness is thine! May those who loved him mourn not, but look at and address him in the words of the poet:

"Thy day has come, not gone;
Thy sun has risen, not set;
Thy life is now beyond
The reach of death or change,
Not ended—but begun."

O noble, noble soul! O gentle, gentle heart! Hail, and farewell!—French Wampler.

GERVASE BROADNAX McPEAK, son of John and Nancy McPeak, was born May 17, 1837, in Crittenden County, Ark., eleven miles from Memphis, Tenn., and grew up there. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Jane Powell, of Fayette County, Tenn., January 21, 1858. She died in February, 1864, in Memphis, Tenn., and is buried there. He came to Middle Tennessee in May, 1864, and was married to Miss Lucy Ann Lannom, of Wilson County, in October, 1867. He professed religion at Fellowship Baptist Church, Rutherford County, in August, 1868; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in September, 1868; was licensed to preach September 30, 1871; was local till October, 1878, when he was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference; was ordained deacon in 1875 by Bishop Wightman, and elder in 1879 by Bishops Paine and Doggett. He served charges as follows: Short Mountain and Smithville, 1878-79; Short Mountain, 1879-80; Cainsville, 1880-82; was unavoidably thrown out of work in 1882-83; Hickory Creek, 1883-87; Carthage, 1887-91; Alexandria and Liberty, 1891-92; Alexandria and Carthage, 1892-93; Hartsville, 1893-96; Liberty, 1896-97; College Grove, 1897-99; Fayetteville Circuit, 1899-1900; Christiana, 1900-02; Woodbury, 1902-04; Beech Grove and Olivet, 1904-05; October, 1905, superannuate. Few, if any, truer Christians ever held membership in the Tennessee Conference. A sincere seeker after truth and right, he was firm in his convictions and adherence to duty. There was nothing irksome to him in the Christian life or ministry. He loved to preach, and could be depended on to be in his pulpit at the appointed time well prepared with a solid, earnest gospel sermon. He loved to visit his flock. He was the first to report the Hickory Creek Circuit in full on assessments. His ambition was to do the best things in the best way. His clean speech and actions at all times betokened a clean heart and shone in his open, beaming countenance, helping to give, along with the Holy Spirit's power, that noble bearing that comes of conscious rectitude and erectness of character. One who knew well his inner life writes: "He was very conscientious. It always nained him when he heard of any one doing wrong or causing trouble in any way. A favorite saying with him was: 'The greatest troubles in this world could be avoided if every one would do right.'" His daughter paid this tribute: "He was a good father. If we fail to live right, it will not be any fault of his example or teaching, for he tried to train us right." He truly loved his family and laid them with himself at the Master's feet. It was pleasant to be in his home. His Christian wife and good-hearted children were glad to be kind to any one, especially a minister of Jesus. As a friend he was as true as steel. He was a Confederate soldier, a Mason, and was buried with Masonic honors. Heart trouble physically bowed the strong man toward the last. The friendly cane came to his aid. In his shut-in days he read his Bible, Church papers, and daily papers, was interested in life, and most of the time was cheerful. Sunday, January 12, 1913, brought a sudden attack. Medical and loving family attention availed not. Without a sigh or struggle the spirit fled to know in beatific vision the fullness of "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." He leaves, besides a devoted wife and daughter, Miss Laura, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., two sons (C. B. McPeak, Fort Worth, Tex., and Oscar McPeak, Birmingham, Ala.) and two daughters (Mrs. Mabel Newsom, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mrs. May McWilliams, Huntsville, Ala.). This brief review comprises a few of the flowers that should be kept blooming for him for earth and heaven. Their fragrance will linger in the life of each one who knew him fully and judged him correctly. Among God's nobility in Evergreen Cemetery, Murfreesboro, Tenn., the body of this devoted husband and father, true soldier of his country and of the cross, faithful friend, rests, while his happy spirit lives in heaven.—T. L. Moody.

THOMAS FOUNTAIN KELLUM, son of Rev. John L. and Fannie Hunt Kellum, was born February 15, 1877; and died January 31, 1913. When he was a child he heard the call of God, gave himself to the service of the Lord, and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Moved by the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel, he began to prepare himself for the great work, and was licensed in 1899. In the year 1900 he was sent as a supply to the Overton Mission, Lebanon District. At Pulaski in 1901 he was received on trial into the Tennessee Conference and returned to the Overton Mission. Clifton and Duncan, Savannah District, next became his field of labor. After three years he was appointed preacher in charge at Lawrenceburg, Savannah District, and for three years went in and out before a people that he loved. Elkton and Bee Springs, Columbia District, had him as their pastor for four years. The last charge he served was Lynnville and Taylor's, Columbia District. He was ordained deacon at Murfreesboro on October 1, 1903, and elder on October 9, 1906, at Lebanon. On February 14, 1903, he was married to Miss Amelia Hatcher. Three bright little boys, with their mother, mourn the loss of a good father and a devoted husband. Thomas F. Kellum walked on the side of life where the sun shines. To every hand extended there was offered a grasp that was warm; for every ear that listened there was a cheerful word; before every open eye there was a friendly smile. Friends were drawn to him by the brightness of his disposition, and those inclined to look on the dark side were helped to see the error of their way. Brother Kellum was consecrated to the work of the ministry. He was devoted to his task. In his life was that which wins success. Step by step he moved in the estimation of the Conference till he gained for himself a position to be envied by his fellows. His father looked with laudable pride on the progress of his son. Having been deprived of early opportunities himself, he had tried to give them to his boy; and when he was assured that they had not been abused, there was joy in his thankful heart. At Lynnville and Taylor's no preacher in charge had ever made a better beginning than Brother Kellum. Only a few times was he permitted to preach to those who were being drawn to him by the cords of his personality. Only for a limited time were the people allowed to express their love for their appreciated pastor. Few were the visits he could make to open doors and, departing, leave benedictions for the families. Only a few times did he point to Christ the irreligious ones whom he met upon the street or in homes where he had gone to bless. Lynnville and Taylor's loved him. He loved them and appreciated their kindness to him and to his family. Having preached Jesus and the resurrection when he was well, when he was strong, God's servant at the gate of death was not alone. He told his faithful wife of his trust in God, and said that all was right if he had to die. The end came. Our good brother will answer no more at the calling of the Conference roll. At the request of his family the funeral service was conducted in the Methodist church at Lynnville, Tenn., by the writer, assisted by the following brethren: Rev. J. W. Hensley, Rev. J. K. Lee, Rev. T. C. Ragsdale, Rev. T. H. Hinson, Rev. R. J. Craig, and Dr. J. H. Stevenson. Other members of the Tennessee Conference were at the funeral. Many friends met at the cemetery at Pulaski and paid a last tribute to the servant of God.—W. V. Jarratt.

JEROME WINFORD.—The labors of Jerome Winford ended at Prospect, Tenn., May 14, 1913. He was born in Wilson County, Tenn., June 22, 1855. At the tender age of ten years he professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. When convinced that it was his duty to preach the word of God, he was given license by the Church, and very soon was found in the field of the public ministry. His early opportunities had been good, hence he was not handicapped, as many are, in the beginning of his work. God endowed his servant with a logical mind, and the talent was not buried. The ability to grasp a subject of thought was his to an extent beyond that which is usual. His appearance before a congregation meant preparation, and the people whom he served could always expect something on which their minds and hearts could feed. In him there was an earnestness that carried conviction to the willing hearer. Independence, sincerity, and a devotion to that which is just were among the leading characteristics of Brother Winford. He married Miss Louise Watkins, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. In October, 1891, he joined the Tennessee Conference. It is more than likely that he had not one day of perfect health since that time. Suffering was a part of his life. His poor hands trembled while he gave bread to those that were hungry. The wind always blew at the door of his tent. Pain made heavy lines on his face. The fingers of sorrow struck telling blows on the strings of his harp. His love for the ministry and his devotion to the Church of his choice enabled him to persevere as long as it was possible for him to go, and to preach as long as he could stand. Prospect and Pleasant Hill, Columbia District, Tennessee Conference, was his last charge. He knocked at the door of the heart of the people, and became a welcome guest. The bell that called the congregation to the house of God on the evening of the funeral echoed among the neighboring hills and told with pealing notes of the love they had for him. A flock without a shepherd met to think in unison of him who would lead them in and out no more. He had watched for the enemy, and in love had given the alarm. Tears came from their hearts when they recalled what he in pain had done for them. Sorrow took hold of them when they realized that his lips, so used to bringing words, were closed in death, and that the light of his eyes had shone on them for the last time. I was beside Brother Winford when the sun was going down. These were his words: "Into the hands of the Lord I commend myself." Again he said: "And we shall be more like him." His wife and two children had gone on before him. Two daughters, Mecca and Mrs. James A. McGregor, of Lynnville, Tenn., are the remaining members of his family. Rev. J. I. Stockton, of the Missionary Baptist Church, Revs. John L. Kellum, W. H. Baird, and myself conducted the funeral. The body was carried to Lebanon. Rev. W. T. Haggard spoke in loving terms of his departed friend, and beautiful flowers covered another preacher's grave.—R. J. Craig.

W. T. HART was received on trial into the Tennessee Conference at Columbia, Tenn., in 1885. He had already been for some years a useful local preacher. The session of the Tennessee Conference of 1885 was presided over by Bishop Wilson, who in 1882 had been promoted from the secretaryship of the Board of Missions to the chief superintendency of the Church. At Bishop Wilson's request Bishop McTyeire was present to add his wisdom and intimate acquaintance with the Tennessee Conference to the knowledge of the Senior Bishop among the four younger members of the Episcopal College. We have now passed on to a period twenty-eight years later in the history of the Church, where we can see clearly the new epoch upon which the Church was entering. Brother Hart brought to the duties and opportunities of the itinerant life a brave and willing spirit, although to him had been denied the mental discipline which he would gladly have undergone, and which would perhaps have given him the self-control that might have kept burning the light of reason amid the difficulties and sorrows in which, a score of years later, it suffered a sad and final eclipse. There were, however, some sixteen or eighteen years of devoted and fruitful service, in which were born into the Church under his ministry not a few precious spirits who shall shine as stars of glory in his crown of rejoicing in the eternal kingdom of our Lord. A brother who knew him well writes: "W. T. Hart was a man of independent thought and action. Sometimes this aggressiveness provoked opposition, but he never retreated in the face of opposing forces. One of his sons is a young man of promise, a member of our Church at Erin, and connected with a Houston County paper. Our hearts were saddened because of his mental affliction, which finally not only stopped his ministerial work, but forced his retreat to the home provided for such unfortunates, from which we believe he ascended to the Father's house." Naturally it occurred with him, as with many others in every walk of life, that growing eccentricities due to increasing maladjustment of intellectual balance were attributed to lack of moral integrity by some, and subjected him to cruel misapprehension, until the advance of his malady revealed the truth. After he was finally adjudged insane, there still burned the flame of loyalty to our Lord, although distorted by those delusions common to our unhappy brethren of his class. Auguste Comte, the great French mathematician and founder of Positivism, a religion containing the denial of personal immortality and the glorification of the faith that there is no God, barring an imaginary grand entrée, the sum of the influence of vanished generations, had himself suffered a "mental crisis," as the French euphemism puts it, to which we may attribute many of his religious and moral vagaries. Sir Isaac Newton was at one time similarly afflicted after a period of protracted and misdirected study of the book of Revelation. And within the bounds of our own Conference there lived that saintly man whom Asbur would have chosen as his colleague and successor, the latter years of whose life were passed in dolorous mental eclipse. For nearly two years I was Brother Hart's pastor, and preached to him weekly whenever his condition rendered it possible for him to attend services. If I failed to see him among the hundreds of patients and others filling the chapel, he was sure to reveal his presence by some ejaculation of devout rejoicing. Gradually, however, the cerebral disintegration rendered more and more lamentable and pronounced the dethronement of reason, and less and less frequent the times when it was possible for him to attend religious services. In the early days of last July there came upon Middle Tennessee a sweltering period of extremely high temperature that quite overcame him, and our dear brother was one of that numerous company that perished from overheat. To him death meant the release of the spirit from its thralldom for expression to the earthly mechanism of nerves and muscles, from its subordination to the folliations of the gray matter of the brain; and meant its translation into the Kingdom of Life not far from us, where essential personality comes finally into the possession of itself and of that which is its own. We shall look no more into his rugged and honest face, nor shall I hear again his pathetic appeal for that which it was impossible to grant him. But, O weary spirit, amidst the fogs and delusions that earthly conditions poured upon thee, I thank God through our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom thou didst trust, that thou art escaped into the brightness of the eternal day. A brief summary of Brother Hart's life is as follows: W. T. Hart was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., October 7, 1847. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1858. He was licensed to preach by T. L. Moody in 1875, and was ordained a deacon by Bishop McTyeire in 1884. He joined the Tennessee Conference in 1885 and served the following charges: Liberty Circuit, Dickson District, one year; Stewart Circuit, three years; Edgewood Circuit, one year; Mount Auburn, one year; Kedron Circuit, Franklin District, two years; Standing Rock Circuit, two years; Goodrich, two years; Hustburg, three years; Charlotte, one year; Fairfield Circuit, in the East Nashville District, one year; Greeneville and Martin Mission, one year. In 1903 he took a supernumerary relation, and continued thus for two years. In 1905 he was put on the roll of honor, and continued there till his death.—John J. Ransom.

JOHN OWEN BLANTON, son of Richard and Sarah Campbell Blanton, was born in Coffee County, Tenn., December 10, 1848; and was converted and joined the Church in the summer of 1868. He was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference October 4-9, 1871, and served charges as follows: Nolensville Circuit, 1871; Union (now Hermitage), 1872; Linden, 1873; Lawrenceburg, 1874; Bethlehem and Johnson Station, 1875; Ebenezer and Liberty, 1876; supernumerary, 1877; Sunday School Agent, 1878; supernumerary, 1879; Pisgah Circuit, 1880-81; Woodbury, 1882-83; Booneville, 1884; Manchester, 1885-88; Hillsboro, 1889-90; Sparta Station, 1891; Shelbyville Circuit, 1892-93; Tracy City, 1894-95; Decherd Mission, 1896-98; Normandy Mission, 1899-1900; Duck River, 1901-02; Chaplain to State Prison, 1903-04; Normandy Mission, 1905; superannuated, 1906. Our acquaintance began in the late sixties at a revival at Neel Chapel, near Tullahoma, Tenn., in which Dr. John B. McFerrin had been preaching. This early acquaintance deepened through various relations these forty-five years. He was first married to Miss Leonora Saudek, daughter of Dr. Joseph Saudek, near Nashville, Tenn. She died July 4, 1880. Of this union were born two daughters—Willie, now Mrs. Robert W. Neel, Tullahoma, Tenn., and Miss Nora C. Blanton, near Nashville, Tenn., under whose kind care he closed his earthly life in the presence of all the children. On November 29, 1881, Brother Blanton was married to Mrs. Mary Bearden in the vicinity of the home of her father, Nimrod Burrow, near Shelbyville, Tenn. She died August 4, 1902. We laid her body tenderly to rest at old Pisgah, Bedford County, Tenn., where the writer had seen her happily converted in her girlhood, and near which place the ceremony which united her and Brother Blanton in marriage was pronounced. During the eleven years since her death Brother Blanton adjusted himself as best he could to life, his children, and the Church, going on in the strength and good cheer of that hope "which we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil; whither the forerunner is for us entered." (Heb. vi. 19, 20.) Of this last marriage were two daughters—Pearl, now Mrs. A. T. Peers, of New York City, and Josephine, now Mrs. W. E. Sweeny, of Jacksonville, Fla. During the interval between his conversion and his itinerancy Brother Blanton attended Cumberland University (Vanderbilt University not being in existence), studying to fit himself to be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" (2 Tim. ii. 15) in that gospel to the hopes and joys of which he clung through life's lights and shadows, unfaltering to the end. He had literary taste. A Hebrew Bible and lexicon which he used at Lebanon are in the writer's library. He was well informed, and was a reader to the last. He delighted in the summer institutes at Vanderbilt University. He was quiet and unobtrusive, pleasing in manner in and out of the pulpit, and ready in conversation. There was nothing morose or censorious about him. He carried a brother's heart full of love for humanity and particularly for a friend, proving himself such as David found in Jonathan, abiding through any ordeal. For his sake and the Lord he loved, his family should have a large place in the hearts of his brethren of the Tennessee Conference and all lovers of Jesus and humanity. His eye of faith was clear. The visible and the invisible blended into a great reality in his personal experience. All his arrangements were made to dwell on whichever side of the river the Lord should say. Our Tennessee Conference never had a more loyal son in the gospel up to the time he breathed his last, on Sunday, July 30, 1913, at 9 P.M. His devoted Christian life has come our way and gone. As the sun, rising in the east, goes surely to the western passing, so he, on that "path . . . that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. iv. 18), went to rest. We expect him to reappear in the eternal day. Till our time shall come, let us cherish his memory, engirdling in loving embrace his life of faith and hope and love, arranging to overtake him. Meanwhile, under the words of our Lord, "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honor" (John xii. 26), we shall be glad in the thought that he shares immortal honors.—T. L. Moody.

GEORGE WASHINGTON TAYLOR, the subject of this memoir, the son of William Martin and Dyda Myra Taylor, was born on October 8, 1854, in Storey County, Nev. His parents removed with him to Tennessee when he was quite young, and he grew up under the clear blue sky and among the mountains and streams of this great old State. When twenty years of age he was happily converted, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on August 22, 1874. He was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Annual Conference on October 19, 1894, at Franklin, Tenn. Four other members of his class survive him in the Conference. He served the following charges as a supply before he was received on trial: Milton and Pisgah Circuits, two years; Sparta Circuit, one year. After he was received on trial he served the following charges: Sparta Circuit, 1894-96; Sugar Creek Mission, 1896-97; Waynesboro Circuit, 1897-98; Linden and Beardstown Circuit, 1898-1901; West Point Circuit, 1901-03; Fairfield Circuit, 1903-05; Wesley Circuit, 1905-07; Farmington Circuit, 1907-09; Marble Plains Circuit, 1909-11; Huntland Circuit, 1911-12; Bethel Circuit, 1912-13. During the last Conference at Nashville, Tenn., what had been thought was an ulcer in his mouth began to show signs of malignancy. In great anxiety we carried him to specialist after specialist, and faithfully tried the radium, X-ray, and serum treatments. He was sent by his brethren to an eminent specialist at Evansville, Ind.; but nothing that was tried seemed to do him any good whatever. He rapidly grew worse, his severe sufferings increased, until he was forced to give up his work, Bethel Circuit, in March of this year. Everything that loving family, faithful friends, and devoted people could do was done, but no permanent relief was found. His decline from the day he gave up his work to the date of his death was rapid, and he peacefully passed away at the parsonage at Bethel, Tenn., on August 19, 1913. The writer had the honor of being Brother Taylor's presiding elder for two and a half years while he was pastor of the Marble Plains Circuit and the Huntland Circuit. He here-with testifies to his profound, unfeigned faith, his solid piety, his loyalty to the Church, and his fine pastoral and pulpit ability. He was always a welcome guest in the home, being an entertaining and instructive talker. He read much and sought to keep abreast of the day. As an expounder of scriptural truth he was very strong and clear. His statements and propositions fell from his lips like the blows of a sledge-hammer, and he always said something that one could carry away with him and remember. A lady of his congregation remarked to me once: "I do not need the back of the pew to rest me while Brother Taylor preaches." As an old rifleman would say, "He always drove center" in his sermons and administration. He never sought the popular side, nor cared much for human applause. He did what he thought was right in the long run, whether it was popular or not, or however much of praise or blame it brought him. From several successful efforts he gained the reputation of being a church and parsonage builder. Every charge he served can show some substantial evidence of his skill and faithfulness along this line. If he found that a church of which he was pastor was built in the wrong place, and that future success depended on its being removed to a better or more central place, he moved it, suffering without complaint the abuse and malice which that sort of administration always brings down on a pastor's head. No dilapidated churches or parsonages were ever left behind him. They were always repaired, made more convenient and beautiful. Brother Taylor never ate idle bread. He simply could not be still. Because of his nervous and energetic temperament, he had to stir around, find something useful to do, and then throw the whole of his being into it. Nor could he always be content with the everyday humdrum of little customary duties. He worked at the mill of the eternal commonplace, but his eye soon sought out something to do that no one thought of doing before. By his efforts and skill alone he gave the great scope of wild, rough Marble Plains country a fine telephone system that binds it together to-day with silken cords of neighborliness. He gave Huntland its charter and helped it greatly in the organization and success of its high school. He was largely instrumental in bringing about its condition of law enforcement. He cheered on the young and urged them to make something of themselves. He blessed and comforted the aged and pointed them to the skies. He called the outbreking sinners to repentance in stentorian tones, and they heard him and came. He improved everything he ever touched and left no evil thing behind. Upon his good name there is no reproach of debt, nor stain of sin. He desired to live five years longer; for, said he, "I think I can do so much good now." When he saw that the end had indeed come, he submitted to the will of his heavenly Father, set his house in order, and began to prepare for the last sad scene. With an unfaltering faith and great composure, he calmly prepared to go. He indicated his desire for this writer to prepare his memoir, and named others for the duties they were to perform. His sufferings were great, intense; but they dampened not his joy, nor frightened him from his sure resting place. At noon on Tuesday, August 19, 1913, he peacefully fell on sleep in the arms of his Saviour and entered into the itinerant's sweet home of final rest. His funeral occurred the next day, being conducted by his presiding elder, Rev.

R. J. Craig, assisted by Revs. T. C. Ragsdale, J. K. Lee, D. T. Reed, and W. L. Nelson. His body sleeps in the Bethel cemetery, and there amid his closing labors awaits the call to life again. Peace to the ashes of my brave, faithful, and devoted friend!—William H. Johnston.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? T. H. B. Anderson (see p. 39), W. A. Booher. 2.

THOMAS H. B. ANDERSON was born in Missouri, May 26, 1841, and died in the city of Salinas, Cal., November 30, 1912, aged seventy-one years, six months, and four days. His parents moved from Missouri to California in 1860, and settled on Dry Creek, Butte County. He was educated in the public schools of his native State. Early in life he gave his heart to God and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He brought his church letter with him and gave it to Rev. B. H. Russell, preacher in charge of Chico Circuit, in August, 1861. At a Quarterly Conference held in his own father's house in June, 1862, he was licensed to preach, and immediately began to exercise his gifts as a preacher. He was admitted on trial into the Pacific Conference in October, 1862. His first circuit was Point Arena, up among the redwoods of Mendocina County. He preached in halls, schoolhouses, and in rough boarding-houses in lumber camps. He won all hearts; and so popular did he become, that his friends persuaded him to run for the State Legislature. He was defeated by a small majority. Young Anderson came to Conference, confessed his error in dabbling in politics, was continued on trial, and sent to Vacaville Circuit. Vacaville was then the seat of the Pacific Methodist College. He preached to faculty and students of the college, and took up a special course of study which would better fit him for the work of the ministry. On April 27, 1867, in Marysville, Cal., he was married to Miss Sallie J. Brooks. For forty-one years they walked life's pathway together. Nine children were born to them; three died in infancy, five are still living—two sons and three daughters. The devoted wife and mother died in Gallatin, Mo., August 5, 1908. Dr. Anderson was a man endowed with superior intellectual powers, with fluent speech, indomitable purpose, and tireless energy. He was a great student, and explored the wide fields of history, science, philosophy, and theology. He gave himself fully to the work of the ministry. With Paul he said, "This one thing I do." His abilities were recognized, and he soon took first rank among his brethren. For years, in his prime, he stood preëminent among the great divines and pulpit orators of California. He filled the first pulpits in the Pacific Conference—Colusa, Santa Rosa, Sacramento, Fresno, Oakland, and San Francisco. He served the Church for years as presiding elder. He was three times elected a delegate to the General Conference, and did able service in the law-making body of the Church. He wielded a facile pen, and wrote extensively for the press. At the time of his death, at the unanimous request of the Pacific Conference, he was engaged in writing the history of the pioneers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the Pacific Coast. Although he did not live to complete the work, he has left, in his manuscript, a valuable contribution to the history of Methodism in the Far West. But the pulpit was the throne of his power. He always preached well, but on revival occasions and at our great camp meetings in the early days, the writer has heard him, when under the afflatus of the Holy Spirit, his soul on fire with some transcendent truth of the gospel, with the tongue of a Whitefield he moved men like trees swept by a mighty wind. He wrought from young manhood till his head was white as the snow-crowned summit of Mount Shasta. For more than thirty years he went forth from the Sierras to the sea preaching a great gospel and living a great life. He gave the prime labors of his life to the western slope of our great continent. No man has wrought more grandly or heroically in helping to sow in the rich soil of California the seeds of a true and exalted Christian civilization. A great multitude of souls were helped and blessed and many turned to righteousness by his ministry. And so the life of this great, true man of God has gone down into the living, throbbing life of California; and, although he has been called from labor to rest, this life will flow on in ever-widening streams an uplifting, refreshing force in society as long as the mighty waves of the Pacific shall beat upon her rock-bound shores. Thirteen years of the afternoon of his life, from the fall of 1897 to 1910, he was an active member of the Missouri Conference, serving the churches of Richmond, Moberly, Shelbina, Gallatin, and Excelsior Springs. His ministry was greatly blessed, not only on these charges, but in extensive evangelistic labors among his brethren. Hundreds were saved and added to the Church. His health gave way under the rigorous winters of Missouri and advancing age, and in the fall of 1910 he took a superannuate relation and returned to the mild climate of California to spend the evening of his life with his children and old friends. In October, 1911, he attended the Pacific Conference at Sacramento, and was sent to Salinas as supply. Immediately after the adjournment of the Conference, October 23, 1911, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Curtis, of Sacramento. For fourteen months he labored with great acceptability at Salinas, and the church took on new life under his faithful ministry. During these few months he touched the life of that city as few had ever done, not only by preaching a great gospel, but by his sympathetic spirit. All were drawn to him and the Church, and were being led to Christ. But, in the midst of this blessed work, with his armor on, on the firing line he fell. That great light went out on earth to shine forever in heaven. "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen in Israel to-day?" With sad hearts and tear-dimmed eyes we follow his ascending form, crying: "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof!" Many were at the gates to meet him and to greet him and to bid him a royal welcome into the companionship of the skies. Earth is poorer and heaven is richer at his going. His body lies in the cemetery at Sacramento, Cal.

"Farewell, farewell, but not forever; We'll meet again to part, no never."

—Joseph Emery.

WILLIAM ALPHEUS BOOHER, son of David and S. H. Booher, was born in Trenton, Grundy County, Mo., October 11, 1859. He came to California with his parents in 1864, and grew to manhood in this State. He attended the Pacific Methodist College, and joined the Pacific Conference in 1882. He served it well up to the time he passed away at Galt, Cal., on March 3, 1913. These are the facts and dates that tell briefly of his life and work. I came to know Brother Booher in 1898, when he was pastor at Mountain View and I was stationed at San Jose, our first meeting having been at the Monday morning gathering of the Ministerial Union. He went home with me for lunch, and we soon found that our minds and hearts ran in the same general current of thinking and feeling. During those years of our neighborhood there, and the four years in which we were similarly located in Colusa County, we came to know and love each other well. We worked and sang and prayed together in revival meetings, in Sunday-school conventions, and in moral reform work; and in all of these departments of Christian service he was always faithful, strong, and effective, and at times was indeed eloquent and inspiring. His courage to meet and drive from the field the foes of the kingdom, and his optimistic faith, were always a blessing to his friends. Never robust in body, he labored under a disability, and we who knew him closely were not greatly surprised when he began to fail in health and to show that he could not long carry on the work he so much delighted to do. In spite of failing strength, he went to his appointment from the last Conference, but could not long continue to meet the demands of the pastorate. I had seen him in January, and, knowing his condition, was not greatly surprised when his dear companion wired me that he had passed away. He wanted to live if it were God's will; and yet he was able to say, "Not my will, but thine be done." After a funeral service at Galt, conducted by the writer, assisted by Brothers Batchelor and Brown, of our Church, and participated in by a deputation of ministers from the County Ministerial Union, the body was taken to Mountain View. There it was tenderly laid away by the hands of brethren of the Conference, in the presence of a large concourse of old-time friends and parishioners. He leaves to mourn him an aged father and mother, two brothers and two sisters, a devoted wife and five beautiful and faithful little daughters. Blessings on them all! He has gone away, but not far. He has "slipped away," but "we know where to find him." He has been lifted out of our ranks, my brethren, into the higher ranks. The choir at his funeral fittingly sang, "Servant of God, well done." California and the Pacific Conference are richer because he lived and served here, and we who knew him well and loved him most will miss him, and are sad at Conference time without him. But we are glad to have known and loved him, and shall see him again some day in "the city four-square," whose "streets are of gold."

—J. E. Squires.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? G. W. White, H. J. Holland. 2.

G. W. WHITE was born in Owen County, Indiana, November 19, 1848, and died at Mineral Wells, Texas, December 1, 1912. He was converted before he was ten years old, and this event was so marked in his life as never to leave any doubt of its reality. He received a common-school education, and later attended Depaw University. He was a teacher until 1876, when he was granted license to preach. Two years later, he was admitted on trial into the South Kansas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church. Sunday, October 22, 1876, he was happily married to Miss Martha Farley. Three children blessed this union, two sons and one daughter. One son died when sixteen months old, and the daughter died at the age of eleven years; his son, Fred, lived to minister tenderly to his father when he came to the crossing of the river. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Foster in 1880, and elder by Bishop Warren in 1882. He served ten years in the above Conference, and then was forced by the failing health of his wife and daughter to seek a milder climate. He was transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference, but this move proved more injurious than helpful; so under urgent advice of his physician he transferred to Texas, and served three years in the Austin Conference. He soon decided that there was no room for two Methodisms side by side, and at the session of the Northwest Texas Conference, in Waco, 1892, he was received as an elder into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He served the following charges: Crawford and McGregor, two years; Seventh Street, Temple, one year; Italy and Frost, one year; Graham, two years; Mineral Wells, one year; Rogers, two years; Meridian, two years; Ballinger, one year; Covington, one year. Here his wife suffered a nervous breakdown, and he was again transferred to a lower altitude. In the West Texas Conference he served Ganado and Louise one year, and was assigned to Victoria, where, during his second year, he was stricken with typhoid fever. He made a brave fight for thirteen weeks, and finally won the battle; but the disease left him so depleted in strength as to be an easy prey to la grippe, which, with pneumonia complications, ended his earthly career. His last sermon was delivered here last fall; text, "Abraham offered his son Isaac," etc. Brother White was an all-round, faithful servant of the Church; no interest ever suffered in his hands. He was loved and honored by this charge (Victoria) and community, and was a great help to his pastor, heartily coöperating with him in all things. Thirty-two years of faithful, unbroken service to the Church, and now he is reaping the reward of his life-service, and, with his children and loved ones gone before, is enjoying companionship with the Master and awaiting the coming of his wife and son and brother and sister over there.

H. J. HOLLAND was born near Huntsville, Arkansas, February 8, 1857, the son of Methodist parents. He was converted in 1885, at the age of twenty-eight, and the following year united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In 1890 he was licensed to preach in that Church, and continued in its ministry until the union of his Church with the Northern Presbyterian Church. Finding himself out of accord with the doctrines and usages of that Church, he applied for admission to the Methodist ministry, and was received into the West Texas Conference in 1908 and appointed to Garden City and Stiles. This charge he served two years. He was then appointed to Eldorado, and after serving that charge six months, his health failed and he gave up the work. He took a superannuate relation a year ago, and died in Temple, Tex., during the present year. Brother Holland's brief ministry among us was a fruitful one. During his pastorate many were added to the Church, and a church was built and a parsonage improved. He has entered into his reward, and his works do follow him.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except A. B. Chapman, who surrendered his credentials and withdrew from the ministry and membership of the Church.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? L. J. Hedgpeth. 1.

LEWIS JOHNSON HEDGPETH, son of Joel and Jane Hedgpeth, was born in Buchanan County, Mo., August 11, 1837. At the age of fourteen years he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1858, with his parents, he started to California, but on account of trouble with the Indians they were detained some months in New Mexico and did not arrive in California until 1859. In the same year, in Tulare County, his mother died. He and his brother Joel were licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Visalia charge in August, 1861. C. C. Snell was preacher in charge, and T. C. Barton presiding elder. In the September following he preached his first sermon from Amos iv. 12: "Prepare to meet thy God." In 1862, with Rev. T. H. B. Anderson, he joined the Pacific Conference. His first appointment was junior preacher on the Bear River Circuit with James Neal, preacher in charge. With the exception of parts of two years spent in teaching school, he served continuously in this Conference until 1875, and was pastor of the following charges: Shasta, Yankee Jims, Maricopa, Millerton, Sonoma, Point Arena, Potter Valley, Lakeport, and Fresno. On March 15, 1866, he was married to Miss Margaret M. Boyes, of Millerton, Cal. To this union were born eight sons and two daughters, nine of whom are living. All of these, with two exceptions, reside at Phoenix. Mrs. Bessie Hedgpeth Risinger lives in San Diego, Cal., and Rev. Joel F. Hedgpeth is pastor of our church at Pecos, Tex., and is one of the most successful and popular preachers of the New Mexico Conference. On account of failing health, in 1875 Brother Hedgpeth asked for a supernumerary relation and moved to Phoenix, Ariz. The next year he was transferred to the Los Angeles Conference and was appointed to the Phoenix Circuit. In the fall of this year he rode on horseback to Santa Ana, Cal., to the Conference, where he was made presiding elder of the Arizona District. This trip of nearly five hundred miles each way across the desert resulted in an illness high unto death. It is worthy of note that we hold this memorial service just thirty-eight years later also at Santa Ana, which point we reached from Phoenix in fifteen hours instead of fifteen days. Again, in 1877, because of ill health, he was granted a supernumerary relation, and the following year a location was granted; but for a number of years he continued in active work, supplying Phoenix, West End, and Prescott Circuit. In the latter charge a trip of over two hundred miles in a cart was necessary for each round. One of the points covered was Skull Valley, so named because the bones of white men lay bleaching on the desert waste as silent reminders of Indian massacres. In 1895 he was readmitted and served Bethel, which church he helped to organize, and later Verde Circuit. Verde was a hard and uninviting field, and yet Brother Hedgpeth mortgaged his farm near Phoenix in order to serve that mission. That mortgage ran for years, and was lifted only when part of the farm was sold. In 1897 he was given a superannuate relation, and lived on his farm near Phoenix until December 18, 1912, when he passed to his reward. For a number of years before his death he served as the honored chaplain of the Arizona Legislature. Brother Hedgpeth was a man not strong in body, but possessed of a courageous spirit. He was a real pioneer. He preached in Arizona when it required great fidelity and real sacrifice. When our Church in Phoenix was struggling for existence and could pay him but sixty dollars for the year, he refused an offer of one thousand dollars per annum from the local Presbyterian church and preached on in the church of his choice for the sixty dollars. During the days when infidelity held sway in Phoenix, he stood out as a bold defender of the cause he loved so well. Brother Hedgpeth was a close student, especially of the Book. He was thoroughly conversant with the doctrines and polity of his Church. He was ever the friend of the young preachers, and used liberally his store of knowledge for their good. Most of his reading was done while his family was asleep, and many of his sermons were outlined while engaged in daily toil. Still he found time to visit the sick and befriend the needy. For about six years before his death he was an invalid and hardly knew what it was to be free from pain; but neither poverty nor suffering could dampen his ardor for service. He never lost an opportunity to talk of the goodness of God, and to read and explain the Word was his delight. He preached twice at Bethel during his last year; and the text of his last sermon was, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." He was praying much for a revival in Bethel Church, but did not live to see it. On the night after his death there began a series of revival services which were an answer to his prayers. His last days were brightened by visits from his brother, Rev. Joel Hedgpeth, of the Pacific Conference, and his son, Rev. Joel F. Hedgpeth, of the New Mexico Conference. His last attendance at church was only a few weeks before his death, to hear his son preach. He rejoiced in the fact that his own son would continue to preach the gospel after he himself had gone away. He was anxious for the going. He longed to be released. He knew in whom he had believed, and desired to be with Him. His was a busy life and a triumphant death. The funeral service was held at Bethel Church, and was conducted by Rev. S. M. Cheek, presiding elder of the Arizona District; Rev. W. R. Thornton, pastor of Central Church; and Rev. J. Coy Williams, pastor of Bethel. The large crowd which was present showed the esteem in which he was held. His loving and faithful wife, who has stood by him during all these years, and his children and grandchildren, are bereft because of his departure, but rejoice in that they know where he has gone.—J. Coy Williams, S. M. Cheek, Committee.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Andrew Jackson Worley, Milton A. Clark, J. W. Anderson. 3.

ANDREW JACKSON WORLEY was born in Montgomery County, Mo., April 17, 1843. He was admitted to the Missouri Conference in 1870, and transferred to the North Texas Conference in 1880. In 1889 he transferred to the Indian Mission Conference, and was placed on the superannuate roll in 1905. He served the Church thirty-five years. As a pioneer preacher in Oklahoma he endured many hardships, but on circuits, stations, and districts he was faithful. He was twice married, first to Miss Nellie Vaughn, of Clark County, Mo. Of this union there was one daughter, Mrs. E. L. Keys, of Wynnewood, Okla., who survives him. His second marriage was to Miss Lucy Brown, of Sherman, Tex. She was a faithful and devoted wife, and lives to mourn his loss at Wynnewood, Okla. This faithful servant of God fell asleep in Jesus on March 27, 1913.

MILTON A. CLARK was born in Richmond County, Ga., in 1842. When the Civil War came, he enlisted in the Fifty-eighth Georgia Regiment. He lost a limb at Spottsylvania. In 1870 he graduated from Emory College, Georgia. He was licensed to preach in November, 1874, and admitted on trial in the South Georgia Conference in December following. He served only a few years in his home Conference, five years in Colorado, and about thirty in Indian Territory and Oklahoma. Here he served as teacher, pastor, and presiding elder among all the tribes of Indians within the bounds of Indian Territory. In 1909 he was superannuated, but continued to work among the Indians until the fall of 1912, when he moved to Florida, where he died on July 9, 1913. His wife and children live at Kissimmee, Fla. Few men have done a greater work for Christ among the Indians of Oklahoma. We mourn his loss, and extend sympathy to the wife and children.

J. W. ANDERSON, a local deacon of the Mangum District, was licensed to preach about fourteen years ago. He served as a supply four years. A man full of love to God and the Church. He was preparing to go to his fourth Quarterly Conference on the morning of October 27, 1913, when God called him home without warning. The funeral was held at Victory by W. L. Anderson. Brother Anderson was always a faithful man to his Church, his kindred, and his friends. He leaves a wife and large family of children to mourn his loss, but they know where to find him. We pray God's blessing on the sorrowing ones.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Benjamin B. Risenhoover, Warner T. Bolling, William G. Hefley. 3.

BENJAMIN B. RISENHOOVER, a superannuate of the Memphis Conference, was born in Pickens County, Ala., August 24, 1832. He was converted when young and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was licensed to preach by a quarterly Conference of the Grenada District, held at Serepta Camp Ground in Calhoun County, Miss., September 25, 1858. He was received on trial in the traveling connection into the Memphis Conference at Trenton, Tenn., in November, 1858. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce at Aberdeen, Miss, November 11, 1860; and was received into full connection at Memphis, Tenn., in November, 1876. He was ordained elder by Bishop Kavanaugh at Mayfield, Ky.,

November 15, 1879. He was married to Miss Sou H. Beasley, December 18, 1861. Six children were born to this union—two daughters, Miss Nannie E. and Edna B., and four sons, Earley B., Jordan B., James A., and Robert M., all of whom are living except Miss Nannie E., who died in November, 1899. Brother Risenhoover was a courteous, pleasant Christian minister. He was handsome in his personal appearance and social in his relationships with his fellow-men. Scores and hundreds of men and women were led to Christ by his faithful, efficient ministry. He was surely the sweetest singer in the Memphis Conference in his active days of service for the Lord. Many were impressed with his preaching and charmed with his singing. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and loved to meet with his brethren in the days of his active life. He had lived in New Concord, Galloway County, Ky., for some twenty years, but about two years ago he came to Murray, the county seat of Galloway County, where he lived until the end came. March 15, 1913, he closed his earthly pilgrimage here and quietly went home. His devoted companion and two of his children, Mrs. Edna Grogan and Dr. R. M. Risenhoover, and other relatives, with a number of friends, were present to witness the quiet going out of this quiet man of God. Brother Risenhoover often spoke of his departure with a glad hope of an abundant entrance through the gate into the City of God. He had been afflicted very seriously for some four years, and the end was not unexpected. He met death with composure and quietly went away. He was eighty years, six months, and two days old. The burial service was conducted by the Rev. J. M. Pool, after which his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at New Providence in Galloway County, Ky. Here a number of his relatives and a host of his friends shared in the last solemn rites of an humble minister of the gospel of the Son of God. We would say to the faithful companion and children, that He who watches the sparrow will surely hear the prayer of those who put their trust in Him. As the mantle of Elijah fell on Elisha, so may the mantle of the father fall on the sons.—
L. D. Hamilton.

WARNER T. BOLLING was born in Green County, Ala., May 25, 1847, the son of

Warner T. and Harriet Bolling, who came from Virginia, the one from Petersburg and the other from near Richmond on the James. Dr. Bolling lost his parents when but a lad, and entered the Confederate service when not yet fifteen, serving through the entire war. He enlisted first in the Harris Zouave Cadets in Memphis, Tenn., which was attached as Company D to the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Senior Tennessee Regiment—Preston Smith, Colonel; Marcus J. Wright, Lieutenant Colonel. Then he re-enlisted in the Second Tennessee Regiment under Colonel W. B. Bate, who was succeeded by Richard Butler, and he by Tony Robinson. Dr. Bolling was in more than twenty battles during the war, loyal to the cause he espoused, in camp and on the field; was severely wounded at Chickamauga, and again shot at Kennesaw Mountain in Georgia; heroically enduring the sufferings incident to service and inevitable to the wounded; and last, but not least, to undergo the anguish of a prisoner of war in Camp Chase Prison near Columbus, Ohio, until the bloody struggle ceased. The next three and a half years he spent in business in Memphis, and then became an itinerant Methodist preacher, joining the Memphis Annual Conference on trial at Paris, Tenn., in 1868. He was received into full connection in 1870. A paper furnished me by the family states that he was ordained deacon by Bishop Doggett in 1874, and elder by Bishop Keener in 1877. He was an attractive preacher from the start, and early in his ministry was sought after by aspiring congregations. Among the charges of his early ministry we mention Denmark Circuit, Humboldt, Dresden, Hickman, Union City, and Hayes Avenue Stations. Then he was transferred to West Virginia and served Charleston two years; thence to Huntingdon, where he built a church; from there to Park Church, Hannibal, Mo., three years; also the same length of time was spent in Fayette; thence to Denver, Colo.; and then to Kentucky again, serving Covington and Lexington each three years; then to Louisiana, serving Shreveport four years; next he was in Jackson, Miss., two years, and then back to the "Home Conference," in which, to use his own language, "to live and die," and filled the following stations: Central Church, Memphis, three years; Broadway, Paducah, one year; Paris, Tenn., three years; Fulton, Ky., two years; and was appointed to Clinton by Bishop Kilgo, Monday, November 12, 1912, in which charge he served with renewed zeal, despite his wasting strength, preaching to crowded houses to the end. Dr. Bolling was reared an Episcopalian, the impress of which marked his manner for life, and was yet more manifest in his family. He was twice married; date of first, my informant thinks, was 1870, to Miss Mollie Ccoley, of Milan, Tenn.; the children of which marriage, and surviving him, are Robert Bolling, age forty-two, living in Michigan, and Margaret (now Mrs. E. H. Mullen), age thirty-five, living in Los Angeles, Cal. The second marriage was to Miss Willie R. Jeter, of Huntingdon, Va., in 1882. The children of this marriage living are Mrs. John W. Fitzgerald, of Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Dudley Porter, of Paris, Tenn.; Mrs. George L. Alley, of Fulton, Ky.; and Miss Helen Meade and Master Randolph P. Bolling, who reside with their mother in Memphis, Tenn. Dr. Bolling was a ready writer, and many people greatly enjoyed his articles in the daily press. He was positive in expression, often radical, particularly in matters partisan; some felt that in recent years he had said more politically than was wise for his personal good or the high cause he represented. Being an old-time gentleman, there was dignity in all his demeanor. Many thought him cool, some even cold, but he carried a heart found to be full of both warmth and tenderness to those who came close to him. If there be such a thing as a born or natural orator, he was one. He reveled in the ornate, beautiful, and sublime. Whatever other talent he may have possessed, in eloquence he excelled. We are told that in his family he was very kind and indulgent. Dr. Bolling first received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from St. Charles College, Mo., in 1836, and again from Peabody Institute, Nashville, Tenn., in 1909. In Clinton, Ky., his last earthly home, though feeble in body, he won the hearts of the people, and they did well by him, overhauling the parsonage and increasing his support and graciously ministering to him in his last illness. Funeral services were held in the parsonage at Clinton by his presiding elder, assisted by quite a number of other preachers of the Conference, on Wednesday afternoon, April 16; and on Thursday by Bishop Murrah, Dr. Lewis, and others, in First Church, Memphis, followed by the interment in Forest Hill Cemetery. April 15, 1913, when winter was fast retreating and spring was rapidly advancing to the music of winged choristers, the great Captain of our salvation issued the last order to the old soldier, and, we believe, removed his helmet and sword, giving instead a palm and crown.—W. J. Mecoy.

WILLIAM GRAVES HEFLEY.—There is no nobler ambition than that to live well; to feel that "it is infamy to die and not be missed." "Samuel died; and all the Israelites were gathered together and lamented him." No higher tribute could have been paid the man of God. What an impression he had made! What good he had done! His life was like the breath of rarest flowers—beautiful and sweet. No monument of chiseled marble could compare with the great sorrow and the universal grief of Israel's hosts. To be universally loved because of a positive and active goodness is an ideal worthy of attainment. A good man is God's best revelation, the first asset of a nation or community. He catches the vision, sets the pace, and others follow where he leads. "Great hearts alone understand how much glory there is in being good." "He who believes in goodness has the essence of all faith." He is a man "of cheerful yesterdays and confident to-morrows." "Nature seems to exist," says Emerson, "for the excellent. The world is upheld by the veracity of good men—they make the earth wholesome. They who lived with them found life glad and nutritious. Life is sweet and tolerable only in our belief in such society; and actually, or ideally, we manage to live with superiors." William Graves Hefley was one of God's noblemen. No better example of the excellent has lived among us. To have known this princely Christian gentleman confirms splendidly the truth that "the world is upheld by the veracity of good men," and that their goodness is the source of the life and inspiration of their fellows. Looking back upon the days of our association, I have come to know more fully than ever before the sterling character of my beloved friend, and the passing days accentuate the regal qualities of this gentle spirit, whose ambition it was to be good and to do good. Dr. Hefley, the youngest of eight children, was the son of William Michael and Margaret Simonton Hefley. He was born in Madison County, Tenn., November 2, 1853. He died at Jackson, Tenn., April 29, 1913. The elements of his character were a rich heritage bequeathed by parents of gentleness and refinement and high standing socially. Of Scotch and Saxon extraction and Presbyterians of the "Old School," they possessed those high ideals, pronounced religious convictions, and splendid Christian spirit that came to such fullness of development in the life of their preacher son. The Hefley family came from Chester District, S. C., to West Tennessee, in 1850. Shortly before his father's death, which occurred when William was but a few months old, the father asked for his baby boy, and remarked, "Take good care of him; he may be a minister." Was the dying father's suggestion a prophecy? Dr. Hefley was reared in that environment where very frequently manhood is made and character is developed, an environment of hardship and bitter experiences. The mother was left alone to rear a family of eight children. The burden was an exceedingly heavy one; but, influenced by high moral ideas and spiritual standards, this mother reared her children in a most wholesome Christian atmosphere, and she was rewarded by seeing the four who lived to be grown loyal members of the Church. Aside from the rigid training received in the home, the boy William sought such advantages as the schools of his day afforded. He was always an ambitious and thoughtful student. When sixteen years of age he was converted, under the preaching of Dr. Nathan Sullivan. After spending a year in school and a year teaching, he yielded to the conviction that he should preach. He believed in a Divine call to the ministry. Such was his, and this royal priest of God and devout minister of Christ lived his life and did his work by the high standard comprehended in his interpretation of that call. He was recommended by his Church to the Quarterly Conference of Trenton Circuit, was granted license to preach, and was recommended for admission into the Memphis Annual Conference, into which he was received at the session of 1875. He did his first work on the Adamsville Circuit, under Rev. S. B. Love. The following year he served under Rev. G. K. Brooks on the Jackson

Circuit. After serving the Briensburg Circuit for two years, he was stationed at Clinton, and Mayfield, Ky.; Dallas, Tex.; Hickman, Ky.; Humboldt, Tenn.; Union City, Dyersburg; Hays Avenue, Jackson; Fulton, Ky.; Brownsville, and Paris; also the Brownsville District, the Memphis District, and the Jackson District. Preaching was his delight. Knowing the sacredness of life, the grave responsibility involved in his call, and the sin and suffering about him, he felt with Paul, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel!" Dr. Hefley was human, and appreciated the honors conferred upon him by his brethren, but he was wholly free from ostentation. Modest and unassuming, he bore all honors with a quiet and pleasing dignity. He was the first delegate elected to the General Conference of 1910. The larger the responsibility the greater his dignity and reliance upon God. His was indeed a choice spirit. He lived in high altitudes. He was solemnly pledged in his own consciousness to meet all responsibilities and obligations faithfully. His love and sympathy were as considerate and helpful as they were profound. Those who knew him most intimately were aware of the greatness of his soul-life. He had the face and the heart of a St. John. Memory brings before me the soft light of that kindly eye, the gentle words of a warm heart, and the charm of a sunny disposition. His love and life were like the Gulf Stream, in that they tempered and made bearable the asperities of the life that touched his. And they came to him. Many there are who can look back upon the ministries of W. G. Hefley to discover that they were rifts in the clouds, sweet harmonies in the midst of turmoil and strife, joy in the midst of sorrow, strength offered for weakness, and the splendid Christian optimism which saw the potentialities and possibilities of regeneration in the sin and evil about him. He would not even crush the life that crawled at his feet. To him it was a sacred thing. The purpose of his life was constructive. Thoroughly progressive, he sought to keep abreast of the times by constant and patient investigation of the ideas and ideals of our modern complex life. His training was not the result of the pursuit of college curriculum, nor was his theology the product of the seminary. His information, however, was varied and extensive, and his theology marvelously clear. His conceptions of truth were noble and well defined, the result of careful analysis and just discrimination. Dr. Hefley was a voracious reader and a critical student. By individual effort and persistent application he became one of the best informed men in the Conference. He moved in an atmosphere of culture and refinement, and gave himself to the task of analyzing and digesting the thought of the foremost thinkers of the day. Possessing a mind of philosophic bent, he did not hesitate to attack the most profound treatise, his ultimate aim being a fuller knowledge of truth and the broader vision accompanying intellectual pursuits. His primal attitude toward all questions was unprejudiced and sympathetic. When, however, there was cause for objection and dissent, he did not hesitate to speak. His sermons gave evidence of much serious thought. Ambitious as to theme, sane in conception, cautious in statement, and enthusiastic in spirit, one could hear him with pleasure and profit, feeling that he had lingered with God in the preparation of his messages. He did not use the arts of expediency to escape the criticism that great truths invite. His insight and faith led him into large fields of thought and action. The highest type of love and culture creates real nobility. My friend was noble, and that too in no narrow and restricted sense. He was larger than his environment. Frequently he would rise above it like the sun-kissed peak when the shadows lifted and the mists had rolled away. Loving life with a fine intensity, and desiring to use his life and influence for the largest possible good to others, he did not hesitate to make any sacrifice when it became necessary. His generosity defined a personality as genial as soft breezes and sunny skies. Radiation, rather than absorption, was the habitual attitude of this lovable, cultured, Christian minister. "Noble souls are those who completely renounce the chief aim of ordinary souls, the personal enjoyment of life, in order that they may devote themselves the more effectively to the elevation of the whole race" William Graves Hefley was broad-minded, large-hearted, and cosmopolitan. You could never charge him with selfishness. His value of life and its relations and obligations was inspired by his conception of God. God to him was a personal being, a loving Father. His faith was as beautiful as it was simple. He was fearless, which is an essential element of nobility. He loved peace, but when compelled to face an issue he was largely aggressive, contending vigorously for what he conceived to be right. He might suffer, but when once aroused to the defense of a principle he was a most worthy and dangerous opponent. It has been said that the "soul of all culture is the culture of the soul." A fact at once evident, Brother Hefley had "kept the soul path white." Four years of intimate association revealed no defect in his faith, no flaw in his religious life. It seemed morally impossible for him to do wrong. Transparent, sincere, strong in the consciousness of his own integrity, his life was lived with a majesty of calmness and a dignity and grandeur of movement that disclosed high aims and divine purpose—the mastery of evil and the dominance of good. I never heard a coarse or vulgar word escape the lips of my friend. His spirit was characterized by that "finer cleanliness" which loathed coarseness and vulgarity. His soul was as clear as a crystal, as joyous and buoyant as the laughing fountain. Unobtrusive, yet accessible; free from ostentation, yet dignified; he was God's loyal son and our honored collaborer. His home-life was serene and beautiful. The happy scenes about his own fireside are too sacred and holy to bring into review. There was no truer husband, no more devoted father. As lover and companion he was ardent in his affection and laudably ambitious for his children. For all that he was to them and did for them they honor the memory of him with an undying devotion. As a presiding elder he felt very keenly the responsibility of placing his men. Their interests drove sleep from his eyes and gave him the deepest concern. I think he always felt, "Others first." Dr. Hefley was stricken with a chill the second of April. During the second week of his illness complications developed and his condition became precarious and alarming. He was given every possible attention, and, when thought to be recovering, the end came suddenly and unexpectedly. This servant of the Church was ready to "fall on sleep" and rest from his labors. Several years ago, when preparing for an operation in a Memphis hospital, he remarked to me: "I don't know what the outcome will be; I've made all preparations; I'm ready." He was ready. To know him you must know that. During the lucid moments of his last illness Brother Hefley was planning for his work, and spoke of the glorious history of his Church; and seeing, as we cannot now see, the splendors of the other world, he frequently referred to "a house not made with hands." The gospel, which he loved so well to preach, sustained him even in "the valley of the shadow of death." Death has closed his eyes and silenced his lips, and that warm heart is wrapped in eternal stillness; we are bereft of his presence and counsel, but the clouds that cover his sacred dust cannot hide his virtues; death cannot render ineffective such a life as was his. "He being dead, yet speaketh." "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" I shall not forget the hour in which his brethren paid splendid tribute to the memory of him who was to labor among us no more. The sunbeams, chasing one another through the art-glass windows of the temple of God, cast about the face of our deceased brother the soft light, which rested like a crown upon his brow. His repose was like that of a tired child resting upon its mother's bosom. All was peace. The very atmosphere of heaven enshrouded that sacred spot. The touch of the invisible was upon us. There was conscious victory in every falling tear. The spirit of his life permeated the holy place, and we felt that God and his angels were about us. What a transition! What an exchange for our dear brother! Through the coming years we shall see him in the hard places doing his work patiently and successfully; in places of honor and large responsibility, loyal, true, and unselfish; in the pursuit of his own holy life and beloved work, guileless, modest, generous, strong, and noble,—memory's picture will inspire us to emulate the example of this good man of God, who "was full of faith and the Holy Ghost." Shall we not pray that his mantle may fall upon us, and that the broken ranks of the ministry may be filled with holy men of God?

"How well he fell asleep!

Like some proud river, widening toward the sea;

Calmly and grandly, silently and deep,
Life joined eternity."

"As I was walking through a garden one day I saw a fine flower plucked from the plant, and I said to the gardener, 'Who hath done this?' And he said, 'It was the Master.' And I held my peace." —Arthur C. Bell.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except that of L. T. Ward, who was allowed to surrender his credentials and withdraw from the ministry and membership of the Church.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Jerome Duncan and Charles E. Brown. 2.

JEROME DUNCAN.—The Central Texas Conference suffered an unparalleled loss when Rev. Jerome Duncan, one of its foremost members and most efficient leaders, while yet in the meridian of life and at the flood tide of his usefulness, was unexpectedly called from labor to rest and reward. His birth was in Stewart County, Tenn., October 14, 1860. He was the worthy son of a worthy father. Rev. Thomas J. Duncan, his tender and affectionate father, was for thirty-seven years an itinerant preacher and a wise, aggressive, positive, influential leader in the Church. His mother, likewise, was a strong character, true wife, loving mother, ideal homemaker. In such a home Jerome Duncan was born and reared, and his intense love, implicit obedience, and affectionate admiration for his parents placed him in position to receive the best that such a home and such parents could inspire and impart. And his relation to his three brothers and two sisters was just as admirable. Indeed, his whole life was characterized by well-nigh ideal family relationships, whether as son, brother, husband, or father. He attended school at Cross Plains, Tenn., and later went to the famous school, the Southwestern Presbyterian University, while Dr. Joseph R. Wilson, father of President Woodrow Wilson, was at its head. Thus did rich heritage, excellent home training, true education, and great associations enter into the make-up of Brother Duncan. He was converted and joined the Church under the ministry of Rev. J. D. Barbee, D.D., for whom to the end he had a warm affection. He was twice married, first to Miss Sarah Holmes, of Clarksville, Tenn., in 1885, who died in 1888; and again, September 15, 1891, to Miss Mattie Reagan, daughter of Rev. R. A. Reagan, more than fifty years an honored itinerant preacher. To this happy union were born five worthy daughters and one son. All survive with their mother, except one girl who died in infancy. He was licensed to preach August 9, 1889, in Clarksville Station, Clarksville District, Rev. W. R. Peebles, preacher in charge, and Rev. J. W. Hill, presiding elder; and that fall he was admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Wilson, November 1, 1891, and an elder by Bishop Keener, October 22, 1893. In his home Conference he served one year on Trinity Circuit, two years at Guthrie, Ky., and one year at Cedar Hill, Tenn.

It was at this latter place, New-year's Day, 1893, that the present writer's acquaintance and friendship with Brother Duncan began, a friendship that never ended, shall never end. In the fall of 1893 Brother Duncan transferred to this Conference, where, without intermission, he labored until the day of his death. He served the following charges: Morrow Street, Waco, 1894-7; Vernon, 1898-1901; Hillsboro, 1902-4; Fifth Street, Waco, 1905-6. This closed his work as a pastor, seventeen years in all, thirteen in this Conference. In the fall of 1906 he was elected and appointed President of Stamford Collegiate Institute, and for three years and a half he served with ability in that capacity. The breadth of foundation and success of administration of that great training school are due in large measure to the optimistic faith and untiring energy of its first president. He resigned the presidency in June, 1910, and was appointed to the Dublin District for the remainder of the year. That fall he was sent to the Fort Worth District, where he served two years and eight months, until his translation. He was a member of the General Conference of 1910, and would undoubtedly have been sent to the next had he lived. In the make-up and character of Brother Duncan we do not find overshadowing greatness or notable weakness in any one single line, but rather the happy union of more than ordinary ability in all lines. A better all-round man it would be hard to find. Born of the best of parentage, he had excellent native ability. To this was added careful rearing in the best type of homes, a solid, sensible education, wide observation, and the lifetime habit of reading and mastering good books. He learned to see clearly, think accurately, and to express himself with remarkable force and clearness. But above all else in his make-up was the grace of God. He had been deeply convicted, soundly and happily converted, and thus had a definite, clear-cut experience. Henceforth he grew in grace and in the knowledge of God as his Father and Christ as his personal Saviour. He was first of all a deeply religious, truly spiritual man. He was an excellent preacher, a true, evangelical, gospel preacher. He dealt but little in metaphysics, science, philosophy, or poetry, and was never given to platitudes or second-hand religion. He read and studied the Bible, accepted it as the Word of God, and preached its great truths made real and vital to him by his own personal experience. He entered heart and soul into his message, preaching with consecrated earnestness and enthusiasm. Under his preaching, men were convicted, converted, strengthened, and established in their religious life. Any congregation, whether rude and unlearned, or intellectual and cultured, heard him gladly and profitably. His experience, his observation, his reading good books and the Bible, and his deep interest in all classes, made his preaching fresh and vigorous. He was a fine pastor. All departments of church work prospered under his leadership. He invariably had all the organizations of the church and each in prosperous operation. He saw clearly the needs of his charge, was a fine organizer, a resourceful, indefatigable worker, a wise counselor, and a safe leader. The published Minutes show that in all his years as a pastor there was never a dollar of deficit in salary or collections; that there were always many additions on profession of faith, and a large net increase in membership, except during his fourth year when he would religiously clean up his roll. Never given to gadding about, he visited with a purpose. He knew his flock, knew their surroundings, hence was well acquainted with their wants and needs. He never failed to minister to the sick, the sorrowing, the needy, and the erring. We have no better pastors than was he. He was a manly, courageous man. There was nothing effeminate, time-serving, selfish, or craven about him. He never cringed when he looked into his own heart, or when he looked into the face of mortal man. He was a man of definite, profound convictions, could withstand any man to the face, declare himself with all the force of his nature, make a whole city to tremble, if need be, and yet all the while maintain the well-nigh universal respect and admiration of men. It is a remarkable tribute to him that such a positive man should have made so few enemies. He never sought place or honor for himself. There was in him no likeness to Diotrephes, who loved the preëminence and sought it over his brethren. He was a true friend. He made friends by the hundreds, grappled them to him as with hoops of steel, and held them to the end. Many supposed that they were his special friends, only to find later that the loving heart that had opened so wide to them had opened just as wide to a host of others, for it was his nature to be a friend. No man among us was truer or happier in his relation to his brethren of the ministry than was he. As a leader he was wise, vigorous, safe.

Pastors and people of the districts he served believed in him and followed him, and the work prospered under him. As a member of the last General Conference he immediately took high rank both in the committee room and on the floor. His vision was wide, his judgment safe, his counsel sane. He was genuinely connectiotional. He never sought to build up his charge at the expense of others, but he labored for the common good of our universal Zion, and was interested in every other worker. He closed his earthly career grandly. He was at the height of his popularity and usefulness. His health had not been the best for six months, but without wavering he went to every appointment, being just as attentive and considerate to the demands of the smallest mission as of the largest station. On July 19 he went to White's Chapel, on the Smithfield Circuit, to assist in a meeting. On Monday evening he took his text: "So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all things which are commanded you, say, we are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do"—text illustrative of his life, expressive of his obedience and humility, a text a bigot would never use. A few minutes later he staggered and fell, stricken with apoplexy. Removed to a near-by home, physicians and loved ones were summoned. But his work was done. He lingered eight hours, and at 5:30 a.m., July 22, his spirit passed on high. His body was carried to Fort Worth, and on Thursday afternoon, the 25th, in the Polytechnic Church, in the presence of an overflowing house, including more than forty of his brethren of the ministry, the funeral service was held. The next day the remains were taken to Hillsboro for burial. He had served there as pastor only three years, and had been away nearly nine years, yet such was the love and esteem in which he was held that every business house was closed, and a long, long procession followed him to the beautiful cemetery overlooking the city. Slowly and sadly we laid him down, heaped the sod above him, and covered it over with flowers. The grass shall wither, the flowers fade, but the spirit of such as he shall live forever and ever. The world is better because of his life; it seems poorer to us because of his death. In fields where worthy work is done, in gatherings where counsel is sought and wise plans laid, in social circles where friends rejoice to meet, we will sorely miss Jerome Duncan. But most of all he is missed in the lonely home, so long enriched by his princely love. But we know where he is, and in our Father's home above we will meet him in the sweet by and by.—Samuel J. Rucker.

CHARLES EDWARD BROWN was born in Macon, Ga., June 4, 1847. His father, Col. John T. Brown, was one of the most wealthy and highly influential men in the State. His mother, Mary Ousley, was the daughter of a Methodist preacher. She was a graduate of Salem, N. C., and was a woman of great talents. Up to the time of her death she kept herself in touch with Latin, Greek, and other languages, and read and understood them well. From her girlhood, she made it a regular practice to read her Bible through each year. She retained her wonderful memory and took delight in her studies up to the last of her life, which closed with her eightieth year. Brother Brown inherited many of the noble traits and excellent characteristics of his mother. For a number of years he was a student in the Georgia Military Institute, from which, at the age of sixteen, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, and served in its ranks with distinction for two years. On March 2, 1866, he was united in marriage to Miss Loe Elam, at Americus, Ga. To this union were born four children, two of whom are living. In his nineteenth year he was happily converted, and at once felt his call to the work of the ministry. His father had high ambitions for his son, and was deeply disappointed that he should choose such a calling; but true to his conviction, Brother Brown was licensed to preach in August, 1867, and joined the South Georgia Conference in the Fall of 1868. When his father found that he could not dissuade him from the ministry, he then insisted that his son should make the best possible preparation for a large and useful ministry. Notwithstanding this urging for preparation, his father could not stand the strain and took his room for three months. His wife, becoming uneasy about him, sent for her "boy preacher" to come to see his father. It was late in the afternoon when he received the message, and he hastily hitched his horse to the buggy and drove twenty miles through the cold and rain. He reached home near bedtime. When his mother went into the room and said to his father, "Our boy preacher has come to see us," he said, "I know it is your custom to ask all ministers to pray in our home, but do not ask him." Brother Brown went into the room to see his father, sat down by his bed, and talked with him a few minutes. His father said, "It is bedtime, son, and you had better retire to your room." The son said, "Father, I should like to pray with you"; and before the father could object, the boy preacher was on his knees by the bed. He did not sleep much that night because of the deep anxiety which he felt for his father. He arose early the next morning, and when he entered his father's room his mother handed him the family Bible. He read a few verses and talked from them, sang two stanzas of "A charge to keep I have," and then knelt with his mother at his father's bedside. Before the prayer was ended the father was happily converted. Brother Brown was a close student for years. He mastered a four-year course of study in two years. It was not unusual for him to study and pray all night. Our brother was a loyal Methodist preacher. He believed that the authorities of the Church were ordained of God, and that his appointments were ordered of the Lord. As a presiding elder he was efficient, and was faithful and true to his preachers. He was self-sacrificing and unselfish in all that he did. As a pastor he was popular, and wielded a wonderful influence wherever he went. On his first charge he purchased a piece of ground and established a camp ground, and it is kept up to this day and called Brown's Camp Ground. By the end of his fourth year he was known as a great revival preacher, and was sent for far and near to hold meetings. Moticallo, Florida, built a great tabernacle and sent for him to hold the first camp meeting. In the fifth year of his ministry, his wife's health having failed, his friends advised him to seek a climate to suit her case. The Bishop advised him to travel with Bishop Keener and find the proper climate; but having come to Texas in advance, he found so many friends who had been relieved of asthma that he decided this was the place to which he should come. In 1872 he met Bishop Keener at Belton, and was given work in the Northwest Texas Conference. Calvert was his first appointment. There, during his first year, he built a church and a parsonage. While at Calvert he edited the Calvert paper, and published the first agricultural magazine published in Texas, entitled The Farm and Home. In 1873 the city of Calvert was visited by yellow fever. When the scourge drove all other pastors and the Catholic priest from the town. Brother Brown remained at his post, visiting the sick and burying the dead of all denominations. He was untiring in his efforts until he was stricken with the dread disease. Even then he was sent for, and until unable to leave his bed he never refused to go. He was once elected to the General Conference, and served with distinction. While pastor in Waxahachie, Marvin College, located at that place, had to be sold, and was about to be purchased by the Roman Catholics. Brother Brown sold his farm and other property and bought it, to save the property to the Church. He was president of the school for four years, and then sold it to the city. As nearly as we can learn, Brother Brown served the following charges: The Whitney charge of the South Carolina Conference, two years, and the Thomasville charge two years. In 1872 he was transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference. Here he served Calvert two years; Marlin, two years; Waxahachie Station, two years; Waxahachie District (and College, I suppose), four years; and then located. Returning to the Conference in 1893, he spent one year at Coutts Memorial; four years at Brownwood; one year at Dublin, three years at Abilene, and three years at Main Street in Cleburne. In 1905 he was appointed Agent for Superannuate Homes, and was reappointed from year to year to this agency to the close of his life. In this office he did a monumental work, and many rise up and call him blessed, and will do so forever. He loved the old men of the Conference, and many a time did he exhort the brethren to remember these honored, useful servants of the Lord, who had made possible the great blessings and privileges they are enjoying. In the summer Brother Brown found it necessary to go to the Baptist Sanitarium at Dallas for treatment. While here, came the end, which was not the end, but the beginning of an everlasting triumph. He was rational to the last. Just before his departure he repeated the Apostles' Creed, and, looking up into the face of a dear friend, said: "I believe it all. The way is clear. Nothing of that kind to worry about. That is settled." At another time he sang, and said: "I am coming! coming! I love Him, because He first loved me." With his last whisper he said, "Halleluia! I love Him." He then closed his eyes on the fading beauties of earth to open them on the fadeless glories of heaven. He died in the Sanitarium at Dallas, October 20, 1913. The next day funeral services were held in the home of his daughter, and his precious dust was deposited in the Greenwood Cemetery to await "the resurrection of the just."—E. F. Boone.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Joseph E. Potts. 1.

JOSEPH EZEKIEL POTTS, born February 9, 1831, was the son of Ezekiel and Ann Potts, who resided near Hillsborough, Va., and who were among the best people of Loudon County, religiously and otherwise. His mother was of German ancestry, and the old German Bible was treasured as an heirloom. His conversion had for him a fixed date. A revival service was being held at Salem Church, Hillsborough Circuit, Baltimore Conference, by Revs. William Eggleston, Edward Dulin, and Bernard Hough, the last-named a local preacher. At the altar after several efforts a change was experienced on "Sunday night preceding the first Monday in January of the year 1846." This was followed on the succeeding day in his father's yard by a fuller change. He says of this latter: "I was walking in the yard of my father's house—in a moment all was clear—God was my Father—Jesus was my Saviour—the Holy Spirit was my Comforter—I was a new creature—I saw as I had never before seen—I felt as I had never before felt—a moment before and God seemed to be afar off; but now the plants, the trees, the hills, the air, yea, all things were now pervaded by the presence of God—I felt that I was with God and that all material creation was singing his praises—I was quiet—I stopped—I became almost motionless—I was amazed; where was I?—was I on earth?—why this change?—I then rejoiced in hope of the glory of God." He was received into the Virginia Conference at Lynchburg, Va., in October, 1853. His name was proposed by his elder, Rev. G. W. Carter, and he was admitted on trial with fifteen other young men. On June 14, 1857, he was happily married to Miss Mary Ann Harrell, at Williamsburg, Va., where he was pastor. She was the daughter of Moses R. Harrell, one of the pillars of the church at that place, and a helpmate indeed. Brother Potts died April 26, 1913, at his home in Amelia Courthouse, Va. His height was about five and one-half feet; his weight in general about one hundred and sixty-five pounds; his eyes were blue; his complexion was fair; his hair sandy, as well as his mustache and beard when he allowed them to grow. In later life his face was smooth-shaven. Truth-loving—painstaking, patient, and persistent in his search thereof; logical and analytical in his processes—clear and practical in the outcome and presentation thereof. He was trustful, believing unquestioningly the great verities and resting absolutely on the word and sacrifice of a crucified Redeemer. He was conscientious. Duty was supreme. He went anywhere, at all times and under any circumstances, when duty called. He neither spared himself nor counted the cost. His convictions were positive, and he held to them tenaciously; proof positive of an opposite character alone could change him. He was loyal to Christ. His education was begun in the "old field schools" of his native county. In October, 1845, his classical education commenced under his brother, Prof. J. J. Potts, a graduate of Dickinson College, Pa., who taught at Hillsborough, and with whom he continued until 1850. He then entered the sophomore class at Randolph-Macon College at the last half-session, and completed it with honor. He did not again return to college, but continued his course privately by all assistance he could get. "I determined," he says, "not to rest until I had completed the regular college course." In 1856, being stationed in Williamsburg, Va., he occasionally attended lectures at William and Mary College, and the president and the professors assisted him in his studies, so that he was enabled to complete it to his satisfaction. "True," he says, "it was completed in part privately, yet not the less perfectly." On June 3, 1858, through the influence of Col. G. W. Carter, Baylor University, Tex., conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The call to the ministry was initial in his case, not merely a setting apart of the Church, but a Divine call, of which he was assured and which he dared not disobey: He could not tell when the impression first came to him that he must preach. It was connected with his earliest recollections, and deepened as religion developed in his heart. He felt the apostolic "woe if he preached not the gospel." He says there came to him the inner conviction, "Preach Christ and save your own soul, or refuse to preach Christ and lose your own soul." Diffidence and love of retirement led him to keep the inner workings of his soul to himself, and to try to satisfy them otherwise than by obedience. Wise friends suspected them, spoke to him on the subject, and he was led to declare them. His Church heard of them with gladness, rallied around him, though he was in no sense publicly exercising the talent God had committed to him, and recommended him as a suitable person for an exhorter. On September 6, 1852, at White Post in Clarke County, one of the appointments on the Loudon Circuit, Washington District, Virginia Conference, he was licensed to preach. For about one year (prior to his entrance into the Conference on trial in October, 1853) he assisted Rev. W. G. Foote on the Fairfax Circuit, preaching his first sermon of twenty minutes at Dranesville, December 5, 1852, from the text Isaiah iii. 10, 11. He occupied the active relation of an itinerant preacher till November, 1874. Then he was supernumerary for seven years, through a throat affection, conducting during this time the Ashland Institute, in Ashland, Va. Again he entered the active ranks, only to lay aside his work for the superannuate relation when increasing years called a halt in November, 1906, at the Portsmouth Conference. He loved the country, and his work was mostly confined to circuits, but he held some of the best of these in the bounds of the Virginia Conference. He attended to the charges committed to his care, both looking after his pulpit and visiting from house to house. None committed to his care were neglected. His ministry was fruitful. Conversions attended upon his preaching. Hundreds will claim him as their spiritual father in the last day. His wife preceded him to the grave about a year. Four sons remain. All are members of the Virginia Conference; two, Revs. E. A. and E. J. Potts, occupying the supernumerary relation; two being effective—Rev. R. H. Potts, of Monument Church, Richmond, and Rev. T. N. Potts, D.D., presiding elder of the Eastern Shore District. His sickness was due to pneumonia and lasted about a month. He bore it with patience and fortitude. He had not expected his end, and his loved ones had hoped for his recovery. By reason of deafness increasing toward the end, he spoke little, and it was difficult, almost impossible, to communicate with him. At the close he was unconscious, and no last message came from him, but none was needed. He had lived in view of eternal realities. The mysteries of the unseen engaged his attention. His copy of "The Christian Doctrine of Immortality," by Salmond, which lay on his desk in his room, bears the markings of careful reading. Funeral services were conducted at the home in Amelia Courthouse on Tuesday, April 29, by Rev. E. T. Dadmun, his presiding elder, assisted by Revs. C. C. Wertenbaker and J. E. Daniels. At the grave in Hollywood, Richmond, the last sad rites were tenderly said by his classmate, lifelong friend, and former presiding elder, Rev. W. E. Judkins, D.D., assisted by Rev. T. W. McSimpson, D.D., and Rev. Ernest Stevens; and he was laid away amid the sympathetic presence of many clerical and other friends, under beautiful floral tributes, to await the call of the last trumpet of resurrection.—W. E. Jenkins.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? All the preachers passed in examination of character. Walter G. Parker withdrew from the ministry and membership of our Church.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? I. L. Burrow, W. K. Biggs. 2.

ISHAM L. BURROW was born in Carroll County, Tenn., December 7, 1833; died in Altus, Ark., June 20, 1913. He was married to Miss Elizabeth R. Burrow on March 14, 1858. To this union there were seven children born. He was licensed to preach in 1857. He joined the Memphis Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1860, and served several pastoral charges in that Conference; was president of Andrew College two years. He transferred to the Arkansas Conference in 1869, and was stationed at Lewisburg. He served his full quadrennium in this pastoral charge, teaching school in connection with his pastoral duties. He was stationed two years at Clarksville, from which place he moved to Altus, Ark., where in 1876 he established the Central Collegiate Institute, which is now Hendrix College. There have been few things among us more heroic than his work in founding Central Collegiate Institute. He poured into that enterprise, small though it was, sweat, toil, faith, and prayer. For its day, and for his resources, it was a great undertaking. The Methodist Church in Arkansas will ever owe his memory a debt of gratitude for what he accomplished there. In 1884 he sold the Institute to the Little Rock and Arkansas Conferences, and it was subsequently moved to Conway, the Altus property again falling into his hands. He then, with indomitable energy, inaugurated what was known as Hiram and Lydia College. In this college as well as Central Collegiate Institute, while under his supervision, many a young preacher and many a preacher's child received gratuitous tuition. My four children were in the Hiram and Lydia College four years. Rev. B. M. Burrow, for some time an honored and respected member of this Conference, is his eldest son, upon whose shoulders the mantle of his sainted and gifted father seems to have fallen. How literally true it is, in this case, "Though dead, he yet speaketh" (in the person of his son). Thank God for a preacher who has bequeathed to the Church a gifted, consecrated son to take his place in the pulpit, when he himself is no more among us. While president of the college at Altus, Brother Burrow was most of the time either presiding elder of the Clarksville District or preacher in charge of Altus Circuit, thus doing the work of two men. When Oklahoma became a State, Bishop Hendrix appointed him presiding elder, and sent him out there to organize or reorganize our forces in the new State. I am told that he organized the Oklahoma City District. He remained out there only two years, when he returned to his lovely home in Altus and resumed his teaching and preaching. Brother Burrow was preëminently a college man; in fact, he was a teacher before he was a preacher, and he did this combination work all through his life. The college or school-room had a peculiar fascination that was hard for him to resist. He was once a candidate for State Senator. Had he been elected, no man in the State would have filled the place with more honor and distinction than I. L. Burrow. If he ever had any other political aspiration, I never heard him mention it. He was a bold, original thinker, a strong preacher, a fluent speaker, prepossessing in his appearance, dignified and courteous in his bearing. With his penetrating eyes and captivating voice, he was calculated to attract and was capable of interesting and instructing any intelligent audience upon any subject he might choose. We have very few I. L. Burrows in our midst today. Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel? He leaves an invalid wife, three sons, and a daughter to mourn his taking away. May they be a family unbroken in the Kingdom above!—S. S. Key.

W. K. Biggs was born February 21, 1856, and answered the last roll call November 6, 1913, having been confined to his bed only one full day. Two days before his death he drove a friend ten miles as an accommodation, though he was not at all well. Returning home, he took his bed, and while all was done that was possible, it was of no avail. Although he was taken so unexpectedly, we have every assurance that he was ready. His funeral was conducted by Revs. J. W. Crichlow and George W. Williams. The business houses of Quitman all closed for the funeral. We have but little data of Brother Biggs's early life. He was married three times. His last wife was the daughter of Dr. Woodward, of Boone County. She and several children survive to mourn their loss. Brother Biggs was received into the Arkansas Conference from the Methodist Protestant Church at Eureka Springs November 19, 1890, Bishop Fitzgerald presiding. His appointments were as follows: Powell Circuit, Valley Springs, Bellefonte, Clinton, Mount Vernon, Clinton a second time, Valley Springs a second time, Gassville, and Quitman Circuit. Brother Biggs had staying qualities, and could be returned to former works. In twenty-three years he served only six charges, one of these three years, one four, one five, and one eight. He was always true and faithful, and could be trusted fully. He was much loved for his own and the work's sake. He preached well. This was his strong forte. The pulpit was his throne. Souls were saved and the Church built up under his ministry. We, his brethren, miss him and pray Heaven's richest blessings on his loved ones.—D. J. Weems.

JOHN WALKER NEWMAN, D.D.—In the death of such men as Dr. Newman we note the passing from the great arena of life a type of manhood such as the world will never behold again. He belonged to that heroic band who gladly went into the wilderness, braving its hardships, in order to lay the foundations broad and deep upon which has been builded this glorious civilization which we now enjoy, and of which we are so prone to boast. We, their successors, are living in comfort and comparative ease because they struggled, suffered, and lived lives of noblest self-sacrifice. Well might the younger men of the North Alabama Conference erect a monument to the memory of such men as Drs. Anson West, W. C. McCoy, T. G. Slaughter, F. T. J. Brandon, V. O. Hawkins, and J. W. Newman, and at this shrine with uncovered heads bow in humblest reverence. A brief review of the life under discussion will reveal the fact that Dr. Newman was a great man viewed from any standpoint. In the first place, he was a man of noble ancestry. His father and mother, Moses C. and Elizabeth Smith Newman, belonged to the famous South Carolina stock. He was born October 23, 1846, at Van Buren, Ala., and like his blessed Lord the early years of his life were spent in quietude. At the age of seventeen years we get the first glimpse of a star rising in the firmament of humanity which was destined to shine with more than ordinary luster. At this time the Southland was engaged in a struggle which was commanding the admiration of all mankind, but the odds were against her. The ranks of the Confederacy were becoming thinner. The illustrious Lee was calling, and a slender, modest, frail lad in a quiet North Alabama home heard that call, and when only seventeen summers had kissed his cheeks he donned the immortal gray, offered himself upon the altar of his country, and there the sacrifice remained until the roar of artillery had been silenced and the tragedy of Appomattox had become a fact in history. Who that knew Dr. Newman during the last thirty-five years of his life could think of him as a man of war? And yet, there throbbed in his noble soul that patriotism without which no man can be great. The second test of Dr. Newman's sterling manhood came when the storm-clouds of the Civil War had passed. Back to his home came this stripling of a lad, for at this time he had not reached his majority. It is not necessary to describe the fearful conditions which existed among his people at this period. A land whose wealth had been fabulous was now in beggars' rags. A people who had given the world a social standard which before had never been attained, and will never again be repeated, were now scattered as sheep without a shepherd. It was a time when the stoutest hearts were tried. A time when the temporal and spiritual interests must be relieved. True to the noble spirit which ever actuated the subject of this sketch, he cast his lot with the forces which battled for the highest and the holiest. Turning away from the market-place where he might have accumulated material wealth, he gave himself to the simple little country schoolhouse, and for two years sought to help the youth of his country. The greatest figure in our nation's history next to the pioneer preacher is the country school-teacher. At the close of this period that Voice which had heretofore been his guide called him again to a still higher work, and in 1870, under the touch of that holy man, Dr. T. G. Slaughter, he laid himself unreservedly upon the altar of God's Church, was granted a license to preach the blessed gospel of Jesus Christ; and from that moment until the angels came for him in the district parsonage at Gadsden, he was ever to be found at the post of duty. One of the most beautiful features of Dr. Newman's life was his fidelity. Never was plumed knight more loyal to his liege lord than was this man to Jesus Christ. In November of the same year when granted a license to preach, he knocked at the door of the North Alabama Conference asking admission on trial. It is needless to say he was admitted; for there was something about young Newman which made him instantly attractive and appreciated. We find him now where Heaven had ordained that he should be. Dr. Newman ran the entire gamut of an itinerant Methodist preacher's life. He traveled the circuit, filled the station, and directed the affairs of the district. His first work was Fayette Courthouse Circuit. This work lay far back in the woods during the early days of our Conference, and he who would serve those people must meet with many hardships, privations, struggles, and self-denials. How well this young preacher did his work the Minutes of that time will tell; and better still, those who yet live in that section gladly testify of his consecration and devotion. His rise to prominence in our Conference was phenomenal. Very few among us have had such success and attainment, for at the expiration of nine years we find him presiding elder of the Decatur District, and in two more years he is pastor of our leading appointment, First Church, Birmingham. Few men possess the adaptability which was his. By nature he was an aristocrat. He was elegant, he was cultured. In the atmosphere of refinement he was at home. But those of us who have met him in the home of meager means observed that he knew what to do and what to say there. Hundreds of cabins in North Alabama have been made brighter by his visits, and thousands of hearts have been made lighter by his warm hand-shake and tender words of sympathy. Like the gospel which he preached, he knew no social lines; all men were brothers. As a pastor he had few equals. He possessed the peculiar gift of knowing his people. In every condition he knew just what ought to be said and done, and he was at his best when in the presence of some great sorrow which had fallen upon some of the flock. As a preacher he was far above the ordinary, and there were times when his pulpit efforts rose to that lofty plane of eloquence which entitled him to a place among the greatest preachers of his time. His messages ever bore the mark of the student of God's Word. He was a helpful preacher. His utterances were spiritually chaste, his thought was lofty, and his sermon carried with it the fragrance of a deep spirituality. Though denied the advantages of the seminary, he was scholarly; and better than that, he was evangelical. Time and again have I seen him in the tent and in the modest country church with tears streaming down his cheeks, his great long arms outstretched, and his soul aflame with a holy passion, as he pleaded with men to come to Christ. Allow the quotation of his own words: "Preaching to me has been a supreme privilege and pleasure, and pastoral work a fountain of blessing unspeakable." As a presiding elder, the Southern Methodist Church never produced one better. He esteemed the office a high and sacred trust. In the Quarterly Conference he was gentle and painstaking, giving diligent attention to every item of business. This feature of the work was no light matter with him. As a member of the Bishop's cabinet he did his work in the fear of God. In the light of eternity, when all earthly transactions shall be given their proper setting, this fact will be revealed—that he never willfully wronged a fellow-preacher. He had the pleasure of receiving every honor in the power of his Conference to bestow, and many more came to him from the General Conference, and at the hands of the College of Bishops. And let this be said to his everlasting credit, these honors came to him unsought on his part, and never did he use them for personal glory. He had but one overpowering ambition, and that was to be used for the greatest good for his Church and his Lord. He was not without his critics, but they were to be found among men who did not know him. A few of his brethren saw him as one haughty, reserved, and too dignified. Oh, that they might have gotten close enough to have felt his great sympathetic heart! He was dignified, and could not be otherwise. It was as impossible for him to be hilarious when presiding at a District Conference, or to sit around the drug store telling stories which smack of the vulgar, or to sit on the church steps smoking during the session of the Annual Conference, as it would be for an eagle to make its abode in a swamp. He abhorred sham, and shrank from cheap newspaper notoriety. He did have an ambition to be great, but his standard of greatness is to be found in the life of the Man of Galilee. Much more could be written would time and space permit. Before closing this imperfect sketch, allow me to say that Dr. Newman's life was great and glorious. Forty-three years an itinerant Methodist preacher without interruption; never once absent from roll call at the Annual Conference; six years a circuit rider; twenty-six years a station preacher; eleven years a presiding elder; twice a delegate to the General Conference; delegate to the World's Missionary Conference in New York, 1900; delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, London, England, 1901; sixteen years a member of the Epworth League General Board; twenty-two years the Secretary of his Annual Conference, and never did Conference have one more efficient. Had he lived in apostolic times, he would have been the companion of the Apostle to the Gentiles, for like him he could cry, "What can separate me from the love of Christ?" And again, when the evening shadows were falling, he could justly say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." Those who had the unspeakable pleasure of being near him during those days when God was putting on the last touches preparing him for his triumphal entrance into the Eternal City, testify that it was a benediction to be there. He has gone, and we miss him from the Secretary's desk. We feel that this Conference session is incomplete without his noble form in our midst, but his memory shall linger with a fragrance like incense from the morning altar until God shall call us home, when we shall see him again.—George Stores.

V. O. HAWKINS, D.D.—When Virgil O. Hawkins ceased at once to labor and to live and ascended to his great reward from the parsonage at Lineville, Ala., on the morning of March 18, 1913, there went on the roll of the distinguished dead of the North Alabama Conference the name of one of the truest and most exemplary ministers, who ever held membership in its ranks. Dr. Hawkins, back to the days when most of us were boys, was one of the outstanding figures of the Conference. He was one of the pioneers who made it what it is to-day. And in all the later years of the growth of the Conference, he continued to be a man whose course carried weight and whose personal influence over the lives of his brethren was large and wholesome. For forty-five years this man of God took his marching orders as a Methodist itinerant. It would be impossible to sum up the fightings and fears, the hardships and privations, the toils and triumphs of that long period of service in the ministry of the Word. Suffice it to say, he died and went home to God with no blemish on his record. He endured hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. He kept the faith and finished his course with joy.

Dr. Hawkins was born August 5, 1847, in Pickens County, Ala., a county that has made large and rich contribution to Methodist leadership. He was well born, his forebears being of clean, strong North Carolina stock. Nature endowed him richly with a superb physique, a strong intellect, and a royal heart. On this basis of native endowment he builded industriously and systematically. While he did not bear the diploma of a college, he was an educated man in the broadest sense of the word. In matters of Methodist doctrine, discipline, and history he had few superiors. In general theology he was widely and accurately informed. While he did not employ the scholastic terms of philosophy, yet he had digested its essential subject-matter. On current events he showed a keen observation and a discriminating analysis. It is not surprising, therefore, that this preparation made him a preacher of no ordinary quality. His sermons bore the mark of personality. They were never mere echoes of what he had read or heard but had not made his own by the process of intellectual digestion. They were crammed with thought and mellow with the rich personal experience of a man who spoke that which he knew and testified that which he had seen. I have rarely heard a preacher who more nearly got at the heart of the gospel in his every deliverance. He passed by the incidental and drove straight to central issues. Hearing him, one seemed to be lifted out of time and place and to stand in eternity face to face with God. No ordinary man in intellectual gifts and cultivation, Dr. Hawkins was preëminent in that indefinable something we call personality—a thing most easily recognized and most difficult of analysis. No one ever faced him who did not feel the presence of a royal, creative character. Some of his traits are so outstanding that it is not difficult to write them down. I think he did not know the meaning of fear. Both physically and morally, he was one of the most courageous men I have ever known. When issues arose over which good men differed, one did not have to take a transit to locate V. O. Hawkins. He had no concealments. He lived in the open. He found his positions for himself, and never hesitated to declare and to defend them. He combined with the strength of virile manhood the gentleness and tenderness of womanhood. His affectional life was rich and broad and deep. He loved his brethren with the strength of a passion, and in return he drew many to him and held them through life in the bonds of holy friendship. There are not a few men in the ranks of the North Alabama Conference who will remember through life Dr. Hawkins's interest in them as young preachers. Toward his young brethren his heart seemed to turn instinctively. As a presiding elder his ministry to the ministry themselves was unceasing and upon the highest plane; and yet it was never of that offensive sort that lectures and criticises. It was a ministry of tact, because it grew out of genuine interest in the individual. The range of Dr. Hawkins's service in the Conference indicates his abilities and the confidence that was reposed in him. In the pastorate he served Luxapalila, Vernon, Pickensville, Shelby Iron Works, Town Creek, Northport, Weaver, Decatur, Jacksonville, Talladega, Dadeville, Hartselle, and Lineville. For seventeen and a half years he served in the presiding eldership, on the Gadsden, La Fayette, Birmingham, Decatur, Tuscaloosa, and Albertville districts. He was a trustee of the Southern University, a member of the General Conference that met in Richmond, and for a time President of the Athens Female College. In these positions he was faithful and successful. His brethren loved to honor him, and he never disappointed their trust. Surviving our departed father and brother are a widow, two sons, and one daughter. The daughter is with her mother, to comfort and stay her. One son, Adolphus, is in New York. The other son, Rev. V. H. Hawkins, is a member of the North Alabama Conference, and is filling the charge made vacant by the death of his father. Another son, Rev. Eugene H. Hawkins, strong, brilliant, and glorious in his fine young manhood, died some years ago while serving as presiding elder of the La Fayette District. All that was mortal of our beloved comrade and brother was laid to rest in the cemetery at Lineville amongst those he loved and served at the last. We shall miss him sorely; but we rejoice that he lived long and well, and that he has found his place in the ranks of the triumphant host who have died in the Lord. He rests from his long and arduous toils, but his works shall follow him for many a year.—J. H. McCoy.

RUFUS NICHOLSON was born November 7, 1833; professed religion at the age of thirteen, and three years later united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the age of twenty he was licensed to exhort, and in 1855, with Cicero Dobbs, was licensed to preach. In 1856 he joined the Alabama Conference, which was held that year at Tuskegee, and was appointed to the Hancock Mission with eleven appointments, which he served one year. The next year he was appointed to the Black Warrior Mission with thirteen appointments, which he served one year. In 1858 he was married to Miss S. C. Bogle, and for two years served the Ashville Circuit with eighteen appointments. In 1860 he was appointed to the Gadsden Circuit with eleven appointments, which he served for two years. In 1862 he received appointment to the Lebanon Circuit with twenty-three appointments, which he served for two years. For the next two years he was a local preacher, and in the fall of 1866 was readmitted and appointed to the Center Circuit with ten appointments, which he served for two years. In 1868 he was sent to the Coosa Valley Circuit with thirteen appointments, which he served for two years. In 1870 the North Alabama Conference was organized, and at this Conference Brother Nicholson located, and remained in this relation for four years. In 1874 he was readmitted and sent to the Langston Circuit with seven appointments, which he served for two years. In 1876 he took the supernumerary relation on account of his wife's health; and in the fall of 1877, his wife's health being no better, he located, and remained in this relation for fourteen years. In 1890, at the Conference held in Birmingham, he was readmitted and appointed to the Valley Head Circuit with eight appointments, which he served for two years. In 1892 he was sent to Hoke's Bluff Circuit with eight appointments, which he served for two years. In 1894 he was sent to the Langston Circuit, which he served for one year. . . . In 1897 he was sent to McTyeire Memorial in Alabama City, which he served for two years. In 1899 he was superannuated, which honorable relation he sustained until his death, June 12, 1913, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Minerva Smith. On the fifth day of October, 1905, Brother Nicholson's wife went to heaven, and ever since that day he has been studying more and more about going too. To Brother and Sister Nicholson there were born six children, five boys and one girl. The first child lived only six months, and a few years ago Virgil died, so four children still live: W. H. and R. L. Nicholson, of Ensley; M. G. Nicholson and Mrs. Minerva Smith, of Collinsville. Truly, "a good man has left us": one who threw himself into the forest and blazed the way for present-day Methodism; a man who lived close to God and delighted in His service as long as he was able to go. I heard him preach next to the last sermon that he ever preached, on Saturday before the first Sunday in May. He preached on the Resurrection, at a decoration at Smith's Chapel, a church which he organized and helped to build. He seemed to be perfectly at himself, and preached with much feeling and power. Brother Joe I. Williams was at the funeral service and spoke of the Nicholson family as pioneers. He said that this country was a mere wilderness when Rufus's father settled at the foot of Sand Mountain, in Sand Valley, and that his home was a meeting-house and the preacher's home in those early days. Here was the nucleus of the Methodism of this country. From this home, which was a large one, there went out several Methodist preachers. Brother Nicholson was one of the most lovable men I have ever known. He was loyal to his Church and his pastor. Since he entered the superannuate relation he has never had a pastor who did not love him. He was one of those choice spirits who become more and more sweet when retired from active service. He was a soldier, who was just as loyal and brave in the quiet of his tent as he was on the firing line. On the twelfth day of June, at the early morning watch, he answered roll call and joined the triumphant host. Let the loved ones rejoice in the heritage left them by this heir of God and joint-heir with Jesus Christ; and may his life be an inspiration to us all!—J. T. Terry.

ALFRED MOORE YOE was born in Oxford, Ala., January 26, 1867, and died in Hartselle, Ala., January 17, 1913. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Oxford, Ala., when but a small boy. To all the obligations of church membership he was true through boyhood, youth, and young manhood. He received his education at Oxford College, under Prof. John L. Dodson. When in young manhood God called him to preach the gospel, like Paul, he "was not disobedient to the heavenly vision," but devoted all his powers to the answering of such call. Brother Yoe was granted a license to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Oxford Station while a pupil in college. On the fifteenth of April, 1891, he was married to Miss Tulliola Howe, of Huntsville, Ala., who through all these years bore bravely and cheerfully whatever hardships their lot contained. For a while it was necessary for him to turn aside from the ministry to assist his mother and sister in their business affairs, but all the while God pressed upon him the call to preach the gospel. He was admitted on trial into the North Alabama Conference at Gadsden, Ala., in November, 1895, and served the following charges: Rockford Circuit, 1895-8; Roanoke Circuit, 1898-1901; Munford Circuit, 1901-4; Piedmont Circuit, 1904-6; Columbiana Circuit, 1906-7; Madison, 1907-10. In November, 1910, he was appointed to Leighton, where he preached only twice, when he was stricken with paralysis, from which he never recovered. Thus his work was ended, but he was not permitted to enter into rest until after two years of waiting and suffering. Brother Yoe's ministry was not characterized by brilliancy, but by faithfulness and efficiency. His was a lofty devotion to his Lord, a sublime courage to champion the right, an ardent love for the Church and the Kingdom. As to his personal worth, I could pay no higher tribute than to say that through more than twenty-six years of intimate acquaintance and association in school life, business life, and as a Conference colaborer, I make as my own the following quotation from a letter written by his sorrowing wife to me: "In the twenty-two years we lived together I never discovered a flaw in his character." Brave, true, faithful soul, nobly didst thou serve thy Lord; and worthily dost thou wear the crown he giveth thee.—E. B. Norton.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? The Bishop called the roll of the Conference and the character of each member was passed. (In the answer to this question last year, it was stated that F. W. Brandon, instead of W. B. Woodall, had withdrawn from the Church and surrendered his credentials—an inadvertence which the editor of these Minutes deeply regrets.)

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? J. H. Chambliss. 1.

J. H. CHAMBLISS was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., July 17, 1849; joined the Methodist Church, June 4, 1871, at Mount Carmel, Tenn.; licensed to preach June, 1871. He joined the Tennessee Conference at Lebanon, Tenn., Bishop McTyeire presiding; ordained deacon at Franklin, Tenn., by Bishop McTyeire, October 12, 1873; ordained elder by Bishop Wightman at Fayetteville, Tenn., October 11, 1876. He was transferred to the Texas Conference in 1877, and to the old Northwest Texas Conference in 1889. During a long and useful life he served the following charges: Standing Rock Circuit, Nashville Circuit, White Creek Circuit, Celina Circuit, all in the Tennessee Conference; San Felipe Circuit, Anderson Circuit, Bedias Circuit, Cold Springs Circuit, Maysfield Circuit, Calvert Station, in the Texas Conference. In 1889 he transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference, in which he served Sweetwater Circuit, Dublin Station, Colorado Station, Cisco Station, West Circuit, Morgan Circuit, Rising Star Circuit, Haskell Station, Baird Station, Albany Station, and Goree Circuit, where he died October 23, 1913; twenty charges, covering forty years. He was married to Miss Angie Hall, August 9, 1877. As a man he was pure and clean in thought and deed, a Christian gentleman, every inch of him. As a friend he was transparent and truly unselfish. In his home life I have never seen anything more beautiful. He made home pleasant, and his love for his wife and children was unalloyed. His Church to him was the Church of his Lord and Master. He knew her doctrines, and could defend them when necessary. He loved his Church and gave her forty-two years of unselfish service on hard fields. Methodism is richer and stronger because he lived. To his Master he was loyal and true, conscious of his love and presence; his experience clear-cut and real. He tried daily to live as if the eyes of his Master were on him, and desired nothing higher than the consciousness that he had His approval. A brave, true man has fallen; he has answered the roll call in the skies. It is fitting that he should receive his discharge from the Master while on the battle line. May the God of all peace comfort his broken-hearted wife, who has borne with him the heat and burden of a long and useful ministry; and may the God of the fatherless be the guide of the lonely and orphaned son and daughter, and may they keep sacred and untarnished his good name, and ever make their father's God their God.—M. M. Beavers.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their character passed, except that of F. G. Cox, expelled from the ministry and membership of the Church.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

WALKER LEWIS, D.D.—The many friends of Dr. Walker Lewis were greatly surprised and very sorry when they first learned that he was seriously ill. He had always seemed so healthful and vigorous, so cheerful and full of life and energy, that it was hard and sad to think of him as being unable to go about his usual and helpful work. I, at least, could not recall that he had ever been hindered by sickness or otherwise in the discharge of his duties during the nearly forty years that I have known him. I looked upon him as the embodiment of physical strength and intellectual and spiritual life. He manifested a wonderful capacity and equipment for a broad range of work and adaptation for a varied line of duties. It was sad to know that he was sick, and the sadness increased as he grew worse and then passed away, April 15, 1913. Dr. Lewis was a member of a gifted family. His father, Rev. Josiah Lewis, was a man of vigorous mind and rigid integrity, a man who left an impress on his family and Church that will abide. His seven sons were all men of talent and efficiency, and were recognized as potent factors in the world's work. Walker ranked among the first in this galaxy of intellectual men. In fact, he ranked high in any intellectual circle in which he moved. He was born May 11, 1847, in Washington, Ga., that splendid old town of Southern chivalry and learning. He was brought up in the Methodist—shifting but always Christian—home of his itinerant father. His early education was obtained in the schools where they lived from year to year, and then at Emory College, where he graduated in 1868. His education, however, was never completed. He was a student to the time of his departure, and no doubt he will ever be a close student in the glorious Beyond. He learned his lessons well here, and thereby gained an ever-broadening mind, and it seems reasonable that there will be a larger development in the purer and better university above. I have been informed that when his youngest brother graduated at Emory, his father, Rev. Josiah Lewis, was presented with a gold-headed cane as an appreciation of the fact that he had sent seven sons to that institution for higher training. After his graduation at Emory, Dr. Lewis taught school for five or six years, and was a successful teacher. During that time—that is, in 1871—he married Miss Lula Trammell, a member of that distinguished family of Georgia Methodists. They had one daughter who died quite young, and four sons who survive him. In all of his relations to these members of his family he proved himself a wise and most devoted husband and father. In 1874 he joined the North Georgia Conference, and for nearly forty years pursued his high vocation with rare judgment and fidelity. In every class of work or appointment his devotion to duty was the same, his integrity as a man was unwavering. The country church committed to his care was no less important than the larger ones of which he was often pastor. He was highly appreciated and greatly loved while in charge of many of the largest churches in Georgia, also in Nashville, Little Rock, Kansas City, and Montgomery. He manifested a great degree of aptness, wisdom, and fidelity in the delicate and responsible office of presiding elder. As agent in the educational work of the Church he succeeded beyond the most liberal expectations. In fact, his deep convictions of duty, his lifetime love for the Church of God, and his tender and profound sympathy for all people in all conditions, gave him a happy equipment for any and all tasks that were committed to him. Walker Lewis was not only a man of vigorous native intellect, but a man of unique mind; he thought in his own way, and expressed his thoughts in the purest diction and with great force. He was a close student, and his mind had peculiar power of penetration into the deep things of God's Word or the themes before him. This made him a preacher or speaker of rare ability, and one whom the people delighted to hear. There was an influence in him that took hold upon young people generally, and enabled him to reach their hearts and draw them to the Church and to Christ. People of other denominations, also, admired and loved him. There was nothing narrow or stingy about this man of God. He was ready to help to the utmost of his ability every needy individual and every good enterprise. For a long time he paid annually five hundred dollars to missions, and was a liberal contributor to the cause of Christian education and other claims as long as he was able. He seemed to delight in opening his heart and hand for the help of his brethren, and then for suffering humanity. He was a brother to every one who would allow him to be so. I think the chief characteristic of Dr. Lewis was his conscientious and fearless integrity—integrity in all lines of duty. He wanted the truth everywhere and in all of its applications, and when he found it he was brave and unwavering in its presentation. Integrity seemed to be his ideal or watchword, as it marked his course through life. It was manifest in his conduct as a son and brother, as a student preparing for the battle of life, as a child and servant of his God, as a loyal member of his Church and Conference, as a wise and orthodox expounder of the Word of Life, as a husband and father, and, as far as I could see, in all his relations in life. He had his weaknesses—perhaps we might call them faults—but they were not such as result from a selfish or bad heart, nor such as to discount or contaminate his work. A man may live in the open, in the sunlight of God's Kingdom, and yet at times in such a world as ours be deflected from his course while still aiming for the highest. As I saw him, Dr. Lewis was sincere, honest, loyal, and faithful in his efforts to live up to the professions he was making before God and men; and the kind, gentle, and modest spirit that was always manifest in him caused those who knew him to forget any faults while they loved the man and appreciated his earnest efforts in doing good. We miss him, and will miss him until we all meet in the great family above. Dr. Lewis was admitted on trial by the South Georgia Conference in December, 1873; and at the same Conference he was elected a local deacon, and was ordained by Bishop Paine. He was elected an elder in December, 1874, and was ordained by Bishop Pierce. He was admitted into full connection in December, 1875. The following is the list of appointments served by him: 1874, East Macon and City Mission; 1875, Quitman; 1876, Dawson and Smithville; 1877-9, First Street, Macon; 1880-1, Americus; 1882-5, St. Luke, Columbus; 1886-7, St. Paul, Columbus. In December, 1887, he was transferred to the Tennessee Conference, and during 1888-90 he was pastor of West End Church, Nashville, and Chaplain of Vanderbilt University.

In October, 1890, he was transferred to the North Georgia Conference, where he remained for eleven years, serving the following appointments: 1891-4, Trinity, Atlanta; 1895-7, Oxford District; 1898-1900, First Church, Atlanta; 1901, Gainesville District. In November, 1901, he was transferred to the South Georgia Conference, and was appointed presiding elder of the South Macon District. At the close of the year 1902 he was transferred to the Little Rock Conference and stationed at First Church, Little Rock. A few years later he was transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference and stationed at Kansas City, Mo. In November, 1905, he came back to the North Georgia Conference, and remained a member of this body until his death. In 1906 he was second man at Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta. In 1907-8 he was Field Secretary of the Crittenton Mission; 1909, First Church, La Grange; 1910, Chaplain of La Grange Female College; 1911, Conference Secretary of Education. During a part of that year he was pastor of Court Street Church, Montgomery, Ala. In 1912 he was pastor of First Church, Rome. At the last session of this Conference he was appointed Vice President of La Grange College. A few months later his health began to fail, and on April 15, 1913, the spirit of this soldier of the cross responded to the call of the Captain of his salvation and went to receive the reward of his earthly labors.—W. F. Glenn.

JAMES SIDNEY BRYAN.—The death of Rev. James Sidney Bryan, occurring at the parsonage in Decatur, March 16, 1913, marks one of the distinct losses coming recently to our Church and the North Georgia Conference. Esteemed as a citizen, loved and honored as a pastor, he was regarded as one of the most thoughtful, logical, and scriptural preachers among us. He was born in Randolph County, Ga., November 4, 1846. His parents were David Bryan and Nancy Battle Bryan, of Monroe County, Ga., both of whom died within twenty days of each other, leaving their infant son, at the tender age of three years, to be reared and trained by others. Soon after the death of his parents he was carried by his father's sister, Mrs. Ingram, to her home in Texas, where, under her judicious and godly influence and training, he remained until he reached the age of seventeen years, when he enlisted in the Confederate Army and joined Company C, First Texas Legion, in which he served until the close of the War between the States.

This ended, he returned to his Texas home, remaining there until he was nineteen years of age, when he returned to Georgia and matriculated as a student in Emory College. He was converted at the age of ten years, while returning from Sunday school in the country, on a beautiful Sabbath morning. He often referred to this event as one of the brightest in his history. While at Emory College, in 1867, another crisis in his life was reached, and after a season of spiritual darkness he was wonderfully blessed while engaged in prayer on the college campus, with a fellow-student, W. P. Lovejoy, now a valued and beloved member of the North Georgia Conference. He then joined the Church and entered upon that consistent Christian life which resulted in the building of a character firm as a mountain of granite and as unswerving in its purpose as was that of Joshua when he said, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." The last recognized utterance of his foster-mother as she lay dying was a prayer that God would call him to the ministry; and we see in his later life how, in His own time and manner, God answered that prayer. When he had graduated at Emory College, in 1870, he studied law in the office of his uncle, Judge Alexander Speer, in Griffin, Ga.; and when ready to be admitted to the bar, he was so strongly impressed that it was his duty to preach that he abandoned all idea of practicing law, and was admitted into the North Georgia Conference, at Athens, in 1871. His first sermon was preached in Griffin, where he was licensed and recommended to the Conference, and under the influence of that sermon a barkeeper was converted. Thenceforward his career was that of a consistent, faithful, and humble minister of Christ, whose single aim was to do good and glorify God. Many will be the sheaves gathered through his instrumentality during a ministry of forty-one years, spent in the Master's service at many important stations and districts in the North Georgia Conference. His judicious marriage to the daughter of Cadesman Pope, Sr., and his faithful wife, Mrs. Susan E. B. Pope, brought to his aid and encouragement a wife who walked faithfully by his side in every path of duty, and who aided him in the bringing up of sons and daughters who now rise up and call their father blessed. He was the farthest removed from pedantry, and yet his critical knowledge of Greek and Latin and his fair attainments in Hebrew were well known to those most familiar with his career as a student and a minister. Modest almost to a fault, and unobtrusive to the highest degree, yet when the truth was imperiled or duty demanded it, he hesitated not to enter the arena of discussion, and with pen or voice showed himself the equal of many of whom the world knew much more. His sermons gave evidence of thoughtful study of the Word of God, while his newspaper communications, his review articles and papers written for special occasions, gave evidence of polemic powers of a high order, of accurate and critical scholarship, of intimate acquaintance with the Book of books, and of extensive and judicious research and reading. He looked not on his own things, but on the things of others, and would gladly have suffered wrong rather than to have wronged a brother. If called upon to mention a man in whose spirit there was no guile, whose conceptions of propriety and sense of duty were of the highest order, the name of James Sidney Bryan would instinctively fall from my lips. "His works do follow him," and his reward is sure. Brother Bryan's Conference history was as follows: He was admitted on trial by the North Georgia Conference in December, 1871; elected and ordained deacon in December, 1872; admitted into full connection in December, 1873, and elected and ordained elder in December, 1874. He served the following charges: 1872, Pike Circuit; 1873, Greenville and Trinity; 1874, Chalybeate Spring; 1875, Palmetto; 1876, Long Cane; 1877-8, Greenville and Trinity; 1879, Asbury, Augusta; 1880, Palmetto; 1881, Palmetto and Fairburn; 1882, Carrollton; 1883, Forsyth; 1884-5, Lithonia; 1886-8, Madison; 1889, Washington; 1890, Payne Chapel, Atlanta; 1891, Oconee Street, Athens; 1892-5, Griffin District; 1896-7, Milledgeville; 1898-9, Oxford District; 1900, Griffin District; 1901, Forsyth; 1902, Monroe; 1903-4, Sparta; 1905-8, Athens District; 1909-10, Marietta; 1911-13, Decatur.—Cadesman Pope.

GEORGE GILLMAN SMITH, D.D., was born December 24, 1836, in Sheffield, Newton (now Rockdale) County, Ga. He was baptized when quite young by Bishop Andrew; united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1846; was converted in Atlanta, Ga., in 1846; was licensed to exhort by Samuel Anthony, 1855; was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of St. John's Church, in Augusta, Ga., November 31, 1857, Dr. Alfred T. Mann acting presiding elder; was admitted on trial in the Georgia Annual Conference, in Washington, Ga., Bishop Robert Paine presiding, December 9, 1857. His first appointment was junior preacher on the Waynesboro Circuit, with W. J. Cotter preacher in charge. His love for his senior was deep and warm and lasted as long as he lived, he having dealt with him as a real father in the gospel; and remembering his wife, too, as a "warm-hearted, handsome, stirring, and devout young woman, who took the young preacher to her heart as if he had been a child." He was junior preacher, 1859—his second year—in Macon, Harwell H. Parks preacher in charge. Everywhere he went in his active rounds of preaching and visiting he was saluted as "Brother George." He was sent to the Forsyth Circuit in 1860, where he had the advantage of association with that nobleman of precious memory, George G. N. MacDonell, stationed in Forsyth. His next appointment, 1861, was to Cedartown, where he remained only a part of the year, being earnestly solicited by William Phillips, commander of Phillips's Legion, to take the chaplaincy of his command for service in the Army of Northern Virginia, and Bishop Pierce giving assent to his acceptance. Dr. Smith having been almost fatally wounded in battle, September 14, 1862, and, to the surprise of his comrades, physicians, and friends, having rallied sufficiently to do light work as a pastor at home, he was appointed December, 1862, by Bishop Andrew, to Macon Mission. His health failing in 1862, he superannuated at the Conference held in 1863, in Columbus. Still superannuated, he did not attend the Conference in 1864. He was appointed to Valdosta and Quitman, Florida Conference, for 1865, still holding his connection with the Georgia Conference. In 1866 he was transferred to the Baltimore Conference and stationed at East Baltimore for 1867; Lewisburg, W. Va., 1868-9. In 1870 he was transferred to North Georgia and stationed at Dalton; Marietta, 1871-2; Barnesville, 1873-4; La Grange, 1875-6; Milledgeville, 1877-8; Gainesville, 1879-80; Madison, 1881; Sunday School Agent, 1882-8; at the end of which year—1888—he asked for the superannuate relation, and having fought a good fight, his colors still up and his sword still unsheathed, his brethren, grateful for his effective service, sad at the thought of losing him from the ranks he had so highly adorned, and assuring him of their sincere appreciation and abiding love, granted his request. Dr. Smith's lineage shines brightly, running back as it does through Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia to the Mother Country, adhering to the Church of England until Methodism opened to his people an inviting fold. We find them also among the valiant defenders of liberty in the Revolutionary War. We find among his ancestry ministers of the gospel—his grandfather, Isaac Smith, prominent among the pioneers of Methodism; and we find them, nearer our own times, "adorning the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things." Dr. George Gillman Smith, Sr., father of the subject of this memoir, was a learned physician, deeply devout, highly endowed in mind, and familiar with a wide range in literature. His wife, Miss Susan A., daughter of Rev. John Howard, was of congenial tastes, together furnishing their children a pattern of great excellence for their imitation and inspiring them with purposes of high endeavor. The mother was educated at the Sparta Female Academy, then the best high school for girls and young ladies in Georgia. At the baptism of her son she broke down and wept, and the occasion was to all a season of distinct spiritual manifestation. In another respect Dr. Smith had an unusually good start. His first schooling was at Oxford, about the time Emory College was starting. In the Sunday school he had Capers's Catechism and Susie Capers, the Bishop's daughter, for a teacher. His father had moved to Atlanta when I first met him—twelve-year-old boy—bright as a sunbeam and full of energy, evidently a boy of affairs. Atlanta does not know now, and hardly anybody else knows, that George G. Smith, Jr., was the first newsboy on her streets. He managed to have papers furnished him from abroad, and for a boy, at that time, he did a thriving business. He had a great time selling the New York papers to the soldiers as they returned home from the Mexican War in 1846. Like other great and good men who have gone before, he had his trials, sometimes almost crushing burdens, depleting disappointments, fiery affliction from his youth up. How he made his grade has always been a wonder to all who knew him. To succeed as he had done, especially after barely missing death on the battlefield, and becoming a cripple for life, he had to master the art of suffering, and make impossibility his servant, all of which he did. There is a key to this Methodist itinerant preacher's marvelous life—his covenant, entered into with God, about the time he was contemplating joining the Georgia Conference. He was then nineteen years old, and it is dated June 31, 1855: "I, George G. Smith, believing that entire consecration to God is necessary to present happiness and eternal salvation, and believing that the command to be perfect even as the Father is perfect would not have been made unless grace to keep the command would be given upon asking in a proper spirit, I, now in the presence of God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and in the presence of the just made perfect, covenant, and call Heaven to witness that I consecrate body, soul, time, talents, influence, property (if God should be pleased to favor me), and all my powers entirely and wholly to God; and as he promised to reign in the heart of those who love and worship him, I yield all to him, and lay my body a willing sacrifice, a loving offering upon his altar, trusting in God to enable me to read understandingly the Holy Scriptures and obey his commandments; and, knowing my utter inability to do anything without his aid, I now yield myself into his hands, trusting in him now and forever." Then follow dates of the renewal of this sacred covenant, the last being April 23, 1876. In the four Conference examinations on the course of study, George G. Smith stood at the head of our class. It was characteristic of him, through life, to master, in his studies, what he took in hand. In the pulpit he was sound in doctrine, never swerving from the doctrinal integrity of Methodism. He was always intensely spiritual, and depended largely on persuasiveness, a gift in which none of the great preachers of his day, or of any other day, were deficient. He sought no excuse for allowing his call to preach to relinquish its hold upon him, he having interpreted his call to preach the gospel as a call for life. When he could no longer stand or sit in the pulpit, he preached from his fireside and rolling-chair. With tongue and pen he was ever ready to challenge any effort to lower any claim of Jesus Christ, his Saviour, upon the service and worship of mankind. He was familiar, for centuries back, with the camps of the enemies of our holy religion, and we well remember his timely and earnest warning of their purposes against the citadel of our faith. While furnished with all that an unanswerable polemic needs, and having never felt a flutter of fear for the stability of the "Rock of Ages," most of his life was devoted to pointing his storm-tossed fellowmen to the cleft in the "Rock," and beseeching them to enter it. Dr. Smith was twice married—first to Miss Sarah J. Onsley, daughter of Judge R. F. Onsley, of Macon, Ga., September 27, 1859. Of this marriage there were five children, of whom only two are living, Rev. Robert Onsley Smith and Susie J.; two having died in infancy, and a son, Baker McCallem, having died, aged twenty-one, in Waxahachie, Tex. His second marriage was to Miss Nannie Lynn Lipps, of West Virginia, December 25, 1870. Of this marriage there were four children; one dying at the age of two years; those surviving are Howard Anderson, Mary Bond, and Louis Gillman. Many and varied were the contributions of Dr. Smith to the secular newspapers of the country and the papers and periodicals of the Church, but the highest excellency he reached as a writer is set forth by the books he left us, which are as follows: Life of Bishop Francis Asbury; Life of Bishop James O. Andrew; Life of Bishop George F. Pierce; Life of Rev. John W. Knight; History of Methodism in Georgia and Florida; Story of Georgia and the Georgia People; Childhood and Conversion; Berry's Triumph; Harry Thornton; Boys in Gray; Mr. Hall and His Family. Booklets: From Darkness to Light; Walk in the Light; the Child and the Saviour; Three Catechisms. He was honored with the degrees of A.M. and D.D. by Emory College. Being called to Macon by other duties for twenty-seven years consecutively, I never neglected my duty to my lifelong friend and Conference classmate, but spent much of my time with him at his home in Vineville while there. My last visit came last spring. I saw that while the inner man was being renewed day by day, the outward was rapidly perishing — barely enough left to hold it together; but the officiating Levite within the tabernacle was still guarding against any abatement of his flame of devotion. Dr. Scruggs, of the South Georgia Conference, a former pastor and a much-loved friend, conducted his funeral service. As we recall his last days, you, my brethren, will think, with me, of a richly-laden vessel, long homeward bound, coming into port with steady helm, and dropping anchor amid the glad welcome of kindred, and comrades, and friends, thickly lining the shore, waiting to receive him into the everlasting habitations. His long voyage over, his perils all passed, his cargo safe, we will, in the sacred stillness of this memorial hour, think of his being at home, a partaker of the inheritance of the saints in light, where the "smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul."—George W. Yarbrough.

JAMES MADISON CLINE was born in York County, S. C., November 20, 1832; died near Benton, Ark., August 14, 1913. His mother died when he was an infant, and he was reared in the home of his mother's brother, James Neely, an elder in the Presbyterian Church. He was a devout child, and in early life showed an inclination toward the ministry. His uncle took great pride in him, giving him every possible advantage. After the usual preparation, he sent him to Oglethorpe University in Georgia, a Presbyterian institution. In his senior year he became dissatisfied with the doctrines of his Church, and on the advice of the president of the college he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Soon after, November 3, 1855, he was licensed to preach. In the fall of 1856 he was admitted on trial in the South Carolina Conference, and appointed to Newberry Circuit with Thomas Raysor; 1857, Bennettsville Circuit with Paul F. Kistler; 1858, Yorkville Circuit; 1859, Society Hill Mission; 1860, Albemarle; 1861, Ansonville; 1862, Morganton; 1863-4, Catawba; 1865-6, Rock Hill. The Minutes state that while he was thus appointed, part of this time he was in the Confederate Army. In 1867 he served South Charlotte Circuit; 1868, Pleasant Grove. About this time a great sorrow came to his life in the tragic death of his oldest daughter. There were but few bridges in those days. He was trying to cross a small stream, his little girl in the buggy with him, when they were thrown into the water and the child drowned. His mind staggered under the weight of grief, disqualifying him for service. He located at the end of the year and came to Arkansas. The next we hear of him he was readmitted, in the fall of 1870, into the Little Rock Conference and appointed to the Little Rock Circuit; 1871, to Collegeville and Mill Creek; 1872-5, Benton Circuit; 1876, Rockport Circuit; 1877-8, supernumerary; 1879, Benton Circuit; 1880, supernumerary; 1881, Austin; 1882, Maumelle; 1883-5, Galloway; 1886, Gurdon; 1887-8, supernumerary. In 1889 he was given Little River Mission; 1890, Lewisville; 1891, Ouachita; 1892, New Edinburg; 1893, McNeil. In 1894 he was superannuated, which relation he sustained till his death. He was married to Miss Mary McCoy, of Yorkville, S. C., October 27, 1856. To them were born six children; two survive him, Mrs. W. H. Scott, near Benton, Ark., and Rev. John W. Cline, President of Soochow University, China. He was a preacher of the old school. He dwelt mostly on the great themes of the gospel. His sermons were well built, nothing superfluous about them, and at times were attended with singular power. He was a circuit preacher, and was happy there. Though college bred, he felt honored to be a circuit man. Any system of education that takes the sympathies of the well-equipped preacher and teacher from the country people will bankrupt any nation. He was diligent and faithful, going from house to house, occupying new fields, organizing new Churches, enlarging every field assigned him. There are now strong stations and circuits where he practically began the work. Such men are the real civilization-builders, more so than mere money-makers, or politicians, or military leaders. Evidencing how well he wrought, two continents are brought under tribute to his influence. His only son has been in China for sixteen years, helping to build a Christian civilization for that great nation. His life became more beautiful with increasing age. A few years ago he seemed to pass from under every cloud, and thenceforth his skies were always sunny. He was the happiest man among us. His heart was aglow with love and good cheer. He did not grow old, but was always as fresh as the morning. Along with his Church interests, he studied the heavens, and his deliverances on astronomy attracted the attention of astronomers all over the world. He received many appreciative letters from them. He has finished his course with joy.—T. D. Scott.

GEORGE W. LOGAN, son of John C. and Dorcas Logan, was born in Clark County, Ark., near where the town of Okolona now stands, July 24, 1837. At an early age he entered Sunday school, where he learned to read. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in November, 1850, and was converted about a year after in a meeting held by B. C. and A. L. Weir. About the age of fifteen he felt a call to preach, and at twenty he felt it his duty to begin at once. He was licensed to exhort in August, 1858, and licensed to preach in September, 1859; ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce, at Arkadelphia, 1866; ordained elder by Bishop Wightman, 1875. For twenty-two years he was a local preacher, serving six years as a supply. In 1882 he was employed by the Conference to organize what was known as Mountain Mission. At the end of that year he was admitted on trial into the Little Rock Conference, and returned to Mountain Mission, where he remained another year, 1884-5. He served Falcon Circuit, 1886; Carolina, 1887-9; Stephens Circuit, 1890-1; Atlanta, 1892; El Dorado Circuit, 1893-4; Emmett, 1895; Richmond, 1896-7; Collegeville and Alexander, 1898; Okolona, 1899-1901; Holly Springs, 1902; Cherry Hill, 1903-4; Carolina, 1905; Prescott Circuit, 1906; Hampton, 1907; Social Hill, 1908; Malvern Circuit, 1909; Cherry Hill, 1910. This was his last charge. His work was about done. His decline was rapid, and after being a supernumerary a little more than three years, he died at his home in Arkadelphia, March 11, 1913. Brother Logan was married to Miss Mariel T. McLaughlin, July 14, 1858, who with three boys and three girls survives him. June 20, 1862, he was sworn into service as a Confederate soldier, and he served three years. The war over, he took his wife and child and settled on a farm in Pike County, near Murfreesboro, in which vicinity he continued to reside till he joined the Conference. He was a useful man. As a citizen he was honored and trusted. He served nine years as an official of his county. As a local preacher he was loved. His neighbors petitioned his presiding elder, Dr. Andrew Hunter, to put him on Murfreesboro Circuit as their pastor, which place he supplied in all five years. As a Conference man he was what we call a good preacher. His preaching was plain, sound, and evangelical. Everybody loved him. He was everybody's friend. His educational advantages were meager, but he knew God; he knew how to hold meetings, sing, pray, exhort, instruct the mourners; he got people converted and saved from their sins. Such men type our civilization more than our great financiers, military leaders, statesmen, or scientists. A people's civilization is determined by their religion, and the man who leads men to Christ is the man who ultimately determines the character of things with any people. He died in the county where he was born, and Clark County lost one of its most distinguished citizens when he passed away.—T. D. Scott.

JOHN H. RIGGIN, D.D.—One of the most familiar names in the roster of Arkansas Methodism during the past fifty years is that of Rev. JOHN H. RIGGIN. The name is frequent in the Minutes of every session of the Little Rock Conference in that time. His contributions to the Church papers have made his name a household word among the Methodists throughout the State. His long connection with the Church and his high responsible positions in it have given him a good name and a deserved place throughout Southern Methodism. His vigorous defense of Methodist doctrine and polity in the pulpit, in debate, in papers, and in pamphlets has made him well known and respected among the leaders of other Churches. His parents were George W. and Martha Riffin, and he was born October 7, 1834, in Pittsville, Md. He was born hungry to know, and it was well for him that he was; for he was to have almost no school advantages, and that insatiable hunger for knowledge was to urge him on to self-education. Before he was five years old he had read the New Testament through, and he said: "That was not so remarkable but for the fact that no other child in the community knew the alphabet at that age." Yet, with this mental eagerness, quickness, and ability, he had no encouragement or help except that of a "country school of the poorest character," until after he was twenty-one. At that age he went to Missouri, without means or letters of introduction, to make his way among strangers in a new country. However, he drew to himself friends, taught a country school a while, and had the good fortune to attend the last session of the Howard High School in Fayette, which was then presided over by Prof. Carr W. Pritchett. In that year (1857) Central College was organized, but young Riffin did not have the means to enter college, so continued to teach until the outbreak of the Civil War. He was a student all the while, mastering higher mathematics and attaining a good working knowledge of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. In the course of his life he gathered about him a good library of the best authors, and became exceptionally well read. No man has lived among us with better intellectual furnishings. His religious life began early. He distinctly remembered the reception of his parents into the Methodist Church in his fifth year, as well as the baptism of himself and three younger brothers at the same service. He said a family altar was established at that time, and that his home was ever afterwards Christian. Young Riggin was licensed to preach in June, 1860, in Glasgow, Mo. He proposed entering the itinerancy in 1861, but the war was on, and he entered the Confederate service. At first he was with the State Guard under General Price, and was at the siege of Lexington. In January, 1862, he entered the First Brigade under command of General Little. He was with this brigade at Elk Horn, Iuka, and Corinth. But he was called to preach, and the din of war did not drown the voice of that call. In the camps he felt a divine impatience to be about his work. In 1863, with the advice and help of some friends, he applied for and secured a position as chaplain. He often said that was the only time in his life that he asked for an appointment. He was assigned to duty in the Fifteenth Arkansas Infantry, commanded by W. W. Reynolds. He shared the fortunes of his company at Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Big Black, and Vicksburg. Then followed the surrender of the regiment, the parole, and in the fall the reorganization in parole camps near Washington, Ark. Half the regiment, mounted, were sent across the State to the Mississippi River, to receive arms. The young chaplain went with the boys, riding across the swamps in the bitterest weather of the winter to Gaines's Landing and return. On this trip the young chaplain won all hearts, and from that time every man was his friend. They heard him preach, great revivals followed, gambling and profanity gave way, tent prayer meetings were established, and a Sunday school was organized. He supplied the men with the New Testament, gathered text-books from whatever source possible, and instructed the men in grammar and mathematics; showing under such discouraging conditions his love for teaching. His regiment surrendered at Marshall, Texas, in 1865, and Riggin accompanied a remnant back to Arkansas. They passed through Rondo, near the site now covered by Texarkana. Calling to pay his respects to the Methodist preacher, he found him just recovering from typhoid fever and abandoning the work. Riggin met the presiding elder, John Pryor, and was appointed by him to finish out the year on Rondo and African

Mission. The "Wachitat" Conference (now the Little Rock) met in October of that year at El Dorado, and Riggin was admitted on trial along with Samuel G. Colburn, Benjamin O. Davis, James Stin- cil, George E. Butler, and William C. Adams. He was appointed that year to Monticello Station. For forty-four years his active ministry was without interruption, and in that time he served almost every kind of a charge and rendered almost every kind of service. Six years he conducted schools, eight years he spent on circuits and missions, nine years he occupied important stations, and twenty-one years he served as presiding elder. He was given to Arkansas by the fortunes of war, and was one of the heroic men who gathered and reorganized and revitalized our broken Methodism in this Conference after the war. He gave himself wholly to the Little Rock Conference, and never entertained a thought of going elsewhere or of undertaking any other work than that of a Methodist preacher. He was a member of the General Conference at St. Louis in 1890, at Memphis in 1894, and at Baltimore in 1898. Four years he was a member of the General Board of Missions. For more than twenty years he was a member of the Board of Trustees of Hendrix College, and he gloried in being one of the far-sighted and heroic band who founded that institution of learning and shaped its policy. He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Hendrix College in 1889. He is the author of "The Origin of the Baptists," "Origin of Infant Baptism," and other booklets that have had a wide circulation. Abundant and invaluable as his other services have been, it is as a preacher that Dr. Riggin is entitled to his greatest distinction. He drew all his thoughts that way. He was mighty in the Scriptures. He had a marvelous fund of general information. God blessed him with a most reliable memory that placed all needed facts at command. He had a logical mind that was quick to organize facts. His vocabulary was chaste, expressive, and set his invincible arguments in business dress. He was not fanciful, but after search a while in the deep things, or patiently and surely climbing to the heights, the prophet's vision came to him and he saw beyond what was written. He was painstaking, sure, and calm in the foundation of his discourse, but was apt to be fervent when he brought forth the capstone. His preaching was strong meat, and there was no greater feast to thoughtful, spiritual, and substantial Methodists than a sermon from Dr. Riffin when he was in a preaching mood. He preached all over Southern Arkansas for forty-five years, to the delight and edification of thousands. In all those years he bore the honor of being the best preacher in our Conference. He took the superannuate relation in 1909 and settled in Arkadelphia. He continued active in reading and writing until a short while before he passed from us. He was sick with la grippe in the early months of 1913. He was never able to recover, but gradually lost strength until May 30, when the weight of nearly eighty years proved too much for the worn body, and it was not able to follow the immortal Riffin farther. We buried the body from the Methodist Church in Arkadelphia on May 31, 1913; but the immortal, thinking, Christian preacher lives on.—W. P. Whaley.

COKE D. MANN fell on sleep at Bishopville, S. C., April 9, 1913. He was the youngest son of William and Sarah Mann; was born in Abbeville County, April 2, 1849; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his early years; married Miss Eliza Jane Milford, December 18, 1866; was called to preach, and after a struggle yielded; was licensed and entered our Conference in December, 1872. He served in almost every part of the State, from mountain to seaside, and always with much success. Over twelve hundred persons were received into the Church by him, and believers were instructed and built up in the faith. He was particularly strong in defending Methodist doctrines, and was sometimes called for outside his charges to meet those who assailed them. He was a member of the General Conference in 1902, and was active in its deliberations. Until a desperate illness in 1903, he was among the strongest of our members, both in body and spirit—every inch a man. He never fully recovered from that illness, and in December of that year he took a supernumerary relation and located in Walhalla, the scene of one of his most successful years in the ministry. Gaining a little strength, he was elected a member of the General Assembly of South Carolina, and was a leader from his first appearance in that body. He was chosen a trustee of Clemson Agricultural College, and discharged faithfully the duties of that post for years. Failing strength forced his retirement from all office and labor. Month by month the grip of disease became fixed more firmly, and the once splendid body grew weaker and weaker. Hoping for relief, he moved to the home of his son, Dr. J. L. Mann, in Greensboro, N. C., and later to his daughter's, in Bishopville, S. C. Stroke followed stroke until the "last enemy" was victor, and he yielded his spirit unto God who gave it. His last year was a season of quiet submission and patient resignation. His last moments were in undisturbed peace and confident expectation of everlasting life. Brother Mann was absolutely fearless, and he bowed to none but God. His independence was so decided that all were forced to mark it. His uncompromising advocacy of what he deemed right was so forceful that he won many friends—possibly sometimes strenuous opposers. His integrity was unchanging. He had a contempt for anything evasive or underhanded. He was true to his fellowmen, gentle to his friends, loving and loyal to his home and kindred. He loved God with a great love, and God honored him with a great success in life. He would willingly have gone to the stake and fagots for truth and Christ. As a preacher he was most impressive, as a Christian "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." When death called he was ready. Our brother is survived by the wife of his youth and later years and by four children: Dr. J. L. Mann, J. Homer Mann, Edward C. Mann, and Mrs. T. H. Tatum. They are the chiefest mourners, but their sorrow is shared by a host of friends and by us, his brethren of the Conference. But all of us are sure that the soldier of the cross, having fought the last fight and finished the course and kept the faith, has received the crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge gives to them that love his appearing.—John O. Wilson.

WHITEFOORD MCKENDREE DUNCAN lived and labored fifty-six years, from 1857 to 1913. In his young manhood he became a Christian, at eighteen. From Wofford College he graduated in 1884, in his twenty-seventh year. It was on this campus, where so many lifelong friendships have been formed, that we first met. There was a boy in college at that same time whose spirit and experience had combined to bring him to the conclusion (expressed on several occasions to me) that there was no such thing as friendship. The relationship existing between Duncan and myself for those years is only one proof of the fact that the boy was in grave error. It was not an uncommon thing when we were at college for men of full age to be there. Some with full beard and years enough behind them to enable them to know the value of the college days. Dr. Carlisle had a quotation he often used to encourage men of this class: "Never mind how late you come, just so you come fit." A boy of twenty-seven years in these days must be out of college at least six or seven years, or he thinks he has lost a great deal and, may be, the world has too. Brother Duncan wanted to "fit" himself for his life work, and it was not with him a question of years. How well he succeeded, his whole life testifies. He went to college with a well-defined Christian experience and positive Christian character. From his first appearance on the campus his influence was for good, and it was strong enough to make a decided impression. His was a heart of power. He would naturally get to the front, or, if you please, would be in the center and attract the attention of the group of boys he was in. This, I say, was just his natural quality—leadership. He did not have to try to attract attention. In those college days he was known as a good, strong preacher. His successful career is no surprise to any one of his college-mates. Had it been otherwise than as it has been, then there would have been great surprise. He was not hard to approach, and he had many friends—all the boys were his friends. He was a good speaker, whether in debate or on the rostrum. The boys were required to declaim at prayers before the faculty and student body. He could speak and think at the same time, and was therefore hard to handle in debate, and the flow of his speech was easy. He was always in a good humor. I doubt if any of the boys of his college days can remember an exception to that rule of his life. His interest was always in the best things—his time was redeemed. In short, he was an example to the student body of what the President of the college called a "well-rounded character." If he was ever called to a "private" talk with the President, it was to ask his help in saving some poor wayward boy. How much good he did there no one can ever know in this world. All the fine characteristics of his young manhood grew and developed with his years and surroundings. As a young pastor, and later as one of added experience, how attractive he was! One has only to go from charge to charge where he has served during these past years to find many scores of men and women who have lost a very dear personal friend in his going away. The art of making friends was only well begun at college. It was a fine art with him. He made himself friends by "making himself friendly." The children loved him. Many of them who were blessed by him in childhood, and who may not remember him well, are now grown and will ever be helped by the influence of his life. Greenville District felt the thrill of his strong personality for four years; the Methodists of Greenville, as well as the city itself, felt it for eight years. These must have been eight of the best years of his ministry, over one-fourth of the whole of it. He was at his best. After some years of more or less struggling with ill health, he seemed to regain his former vigor, greatly to the delight of his Conference brethren. His first year, however, on the Columbia District proved to us that all our hopes of his permanent recovery were unfounded. He spent about one-fourth of the year in the mountains, away from his well-loved work. To go away was a task far more difficult than "keeping at it" would have been. Returning from the mountains, he looked and felt well, and was full of hope and joy at the prospect of getting back with the "boys" and to his work. He told with a smile and a degree of pride, sanctified by profound gratitude, of the repeated need he had had for the services of the tailor who kept his clothes large enough for his rapidly growing body. At the session of the Conference last December he looked as if he might easily expect to go through his second year on Columbia District; but God gave him only half a year more, and half of it "shut in." The next time I saw him he was "asleep." Perfectly natural he looked, but his cordial greeting I missed sadly. His genial and hearty laugh and brotherly hand-grasp, his eager, earnest inquiry after the prosperity of Zion, were all missed. Dr. W. W. Daniel, his successor in office, was in charge of the funeral services, which were conducted in Washington Street Church. It was a sad privilege to be among those of his brethren who assisted. The burial was in the churchyard. He was greatly interested in this particular church, and talked much of it at Conference. No doubt he would gladly have chosen the place he has for his long rest. Brother Duncan easily ranked among the first in the South Carolina Conference. His voice was seldom heard during the sessions. It was sounded out clearly, however, all the year. He made no effort to be a Conference leader, had no desire or ambition for it; but he was there all the time, and ready to do his part nobly. He has the "Well done" of his brethren, and we believe the Master has received him into his "Father's house of many mansions." God bless the sorrowing wife and daughters!—Walter I. Herbert.

EDWARD A. WAYNE was born in Charleston, S. C., April 29, 1879. He spent his boyhood days in the city of Charleston, later moving to Pendleton, and for a number of years attended school in that town. When quite a young man he moved to the city of Columbia, where he secured work and continued to apply himself to his books. As clerk for Mr. W. S. Monteith, and later as private secretary for Mr. W. A. Clark, he showed his sterling worth and bound himself to each of these with cords of love that were never broken. He came to feel toward Mrs. Clark as a son toward a mother, and she as a mother toward a son. In spite of the constant demand upon his time in these offices, he still carried forward his studies, entering now the classes in the South Carolina University. Being admitted to the bar, he took up the practice of law, working in the office of Mr. J. S. Muller, of Columbia, S. C.; and for six years he followed this life energetically. He joined the Main Street Methodist Church in the city of Columbia, and for a number of years was closely identified with all its works. Here he held the office of treasurer and secretary of the board of stewards, secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school, and offices in the Epworth League. It was while a member of Main Street Church that he heard the call to preach when listening to a talk by Brother J. S. Beasley. Giving up his place in the law office of Mr. Muller, he applied for admission into our ranks. His physical condition told on him all through his ministry, causing him at times to question his call to the work; but catching a new vision, he would pick up again and press forward. Wherever he went he was loved, and he accomplished things in the service of his Lord. October 9, 1900, he was married to Miss Rebecca Monteith, Dr. John O. Willson officiating. Unto them were born five children, all of whom, with his wife, survive him. His health having so largely failed, he took no appointment at the last Conference. In the early spring he undertook some office work with Rev. J. F. Jacobs, of Clinton, but was soon compelled to give up and go to the upcountry because of still failing health. Finding no relief, he came to Columbia, where, among those who have always loved him, he passed quietly away July 17, 1913. During his stay among us he served the following charges well: Lexington Fork, 1907; Langley, 1908-10; Ridgeway, 1911; Summerville, 1913.

GEORGE HENRY POOSER, son of Maj. George H. Pooser and Ann E. Pooser, was born in Orangeburg County, S. C., January 26, 1838, and passed away in Ridgeway, S. C., at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. A. T. Moore, January 16, 1913. His home at the time of his death was in Columbia, but he had come to visit the family of his daughter, and while here he was stricken with illness which ended in his death. Brother Pooser was converted under the ministry of Rev. Nicholas Talley, and united with the Methodist Church when only sixteen years old. During the Civil War he was a brave and faithful soldier in the Confederate Army, receiving painful wounds in two battles. When the war was over, in June, 1866, he was married to Miss Martha E. Jennings, of Orangeburg County, S. C. This was a most happy marriage, a union of true hearts for life. To them were born eight children, seven of whom survive him. Soon after this marriage, they moved to Arkansas, where they lived for three years, Brother Pooser giving his time to teaching. While here in 1888, he was licensed to preach. Returning to South Carolina, he fully made up his mind that it was his duty to give all his time to the ministry; so in 1872, at Anderson, he joined the South Carolina Conference with a large and notable class. Among its members was Bishop A. Coke Smith. Thus for forty years Brother Pooser has been one of us, faithfully and cheerfully pursuing his way as a Methodist preacher. He was a good preacher: men were brought to Christ under his plain and earnest preaching. In his work as pastor he was conscientious and kind, with great tenderness and sympathy. He also wrote much for the Advocate, invariably with great candor, and his articles were always read. He wrote exposing what he thought was wrong, expressing views with which he knew others, even his friends, would not agree. As a man he was courteous and manly, a gentleman of the old school of the South; but, above all, he was a Christian—this was to have been expected, for he was descended from the old Palatine German stock that settled in Saxe-Gotha, now Orangeburg County, in the time of good Queen Anne, and brought up in a home of culture and piety. Also in his own home the spirit of love and unity prevailed. These were the forces that enabled him to bear up and go on with his work on hard charges and scant pay; but he was looking to Him who is keeping our record on high, and who will bottle all our tears, and will make our reward sure. The last three months of his life were days and nights of great suffering, but the grace of God gave victory, and the glory of God was wondrously revealed in him, so that out of that frail dying body came the shouts of triumph, and death was robbed of its sting. Just as the sunlight was breaking over the eastern hills, his earthly sun went down, and his saved soul went out into the morning of eternal day. His body now rests in Elmwood Cemetery in Columbia, S. C.

"And we laid the Pilgrim down to rest
In a chamber whose window looketh toward the east,
And the name of that chamber is Peace."

THOMAS JEFFERSON CLYDE was born in the city of Charleston in 1836; admitted on trial into the South Carolina Conference November, 1859; admitted to the home on high November 3, 1913. Fifty-three of the seventy-six years of his earthly life this holy man of God, an humble servant walking in the steps of his Lord, a flaming apostle and minister of the gospel of redemption, lived, loved, and wrought among us to the glory of God in the extension of his kingdom. Three years he served on stations, Newberry, Wadesboro, and Camden being the favored ones; fourteen years on districts, Orangeburg, Greenville, Marion, and Sumter being the districts that enjoyed the benediction of his efficient leadership; thirty-six years he labored on circuits; one year, the last, he rested, and toward its close entered the rest that remaineth for the people of God: a record which few, if any, have ever equaled in length of active service, and no one has surpassed in spiritual results. There are scores upon scores who must have greeted him in heaven as the instrument of their salvation. There are multitudes on earth who owe their hope of heaven at last to his faithful ministry. There are few Methodist homes in South Carolina where he was not known, honored, and loved. No man who has wrought among us has been more beloved, and none more worthy of love. He loved and was loved. A towering figure physically, a commanding personality, with a keen insight into men and things, and a true seer of the things of God, his was a ministry of saving power. The fires of revival—he sometimes called it his Mullins harness, in reference to great occasions of revival when he was preacher in charge of that historic territory—glowed in his soul and flamed forth continually in a ministry the heart and soul of which was winning souls to Christ. He was a man whose faith, like that of Abraham, never faltered, whose zeal never flagged, whose fervor never cooled. As a pastor he was the shepherd of the flock. He spent his days literally driving from house to house, spending a little while here, a little while there, making more visits in the scattered country territory than most busy pastors make in the crowded city. "Yonder comes Uncle Clyde!" brought all—father from the field, mother from the domestic duties, children from their play—eager to see and hear his greeting: "Well, how are you reporting to-day?" The form of that friendly greeting showed that it was frequent, not casual. Somehow it suggested something more than temporal welfare; it made one instinctively think of the welfare of his soul. Frequently the simple, earnest greeting led to an experience meeting. His conversation was spiced with genial humor, full of good-cheer, but never frivolous. It was full of friendly interest; full of words of uplift, instruction, inspiration; full of the thought of the Church. His preaching was truly apostolic. He preached a gospel of redemptive power. He knew how to reach the hearts of men and stir them to decision for Christ. He could stir the emotions of men and then direct them into channels of service. Primarily and throughout of soul-saving quality, his preaching was clear, strong, thoughtful, convincing, and at times wondrous in poetic tenderness and eloquent imagery. He did not spend much time in cloistered study. To the writer it appeared that he spent more time in prayer than in regular forms of secluded study. He was not an omnivorous reader; he was, however, a student of both men and books. His study was in his buggy; as he rode he thought, evidently turning truth over and over in his mind until he knew it fully, until it became a part of his very self. He read only books that were worth while. When he read, he pressed all there was in the book into his own mind and vitalized it with his own thought. He did not get his sermons from the commentaries, but out of his own great loving heart came the potent messages that were forged into shape in the furnace of his own great mind. His were the thoughts of which books that live are made. His study was of men, things, God; it was the sort of study that made him truly God's prince, having power to prevail with God and men. He knew men. "There's a heap of human nature in men," was a favorite quotation by him; and none knew that "human nature" better than did he. He knew God; he knew him through the word which he studied through eyes of love; he knew him through the constant fellowship and communion of prayer. God seemed as real to him as if he walked with him on his rounds, as with Adam in the garden of the Lord. He knew affairs; he knew the things that stand between men and God, the things that bring men to God. He knew how to bring men to God, how to bring God into their lives. As a presiding elder he rendered the Church most efficient service. Every interest of the Church was carefully attended to. He spoke with no uncertain sound concerning things that menaced the peace of the Church whenever and wherever these things arose. He was wise in counsel to the preachers of his district, and made each one literally his son in the gospel. As a preacher in charge, I should call him a model. Personally I shall always be grateful for a year under him as his junior preacher. It was an introduction that was a revelation as to the itinerancy even to one born and reared in it. The day will never come when the recollection of his oft-used words in advice and direction to "My Boy" will not thrill me. Failure could not in any detail be written of the ministry and life of such an apostle. He lived with God on earth. He literally wrought the works of God in the charges intrusted to him. His words and work, his personality, his matchless character, are imbedded in the history of the Church in South Carolina during half a century past. He lives in the lives and characters he won and molded to Christ. He will live on and on among us. He will not soon be forgotten, and even when there lives none who ever saw him in the flesh, none familiar with his name, he will still live in the power for God's glory he put into the lives of others who in turn have passed it on for world-blessing. In only one thing possibly was he disappointed, and that was that he might finish his ministry in the active ranks. To this, however, he was reconciled. He was granted the superannuate relation at the last session of Conference. He did not return to answer to roll call on that list. Weak and suffering in body most of the year, and the last two months in great weakness, on November 3, at eight o'clock in the morning, he left us for the roll call of the Conference above. He had seen the sunrise. With it he was ushered into the light of the eternal day. His body was laid to rest beside that of his devoted wife, Mary Massebeau—"Mollie," he fondly called her—to whom he was married on November 20, 1866, and with whom he shared the joys and sorrows of the itinerancy to March 8, 1906, when she preceded him to the home above. Side by side they rest in the cemetery of Union Church, Rome Circuit. Together they look into the face of their Lord in a golden anniversary. "Forever with the Lord"—there is life, immortality, in that word. We who loved and have lost a while follow on though blinded by our tears, and by and by shall greet again those gone before and with them stand face to face with our Lord, "reporting for duty."—E. O. Watson.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? The names of all the preachers were called over, one by one, in open Conference, and their characters examined and passed. J. L. Ray withdrew.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

GEORGE CONLEY INGRAM was born in Union County, Ga., May 13, 1868, and died in Woodland, Ga., December 18, 1912. At the early age of ten he was happily converted, and even then felt impressively the call to the ministry. His desires and inclinations were to the Methodist Church, the Church of his mother; but his father was a Baptist of decided convictions, and, fearing to offend his father by going away from him so early in life, he remained out of the Church until he was twenty-two years of age. Then he went with a glad heart to the Church of his choice. Immediately he began wrestling with the question of a call to the ministry, but his modesty and timidity, coupled with a feeling of unpreparedness, caused him to resist for several years this call. In the meantime he gave himself to the work of the schoolroom, putting into this work great conscientiousness and much love for the pupils committed to him. During his life as a school-teacher many boys and girls were inspired not only to studiousness but to high ideals of life by the instruction he gave and the exalted life he lived before them. It was as a school-teacher that he sought the growing, developing region known as South Georgia, and thus his lot was cast within our borders. For a number of years he served the Church as a steward, making truly an efficient one; and he also devoted much time and labor to the great Sunday-school cause. But as time went by the call to the ministry became more and more distinct, and, being no longer able to resist it, he applied to the District Conference of the Waycross District, in session at Brunswick, Ga., in June, 1902, for license to preach. His examination before the committee was so fine, and the recommendations from his pastor and others were so good, that the District Conference took great pleasure in granting the license. Brother Ingram did not have good early educational advantages, but, like many other mountain boys, with marked energy and determination he applied himself manfully, improved every privilege opened to him, and succeeded in graduating from a good high school and taking also a full course in a normal school. When twenty-three years of age he was most happily married to Miss Annie Lee Irvine, daughter of Capt. W. T. Irvine, of Summerville, Ga., and sister of Rev. W. T. Irvine, now presiding elder of the Dalton District in the North Georgia Conference. To him she was true and devoted, and to her he was ever a loving and faithful husband. Six children, three boys and three girls, came to bless their home, and these, with their mother, are all left to mourn the loss of the father in whom they delighted and trusted. His oldest son, Prof. Irvine Ingram, the young principal of the Woodland High School, said to the writer: "I love to think of him, not simply as a preacher of the gospel, but as a pure, energetic, ambitious Christian gentleman, and a companionable father." In 1903 he served the Wareboro Circuit as a supply in the capacity of junior preacher with Rev. F. A. Ratcliffe, preacher in charge. In November of that year he was admitted on trial into the South Georgia Conference, at its session at Sandersville, and was appointed to the Pearson Circuit. After two years of faithful, efficient, and successful service, he was sent to the Knoxville Circuit. This he served for four years, and was then appointed to the great old Talbot Circuit. This he served three years, and at the last session of our Conference was assigned to it for a fourth year. But a sudden and severe attack carried him off before the year's work could be started. After two weeks of suffering, he quietly sank to rest in the parsonage at Woodland, surrounded by his family and many of the people of Talbot County. They had learned to love, to admire, and to trust him as their pastor, and the grief of numbers and numbers of them was great at his going away. During his illness he prayed earnestly for and inquired daily about the people of his charge. Just a few days before his going away he asked to be propped up in bed, and while propped up he sang one of his favorite hymns, "Children of the heavenly King, as we journey, let us sing." When he had finished singing he said: "How sweet those old hymns!" Thus passed away a true, faithful, successful itinerant preacher. To know Brother Ingram was to love him. His religious experience was always bright and assuring. The truths of the gospel were to him living realities. The work of the Lord was his delight. He loved the Church, he loved his brethren. To esteem his brethren was a part of his daily life. He was so modest and humble that some may not have learned to appreciate him at his full worth, but those of us who knew him intimately recognized fully in him the characteristics of the true, faithful, noble Christian man and minister. While all the people of his charges were greatly devoted to him, the young people were especially drawn to him. He demonstrated in his pastoral work the possibility and usefulness of what to many has seemed an impossibility—successful Epworth Leagues at country churches. His comparatively short ministerial life of ten years was a blessing to many. They, with us, grieve for him since he is gone. But, thank God, we expect some day to find his pure, chaste spirit among the hosts of the redeemed now triumphant through grace.—J. W. Weston.

C. A. MOORE.—It is a peculiar glory of Christianity that it has a system of evidence enabling it to appeal to the intellect so forcibly that a reasonable man must believe in its divine origin as well as in the supernatural power that keeps it alive and renders it omnipotent in the world. The greatest proof of its divinity, however, is the man who is the product of its creative work. A religion that can take a human being with all of his frailties, his ignorance and sin, furnish him with an absolutely perfect ideal and clothe him with might more nearly to approach it in his own character every year that he lives, is a religion that draws its strength from other than earthly sources. A concrete illustration of this marvelous power of divine grace is the subject of my paper. Rev. C. A. Moore. And this is true, not because he was ever a bad man as the world counts wickedness, for he was not, but because no man can be truly great or good except he be God's workmanship created unto good works through the mighty power which he wrought in Christ Jesus when he raised him from the dead and made him the head of the universe at his own right hand. Brother Moore joined the Church at the age of seventeen and became at once a consecrated Christian; but the youth in his teens needed the same divine birth for his divine sonship that he would have needed if he had spent thirty years in sin. God only knows, however, what bitter memories he escaped by his early piety, or what scars

he would have worn if he had spent the first years of his manhood in the weed patches of iniquity instead of the gardens of God. What I am trying to emphasize is that every splendid life is supernatural, whether it be raised from the very slums and washed from all the filth of debauchery, or grown, like Brother Moore's, in the wholesome atmosphere of a Christian home. The same power, but infinitely greater in its exercise, makes beautiful the human spirit and paints the splendor of the sunset or touches with inimitable brush the face of the little flower. As we honor our heroes, we must remember that glorious manhood is not man's glory, but God's. Brother Moore was born in Campbell County, Ga., March 26, 1833; but his parents soon moved to Walker County, where he was reared to young manhood, and where, in the providence of God, the Rev. Anthony Bruner became his pastor. Under the ministry of this servant of the King, of whom he speaks in the tenderest terms, he was led to Christ in a bright, indubitable religious experience. He lost no time, but went to work so earnestly that two years later, during the pastorate of Rev. Elijah Payne, he was licensed to exhort, which relation he sustained for only a few months; for in the same year he was licensed to preach, recommended to the Annual Conference, admitted on trial into the traveling connection, and received an appointment for the next year, which was 1859. His first appointment was as junior preacher on the Whitfield Circuit, which consisted of twenty-six churches to be served by two men. The enormity of the work staggered him. A man of faith though he was, the task was seemingly impossible, and he came near giving up. Some local preachers, however, rallied about him, and by their encouragement and help he was inspired to do an excellent year's work, and went up to the Conference of the winter determined to make full proof of his ministry for the years to come; for in 1860 he was assigned to the Dublin Circuit, at the end of which year he was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce. He was returned and served the Dublin Circuit for 1861. For 1862 he was pastor of the Reidsville Circuit, at the end of which year he was ordained elder by Bishop Pierce, who was visiting the Conference at Macon under the presidency of Bishop Andrew. He was returned to Reidsville for 1863; was on the Irwinton Circuit in 1864, and again on the Dublin Circuit in 1865-6. The years of incessant toil had broken his health, and he was compelled to rest as a superannuate from 1867 to 1873 inclusive; but well again and eager for his loved work, he was made effective and appointed for three successive years, 1874-6, to the Swainsboro Circuit. He then served the following charges: Dublin, again for two years, 1877-8; Homerville, 1879; South Bartow, 1880-1; Swainsboro again for three years, 1882-4 inclusive. At the end of 1884 his health was once more so impaired that he was superannuated for eight years, but was able to take work again in the winter of 1892, and was assigned to the Arline Circuit for the years 1893-4; to the Morven Circuit for 1895; the Lovett Circuit for 1896-7; the Dudley Mission for 1898; and to Davisboro and New Hope for 1899-1900. At the close of the year 1900 Brother Moore asked for the supernumerary relation. His friends protested, but his consciousness of physical weakness made him afraid that he was not rendering the best service, so that conscientiously, but with great reluctance, he laid down the duties of an itinerant to become a faithful, loyal worker in a local church. There, for more than twelve years as supernumerary and superannuate, he has been an inspiration to his pastor, a blessing to the community, a benediction to his family. Brother Moore may not have been in the eye of men a great preacher, but he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost, one of those saints who have been the power of Methodism in all of her history. He must have been thoroughly acceptable. Only once or twice was he moved at the end of one year; he was three times on the Dublin Circuit and twice on the Swainsboro Circuit. It is said that few of us can retrace our steps in the pastorate with marked success, but that was several times accomplished by this earnest man of God. His second pastorates were for terms of more than one year in every case. His cordial love for men, his affable manner, his fidelity to duty, the magnetism of his deep piety, his plain gospel preaching, the very evident peace and joy of another world in his heart, compelled his people to recognize the power of his ministry and won for him always a welcome from his congregations. I have seen every feature of his countenance aglow with the light of the Eternal City when he would talk of the goodness and mercy of God manifested to him in his long life. Patient in suffering, uncomplaining in disappointment, courageous in labor, stainless in conduct, is he not a demonstration of the miraculous power in Christ to save and to sustain? A modest record of his life written by himself is a lyric of praise for the mighty grace bestowed upon him through the years. Brother Moore was married to Miss Mary Hicks during the years of his early manhood, and this faithful companion who survives him has shared his work for more than half a century. They celebrated their golden wedding last year. She awaits a little while the Father's call to join her loved one in the City of God. The influence of their home yet lives in the hearts and characters of children and grandchildren. God's aged servant received his summons home in January of this year, and went amid the angels' songs of triumph to his rich reward.—C. R. Jenkins.

DAVID R. McWILLIAMS.—At the fireside of his daughter, Mrs. T. B. Gracen, December 16, 1910, I saw for the first time in my life D. R. McWilliams. His hair was white with age. Eighty and four years had he lived. Asbury Memorial Church in East Savannah, to which I was appointed by the Annual Conference at Columbus, Ga., is the child of his old age. He helped to organize it, and being appointed by the presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Lovett, in the interim of the Annual Conference, served as its first pastor. He loved the infant church devotedly, and became a close friend and adviser of its pastor. For a year and a half he and I lived under the same roof, and over and over again he told me the story of his ministerial life. His history I learned also from his loved ones, and particularly from a member of this Conference who has known him from the time he became an itinerant preacher until the shadows closed about his earthly life and his spirit took the chariot of Israel for its eternal home in the Father's house. Brother McWilliams was never idly or triflingly employed. The two books which he had made his constant companions for years were the Bible and Watson's Institutes. He long ago formed the habit of reading God's Word through once a year, and this habit he kept up to the end. He did not live altogether in the past, as some old people do. He kept in touch with what was going on in our world at the present time. He read the daily papers some, but far more the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, the Nashville Christian Advocate, and the Methodist Review. I never heard

Brother McWilliams preach, for the reason that from the commencement of my acquaintance with him his strength was not sufficient for such a task, but I never failed to call on him to lead the congregation in prayer when he was present at the church service. His prayers uncovered a heart that was sincere and earnest and a mind that was methodical and serious. Brother McWilliams was successful as a young business man. He entered the Georgia Conference at the age of thirty-one, and already he had amassed a considerable fortune. He fought the call to preach several years, but finally faith triumphed and he laid aside a promising business career for the life of an itinerant preacher. Twenty-eight years of uninterrupted and unstinted service he gave to the Church. His first charge was Jackson Circuit, Butts County. While on this work he organized the church at what is now Indian Springs. The circuits he served, as was usual in those days, were for the most part composed of many churches far apart, and paid small salaries. But Brother McWilliams cheerfully bore all the hardships, and supplemented his living from what he had accumulated before entering the ministry. In 1885, on the earnest solicitation of some of his brethren, he took a supernumerary relation and was put at the head of a book concern in the city of Macon. He kept this relation for eight years. Meantime his fortune was swept away and his health was broken. He then took a superannuate relation, which continued until his death. David R. McWilliams, the eleventh child in a family of twelve, was born March 22, 1826. His father was Andrew McWilliams, and his mother, a real Scot, educated in Edinburgh, was Sarah Ann McGowan. His father was a Scotch Presbyterian, and his mother was a Wesleyan. At the age of fourteen he joined the Methodist Church at old Ebenezer Church in Meriwether County, Ga. In 1857 he joined the Georgia Conference, and when that Conference was divided he went with the Southern division. After twenty-eight years, he took a supernumerary relation. Eight more years, and he was superannuated. Nineteen and a half more years passed, and he went home to God. At his death he was the oldest member of the South Georgia Conference, excepting Dr. J. B. McGehee. He had been in this world eighty-seven years, had been a member of the Methodist Church seventy-three years and a member of the Annual Conference fifty-five years. The last century was better for this godly man's having lived through it. Knowing Brother McWilliams in his last days as I did, I was not surprised when a member of this Conference, and a long-time friend of his, told me a few days ago that he preached always a clear, wholesome doctrine, and loved the Church and was faithful to it throughout his long ministry. He craved to die without becoming helpless and a burden on those whose loving due it would be to tend him in whatever condition he might come to before he should go hence. This desire was granted him by a merciful Father. At the home of his son in Cuthbert, Ga., he was stricken in the night with paralysis and died after a few hours, on September 26, 1913. Brother McWilliams was married twice—first to Miss Buck. There were no children of this marriage. He was next married to Mrs. Susan Emily Sherman, a widow of the Civil War. Her maiden name was Potter. Three children were born to them, two sons and a daughter, all of whom remain on this side of the river. His wife went on before him. It seems to me that Brother McWilliams's life comports with that beautiful plea of William Cullen Bryant, addressed to us all:

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join

The innumerable caravan, which moves To that mysterious realm, where each shall take

His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave

Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch

About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

WESLEY LANE was born in Dooly County, Ga., November 21, 1835. He was gloriously converted before he was fully grown, and united with the Methodist Church, to which he gave his long and useful life. In 1859 he was licensed as a local preacher, and in December, 1861, he was admitted on trial into the traveling connection of the Georgia Conference. The Conference was held in Augusta, Ga. From this Conference he was sent to the Gainesville Circuit. His first marriage was to Miss Mary E. McKinnon, of Thomas County, Ga., on December 23, 1869. She lived only five years. There were three children born to them, but one of whom lived to be grown, and he, Dr. Kenneth Lane, was a practicing physician. He died in 1904. His second marriage was to Miss Mary A. Hardaway, daughter of Judge R. H. Hardaway, of Thomasville, Ga., July 7, 1875. In her he found a true helpmeet, who was willing to share with him the joys and sorrows incident to the ministerial life. Few women were better prepared in saintliness of character for the difficult and trying place of an itinerant's wife than was this good woman. She still lives to mourn his loss, but to be a great comfort to her family. To this union were born three children. Two of these, Robert H. and Mrs. J. G. Oliver, are living—the joy and comfort of their aged mother. It was on the beautiful Sabbath morning of July 27, 1913, just as the sun was about to rise, that the saintly spirit of this great and good man took its flight to the house of many mansions. What a fitting close to a life that had been so faithful for so many years! Four years ago Brother Lane asked for a superannuate relation to the Conference. He did not do this because he felt that he was really a superannuate—his mind was clear and his health was good; but knowing that the end could not be far away, he made preparation for a comfortable little home for his last days. Superannuation with him did not mean no work, but continued work. He was as busy after his superannuation as before in the work of the ministry. Up to the day of his death he had an appointment for every Sunday in the month. He did not rest and rust out, but literally wore himself out in the ministry, preaching the glorious gospel of the Son of God. The habit of more than fifty years could not be suddenly and easily broken. The gospel had been the soul-inspiring theme with him through his long life; it had been the source of all his religious energies—for it was he who had willingly suffered, labored, and sacrificed. And though relieved of the responsibilities of the pastorate, his love for the cause would not let him rest, for the "love of Christ constrained him." What a beautiful illustration of the words of St. Paul, "Love never faileth"! As a preacher Brother Lane had many characteristics which made his sermons very attractive and helpful. He was correct in his exegesis, direct in presenting his subject, concise in statement, and persuasive in manner. He read the latest and best books, and continued to build sermons until his death. This may in part explain the reason why he continued to hold his influence over the congregations to which he preached. He was in every sense a good preacher. As a pastor he was almost without an equal in our Conference. He was thoroughly Methodist in his views, believing that no more time should be spent at any place than was necessary; but he made his visits a matter of religious business, and when he had gone the family always felt that the preacher had come. The beauty and saintliness of his character had many ways of manifestation. He was one of the most cheerful of men. Few people ever saw him sad except in the hours of his great bereavement. It was almost impossible to be sad while in his presence. Optimism was so strong an element in his nature that he would find good in almost everything. He was truly the apostle of sunshine and happiness. Many have met him sighing and left him singing. It was one part of his mission in life to make people happy. He was loved and honored by his brethren for the purity and sincerity of his character. By his parishioners he was loved, honored, and trusted for his faithfulness to duty as well as nobility of character. It is one of the singular facts of his ministry that in forty-nine years of his active Conference life there is but one charge on which he did not stay for more than one year. But possibly nothing impressed those who knew him more than the apostolic saintliness of his character. He believed, lived, and preached the great old doctrines of Methodism. With him purity of heart was something more than a theory; it was a fact that found its illustration in his daily life. During his early ministry his toils, travels, and privations were great. Like the Apostle Paul, he was in perils both in city and wilderness. His ministry had fallen upon a day in which Methodism was everywhere spoken against. But with the spirit and courage of a martyr he confronted the enemies of his Church. With preparation of heart and mind, he went forth to work with a courage and consecration that would not falter for one moment in the face of the strongest opposition. The usual order of Divine Providence is that "one soweth and another reapeth"; but Brother Lane survived this era of opposition, and lived to see Methodism one of the most powerful forces in the State in which he labored. Beginning at Gainesville in 1861, and closing his active itinerant life at Tennille, Ga., in 1909, represents a long and useful life. How few there are to whom God has given so many years in which to labor and do good! In his going away he had no farewell words to utter or parting messages to leave. In his last hours the great passion of his life asserted itself and he was still concerned about the unsaved. His end was peaceful. God did not suffer him to pass through any pain at all. He simply fell asleep, and was laid to rest by his comrades in the ministry. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."—J. W. Tinley.

WILLIAM LEMUEL WOOTEN was born in Wilkes County, Ga., October 26, 1852. He died at Manchester, Ga., September 16, 1913, and was buried beside his eldest son at Independence Church, Tignall, Ga., near his childhood home. The close of the Civil War left all our people in more or less destitute circumstances; and as the deceased was a member of a large family, he was forced to work on the farm, and his opportunity for an education was extremely limited. His schooling closed with about one year spent at Emory College. His father, Rev. W. L. Wooten, Sr., was an honored local minister of the Methodist Church, and, while being an instructive preacher, he was remarkably gifted in prayer and song. The subject of this sketch joined the North Georgia Conference during the session of November, 1874, and began his itinerant career as junior preacher on Putnam Circuit in 1875. While a member of the North Georgia Conference he served the following appointments: Whitesville, Center, Eatonton, Elberton, as junior preacher at an Augusta Mission in 1876, Acworth, Madison, Grantville Circuit, Payne Memorial in Atlanta, and Broadway in Augusta, his last appointment in this Conference. From this pastorate he was transferred to the South Georgia Conference at its session in 1896, presided over by Bishop Wilson. His first appointment was as pastor of the Millen and Midville Circuit in the Savannah District. His sixteen years' connection with the South Georgia Conference covered the following appointments: Camilla Circuit; St. Paul, Columbus; First Church in Americus; Swainsboro, Fitzgerald, Marshallville, Moultrie, Cochran, Adrian, and Abbeville and Rhine. At the Conference session of 1912 he took the supernumerary relation on account of impaired health, and from then until his death he made his home at Manchester with his daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Brower, and his only son, A. A. Wooten. Early in Brother Wooten's ministry he was married at Oglethorpe, Ga., to Miss Elizabeth Washington Snead, only child of John W. and Mary Anne Snead, of Baldwin County, Ga. Six children were born of this union, of whom only Mrs. Brower, of Fitzgerald, Mrs. Harrison Johnson, of Macon, and A. Abbott Wooten, of Manchester, Ga., survive. Much of Brother Wooten's time during his long ministry was devoted to evangelistic work in the North and South Georgia Conferences, and upon several occasions it fell to his lot actively to devote himself to church-building enterprises of importance and to clearing off the indebtedness of several of his charges. He successfully engaged in building a parsonage at Grantville; initiated the raising of funds to rebuild St. Paul Church, Columbus, following the destruction of the old building by fire in 1900; and was pastor at Americus during a part of the time devoted to the erection of the present church building. Brother Wooten's ministerial career was accompanied by much family affliction, yet through it all he went about his work courageously. He sympathized perhaps to an unusual degree with the poor and those in distress, and made numberless friends among the children, to whom he was at all times devoted. By the practice of economy in his home life, he was able to afford his four children who reached the age of maturity the benefits of a limited college education. He was the embodiment of truth and honor, and was loved with great tenderness by his brethren of the Conference, his large circle of acquaintances, and the associates of his youth and young manhood.—Whitley Langston.

GEORGE HENRY JACOBS, son of D. S. and Elizabeth Parham Jacobs, was born in Blount County, Ala., November 2, 1849, and died in the city of Memphis, March 26, 1913. He was converted at New Hope Church, in McNairy County, Tenn., in July, 1867, under the ministry of Rev. M. L. Martin; was licensed to preach at Ebenezer Church, in Winston County, Miss., March 15, 1873, by Rev. A. C. Allen, then presiding elder of the Macon District, North Mississippi Conference. He was immediately employed to supply Plattsburg Circuit, where, though so young in the cause, he accomplished a work the fruits of which abide in that field to the present day. Feeling the need of better equipment for his life work, at the close of this year he entered school at Dowdville, Neshoba County, Miss., where he received a high-school education. After this he spent some time in Arkansas, doing work as a local preacher. Coming back to Mississippi, he taught school and preached in the local ranks for several years. In 1876 he was married to Miss Mary A. Spigener, who proved a self-sacrificing, helpful companion in all the trials and responsibilities of his coming itinerant life. After twelve years as a useful and efficient local preacher, he was admitted on trial in the North Mississippi Conference at Kosciusko, Miss., December 2, 1885, and into full connection at Winona, Miss., November 25, 1887. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Paine at Ripley, Miss., July 7, 1875, and elder by Bishop Duncan at West Point, Miss., December 5, 1886. He served with great acceptability the following charges: Ripley and Blue Mountain, 1886; Ripley Circuit, 1887; Baldwin, 1888; New Albany Circuit, 1889-90; Olive Branch, 1891-2; Mount Pleasant, 1893-5; Arkabutla, 1896-9; Wall Hill, 1900; Cockrum, 1901. Here his health failed completely. His brethren thought that his work was done. At the Conference at Winona the same year he was granted a superannuate relation, no one suspecting the long period of suffering that was before him. During his twelve years' fight with a fatal malady that constantly gained ground, his faith never faltered, nor was he unemployed in his Master's work. He taught in Sunday schools and occasionally preached, some of these sermons being the best of his life. He studied, believed, and preached the doctrines of Christianity as taught in the Word of God. A favorite theme with him was, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." In this discourse was revealed the life that he lived. His ideal was high. The writer was his pastor when he was licensed to preach and also during the latter years of his life, and can truly say that he was never associated with a purer and more heavenly-minded man. He was pleasant and entertaining in the social circle, yet without that lightness or jesting which is of doubtful propriety. About two weeks before he died, knowing that the time of his departure was at hand, he sent for his friend and brother in the Conference, Rev. T. H. Porter, to whom he spoke of his approaching decease, giving instructions for his burial as calmly as if preparing for a pleasant journey. These directions being finished, he exclaimed almost with a shout: "Oh, how good the Lord has been to me, and how happy I am in the abiding witness of his Spirit!"—A. W. Langley.

JOSEPH BOYD STONE was born in Union District, S. C., December 28, 1831. He moved with his father to Alabama, where he was converted at the age of ten years, afterwards moving to Mississippi. At the age of eighteen he was a class leader at Antioch Church, Monroe County. In his twentieth year he became a licensed exhorter. He was licensed to preach in 1851, and in 1856 admitted as a probationer in the Alabama Conference at Tuskegee, Bishop Pierce presiding. Brother Stone was twice married. In 1857 he was wedded to Miss Rebecca J. Mosely, a beautiful and excellent young lady. She died in 1864, leaving a daughter who became the wife of Mr. E. E. Buder, of Columbus, Miss. His second marriage was to Miss Mary B. Koger, a daughter of the late Rev. T. J. Koger. She was a devout and cultured Christian. She preceded her husband by some years to the heavenly home, as we humbly trust. Five children blessed this union. One daughter died in childhood, the other four, with seven grandchildren, survive, viz.: Mr. J. K. Stone, of St. Louis; Mrs. Dowden Rogers, of Texas; Mrs. J. B. Small, of Winona, Miss.; and Mrs. John Kirk, of Amory, Miss. As a Christian minister Brother Stone was abundant in labors, faithful and efficient. He shunned no toil and was ever true to his high and holy calling. His preaching was evangelistic, and his sermons were delivered with such readiness and fluency of speech and such earnestness of spirit and manner as always caught and held the attention of his congregation. We cannot estimate the value nor measure the influence for good in such a ministry as was that of Brother Stone. Multitudes of Christians were comforted and blessed, souls were saved, churches were edified and strengthened—but his record is on high. We cannot doubt that his faithful and earnest ministry, extending over so many years, has largely contributed to make the North Mississippi Conference what it is to-day. The appointments he served show an important and extensive field of labor. He was for twenty-one years a presiding elder. His first appointment in the Alabama Conference was that of junior preacher on the Pickens Circuit. He was serving the Macon District in 1870 when the North Mississippi Conference was organized. After its organization he served the following districts: Aberdeen, Corinth, Holly Springs, and Winona. Among other charges, he served the Brooksville and the Crawford Circuits, Tupelo and Okolona Station, and Verona and Tupelo Station. In 1863 he entered the Confederate Army as chaplain of the Forty-third Mississippi Regiment, and filled this position till the close of the war. In 1899-1900 he was on the Winona Circuit, his last pastoral charge. At the Conference of 1900 he was granted a superannuate relation on account of failing strength, and was so continued to the end of his life. In making announcement of the death of Brother Stone in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 19, 1913, Dr. R. A. Meek said: "The announcement of his death will touch with sadness many hearts and homes. He was for forty years one of the most prominent and active ministers in North Mississippi, filling with marked acceptability many of the leading appointments of his Conference. He was a model presiding elder. He was a man of deep piety, and both his public and private ministrations were helpful and strengthening. He had been on the superannuate list for a number of years; and his closing days were peaceful and radiant with light. He kept the faith, and we doubt not that he has now obtained the promised crown."—T. C. Wier.

KENNETH M. HARRISON was born in North Carolina, March 30, 1836. While he was quite small his parents moved to Mississippi and settled near Corinth, where he grew up and lived until he entered the itinerancy at forty-seven years of age. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at nine years of age. He was married twice: first, to Miss Frances Elizabeth Bradberry, of Corinth, Miss., October 4, 1860. Of this union were born nine children, three of whom died in infancy. Those surviving are: Kenneth, of Columbus, Miss.; Leonidas and Mrs. Surratt, of Alcorn County, Miss.; Mrs. W. E. Wiygul and Mrs. J. M. Wiygul, of Nettleton, Miss.; and Mrs. James Bynum, of Brownwood, Tex. He was married the second time to Miss Mary Jane McKinnon, near Kossuth, Miss. A daughter by this marriage died in infancy; a son, Charles M., lives in Amory, Miss. Brother Harrison had been in declining health since last December, but seemed to improve somewhat in the late summer. As it had been his habit to preach on fifth Sundays, since his superannuation, on the fourth Sunday in August he said to the writer: "If I continue to improve, I shall preach next Sunday." However, he was taken suddenly ill that afternoon, and failed steadily until his death on September 2, 1913. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his departure. I have known him intimately for twenty-eight years, having succeeded him on the Corinth Circuit, where his citizenship had marked him as a leader in Alcorn County. He represented his county in the State Legislature in 1880, being elected over a very popular citizen. He entered the North Mississippi Conference in 1883, and served the following charges: Corinth Circuit, 1884-5; Kossuth, 1886-7; Booneville, 1889-

91; Columbus Circuit, 1892-4; Batesville, 1895-7; Amory and Nettleton, 1898-1901. At the close of this quadrennium in Amory, he took the superannuate relation and resided there till his death. He was recognized as one of the strong preachers of the Conference. He was an unusually clear thinker, and a student both of books and men. His analysis of Scripture texts was clear and thought-provoking. His sermons on the cardinal doctrines of the Bible, such as Regeneration, were great, making indelible impressions on those who heard them. He was honored by being placed on the Committee of the Fourth Year at the time he finished his fourth year's course. His ministry was fruitful. His age at the time he joined the Conference and some physical weakness prevented him from being assigned to the heavier charges of the Conference. No man ever served more acceptably in the office of a pastor than did Brother Harrison. He was one of the few men against whom I never heard a word of adverse criticism. In his home town his name is "as ointment poured forth." He was honored, revered, loved by all Christians, and even people who do not attend church at all had for him the highest regard. His sunny spirit and warm brotherly greetings, with unusual social gifts, enabled him to meet all conditions with ease and made him attractive to all classes. May the rich blessings of our heavenly Father keep his loved ones in peace to the day of the reunion on high! He had served his generation well, and God called him home at the ripe age of seventy-seven years. A good man has gone to his reward. Much fruit of righteousness will follow from his works.—W. M. Young.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except that of W. E. M. Brogan, who was expelled from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? W. A. Sampey, G. S. Sandell. 2.

WILLIAM A. SAMPEY, son of John and Drucilla Sampey, was born near Belleville, Conecuh County, Ala., January 7, 1834. He was born of thrifty and intelligent stock, his father accumulating a fortune of one hundred thousand dollars. He was ever of a religious turn, having, as he said, joined the Church before he could remember. He was happily converted at about fourteen years of age, but lapsed back into sin and walked the gloomy road of the backslider till he was eighteen years old; but at this time, after several days of deep meditation, he resolved to renew his covenant with the Lord, and with this firm resolution he went away some half mile into the forest and knelt down by an old pine tree and gave himself up to earnest prayer till pardon and the joy of salvation were restored to him. About this time he felt his call to preach, and was duly licensed, and spent the next three years mostly in school and doing some preaching as a local preacher. On December 13, 1854, he was admitted on trial into the traveling connection by the Alabama Conference, at Talladega, and sent to the Holmes Mission for the ensuing year. The Conference for 1855 was held at Eutaw, and young Sampey was sent by Bishop Paine to Grove-hill Circuit. The next Conference was held at Tuskegee, and he was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce and sent to St. Stephen Circuit, where he remained for the years 1857-8. On February 2, 1858, he was married to Miss M. E. Wilson, daughter of Dr. C. H. Wilson. At the Conference held at Macon, Miss., he was ordained elder by Bishop Paine on November 28 of that year and assigned to the Pascagoula Circuit. For the next two years, 1860-1, he served the Village Circuit, and in 1862 the Monroeville Circuit. He served the Oakhill charge in 1863;

1864, the Sapulga Circuit; 1865, the Jacksonville Circuit; 1866, the Alexandra Circuit, which was part of the circuit he had served the year before; 1867, the Snow-hill Circuit; and during the next two years, the Haw Ridge Circuit. In 1870 he served the Westville charge, which was formed out of parts of the Haw Ridge and Geneva circuits; and on this new charge he lived in his first parsonage. Early in the year a scourge of meningitis broke out, and his wife died, leaving him with two small girl children; but he states that he soon married again, this time to Miss Susan E. Mizell, who proved a blessing to him and his little children. He served the next year on the Troy Circuit, and in 1872 he was on the Olustie Creek Circuit. In 1873 he was transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference and stationed at Jacksboro; and the next year at Weatherford Station. In 1875 he was sent to and served the Stephenville Circuit; in 1876 to the Chatfield Circuit; at the close of that year he was transferred by Bishop Doggett to the East Texas Conference, held in Henderson, and assigned to the Belleview Circuit, which he served for the years 1877-8. In 1879 he was made presiding elder of the San Augustine District, much against his will, and served it through the next four years. In 1883-4 he served Tyler Station (now Marvin); in 1885 he was pastor of Crockett Station; during 1886-8 he was on the Troup and Overton Circuit; in 1889, on the Center and Timpson Station; 1890, stationed at Orange; 1891, at Jacksonville. For the year 1892, on account of the severe affliction of his wife, he was given the supernumerary relation, and moved with her to her father's home in Ellis County, where she lingered till October 22, when death relieved her sufferings. The next year he was left on the effective list and served San Augustine and Sexton charge. On August 22 of this year he married Miss Willie I. Barrow, who survives him. For the next three years, 1894-6, he was presiding elder on the Beaumont District. In 1897 he served the Beckville Circuit, which closed his active ministry that fall, the Conference which met at Palestine granting him the superannuate relation. The year following he lived in Timpson, editing the Timpson Times, of which his son-in-law, J. D. Ford, was proprietor. The next year, 1899, he moved to his farm in Ellis County and built a home, where he lived till November, 1908, when he moved to Georgetown and lived there till called to his heavenly home on July 14,

1913. Brother Sampey was a close student of all classes of literature, and hence was possessed of a most extended and accurate fund of information. He usually put his best into everything he took in hand. He was painstaking in the preparation of his sermons, and they were always well thought out, evangelical, and often brought forth immediate results. As presiding elder he was a competent and safe leader, and in his official acts was to pastors and church officers an example of obedience to the established order of the Church. He did not in his official administration pose before his brethren as a superior, but labored and dealt with them as the servant of the Lord. His service to the young preachers was most valuable. Brother Sampey, while not demonstrative, was a truly religious man. I knew him most intimately for many years. He was my presiding elder for three years, and all in all I never had a better one. I was his presiding elder three years, and hence knew much of his religious habits. He was one of the most prayerful men I ever knew. I came to observe this at my home while he was my presiding elder. He never failed after family prayer to take a stroll to some place for secret prayer, and would frequently spend as much as thirty minutes in this sort of devotion. He was a man of good business turn, and always had money, and was a liberal giver. He was for years a trustee of the Alexander Collegiate Institute, and for several years president of the Board, and was the devoted friend of Christian education. But he is gone from the hurt and turmoil of earth to be forever with the Lord, and the ranks of the redeemed have closed up and will push the battle until the work he loved is done, 'sin overthrown, and the ransomed of the Lord shall rise to meet their returning King with songs of everlasting joy. Till then let his comrades wait and work with unfaltering faith. Farewell, beloved brother, for a time. We are coming your way.—J. T. Smith.

GRANBERRY S. SANDELL.—Another comrade has fallen at his post; another "soldier of the Cross" has laid down his armor and answered "roll call in the skies."

"One by one we cross the river,
One by one we're passing o'er;
One by one the crowns are given,
On that bright and peaceful shore."

Granberry S. Sandell "feel on sleep" a few days after our annual gathering last year, and went up to receive his crown. He was born in Pike County, Miss., December 23, 1838, and died in the city of Dallas, Tex., December 12, 1912. His parents, Henry and Emily Sandel, were devout Christian people, and their good example and eminent piety made an early and lasting impression on him, and had much to do with his early conversion and life of service to God. He professed conversion in Walker County, Tex., at the age of seventeen years, and at the same time felt his call to preach "the gospel of peace" to dying men. His call to preach meant to him to get ready to preach, so he entered Soule University, at Chapel Hill, and studied and applied himself that he might be the better fitted for his high calling. He was admitted on trial into the Texas Conference at its session at San Marcos in 1862, and was appointed to Lockhart and Colored Mission. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Andrew at the Conference held at Chapel Hill in November, 1865; ordained elder by Bishop Marvin at the Conference held in Galveston in October, 1866. For fifty years he was a member of the Texas Conference, and in all of those years he did his work faithfully. No matter where his field of labor lay, if the work was hard and the pay meager, or if it was well organized and easier, he went uncomplainingly and worked with good spirit. He served the following charges: 1863, Lockhart and Colored Mission; 1864-5, Victoria Circuit; 1866, Danville Circuit; 1867, Montgomery; 1868-70; Anderson; 1871-2, Huntsville Station; 1873-4, Willis Station; 1875, Courtney Circuit; 1876-7, Willis Station; 1878, Independence Circuit; 1881, Giddings Circuit; 1882, Travis Circuit; 1883, Caldwell Circuit, 1884-5, Centerville Circuit; 1886-7, Ad-Hall; 1888, Manchaca Circuit; 1889-90, Huntsville Circuit; 1891-2, Pattison Circuit; 1893-4, Cedar Bayou; 1895, Angleton Circuit; 1896-8, Millican Circuit; 1889-1900, Anderson Circuit. At the session of the Conference following the great Galveston storm of 1900 he asked for a superannuate relation, and soon after moved to Dallas, where he continued to reside until his translation. He was married to Miss Virginia Naylor, November 20, 1864, in Gonzales County, and she and six children born to them are left to mourn his going away. The children are C. M. Sandel, G. E. Sandel, Misses Eva, Ada, Hattie Lou, of Dallas, and Frank A. Sandel, of Walla Walla, Wash. In his home he was devotion itself, and his love for the wife, who shared the privations and labors of the itinerant life for nearly fifty years, was beautiful and impressive. He carried his religion with him everywhere and lived it every day, and those who knew him best loved him most and were impressed most deeply by his good life. His preaching was clear, forcible, and earnest. He gave forth no uncertain sound. With a conversion that was thorough and genuine, and an experience that left no room for doubt, his preaching was all-convincing, uplifting, and constructive. His pulpit was his throne. Others may have been more eloquent and scholarly, but no one excelled him in earnestness and devotion to his loved employ. In the pulpit he was persuasive and convincing, and through his efforts many were turned to righteousness. In nearly all of his annual reports to his Conference there was the report of widespread revivals and the gathering in of many new members; and when in his prime he was very efficient and successful in revivals and camp meetings. His call to preach and entrance upon the work of the itinerancy was in the days that tried men's souls, and for that reason his equipment was not as good as it otherwise would have been; but his studious habits, his native ability, his thirst for knowledge, and the reading and study of good books, added largely to his efficiency and helped to make him much above the average preacher. Those who waited upon his ministry were edified and instructed, and there was an appeal and uplift in his message that carried conviction to his hearers and made them want to be more Christlike and devoted in their life and service. He was a revivalist of no mean attainments. In the camp meetings, under the brush arbors, wherever the people met for special efforts in revival meetings, he was at home, and took his place in the forefront of the engagement and led the hosts to victory. The last twelve years of his life, on account of impaired health, he was forced to retire from the active work; and while it was a great trial to him not to be able to go out to the harvest field as had been his custom so long, yet he was uncomplaining and sweet-spirited; and he nearly always attended our annual gatherings, and was the same genial, brotherly, Christian man that he had always been while in the active work. His love for the Church and interest in her work never flagged, and no one rejoiced more in her victories and success than he. His end was peace. Not dead, but living, reigning, rejoicing forever.

"Out of the chill and the shadow,
Into the thrill and the shine;
Out of the dearth and the famine,
Into the fullness divine.
Up from the strife and the battle
(Oft with the shameful defeat),
Up to the palm and the laurel,—
Oh, but the rest is so sweet!

"Leaving the cloud and the tempest,
Reaching the balm and the cheer,
Finding the end of all sorrow,
Finding the end of all fear;
Seeing the face of the Master,
Yearned for in 'distance and dream',—
Oh, for that rapture of gladness!
Oh, for that vision supreme!

"Meeting the dear ones departed,
Knowing them, clasping their hands,
All the beloved and true-hearted,
There in the fairest of lands;
Sin evermore left behind us,
Pain nevermore to distress,
Changing the moan for the music,
Living the Saviour to bless.

"Out of the chill and the shadow,
Into the thrill and the shine;
Out of the dearth and the famine,
Into the fullness divine.
Out of the sigh and the silence,
Into the deep-swelling song;
Out of the exile and bondage,
Into the home-gathered throng."

—O. T. Hotchkiss.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters were passed. R. C. George surrendered his credentials, but retained his membership in the Church. A. M. Pinkham surrendered his credentials and withdrew from our Church to join another Church. J. A. Smith surrendered his credentials and withdrew from the Church. No censure attaches to any of these brethren.

WILLIAM HARVEY COOPER, son of W. C. and Cynthia Cooper, was born in Macon County, N. C., February 5, 1835, and died at Shoal Creek, N. C., July 12, 1913. Brother Cooper was a Christian from his youth. He professed religion at ten years of age, and joined the Methodist Church two years later. His deep sincerity attracted the attention of his elders. As he approached manhood he yielded to the call to preach the gospel, and was licensed to preach and joined the Holston Conference in 1857. On October 6, 1863, he was married to Mary Elizabeth Gillespie, of Transylvania County. Two sons died in infancy; their four daughters live in Jackson and adjoining counties. Surely no preacher's wife could have wrought more nobly. She still lives to bless all who come under her touch. His record as a preacher and his devotion to his Master's service were surpassed by none. I here quote his daughter's words: "He preached continuously for twenty years, traveling over a great part of Virginia, Tennessee, and Western North Carolina. In his day there was no way of moving except in wagons. One time he moved over one hundred miles in a wagon, his wife sitting on a trunk and holding her baby the entire distance. There were very few parsonages, and he never lived in but one. From October 5, 1856, till 1873 he delivered one thousand and twenty-seven sermons, and during his active ministerial life received one thousand and one members into the Church. His diary, which does not give a complete record, shows that inside of two years he traveled two thousand two hundred and ninety-seven miles. He had many years ago consecrated his whole being to God. He said that whatever affliction or suffering God sent on his body was all right; for his body was the Lord's and he could do with it whatever he pleased. He was preëminently a man of prayer. He almost literally prayed without ceasing. He had in his earlier life read his Bible through on his knees. He was a fond and affectionate father and a kind husband. He was traveling the Powell Valley Circuit in Virginia when he suffered a partial loss of voice, and in the year following started with his family for his farm in Jackson County, N. C. He moved in a hired wagon, and after three weeks of rain, muddy roads, and swollen streams, he reached his destination. He toiled on his farm through the week, and on Sunday went to church and Sunday school. He spent his life working for the good of others. This noble man was laid to rest in the Thomas Cemetery at Shoal Creek. He was buried with Masonic honors." It must be added that he strove hard to educate his children and train them for Christian service. They are loyal members of the Church, and are in turn bringing up their own children in the right way. When the days of his activity as a minister were ended, he showed the true itinerant spirit in retirement. He was like the bell frame in the tower of the church where he once served. After holding the bell in place for many years, it was taken down and laid aside; in the autumn it was covered with morning-glories. When his life was taken down from the place of active service and laid aside, it was covered with the morning-glories of Christian grace. The writer of this paper once attended Quarterly Conference at Brother Cooper's church. When the report of the spiritual condition of the church was read, he arose and, in a half-whisper, delivered an exhortation that melted many a heart. Penitents were called and a number came to the altar. It was a unique scene, a business session of the church punctuated by an old-time altar service. It reminds one of a wounded soldier on a battlefield. His army behind him is about to retreat. The enemy presses toward him. He arises and smites, only to fall to the earth again, but his heroism rallies his wavering army and brings victory. He had heard a trumpet blast from the hill above him. This wounded soldier of the Cross heard the trumpet blast from the hills of heaven. He arose and dealt his blow. Victory came. I watched this old saint as he walked toward his church the last time. Before the next Sabbath he was in Eternity. I was impressed with the classic effect of the picture, a survivor of what to some seems a better day. I long for the gift of the artist, that I might throw the picture on canvas and call my generation back to the best in his day. And I crave also the vision-power of the man of Patmos, that I might paint heaven by its side with bridge of gold thrown across and a beckoning hand stretched out.—J. J. Gray.

WILLIAM BROWNLOW LYDA was born in Henderson County, N. C., on September 15, 1836, and died at his home in Weaver-ville, N. C., July 4, 1913. At the age of fifteen he was happily converted. He was called to preach amidst difficulties almost insuperable. His father was dead, and he was the oldest of nine children, and his education was limited. For a while he was a student at Sand Hill Academy. On May 5, 1859, he was granted license to preach, and in the same year was admitted on trial into the Holston Conference. Two years after this the ominous war-cloud burst in terrific fury; but during the war, and through the dark days of Reconstruction, Brother Lyda continued to preach with heroic courage. In 1863 he was happily married to Miss Martha Mackey, of McDowell County, N. C., but in little more than one year this union was severed by the death of his beloved wife. Several years later he was married to Miss Sarah Burgin, of the same county, who through the years has been a devoted helper, and who, though sad, still lives in hope. There were eight children, one by his first wife and seven by the second marriage. Six are living. Two of the daughters have preceded him to "that city which hath foundations." For fifty-four years he was an ideal Methodist preacher. He loved to sing, preach, pray, and work for the great cause that lay so near his heart. With great acceptability he served the following charges: Fifteen in the Holston Conference, one in the Indian Mission Conference, one in the Alabama Conference, and six in the Western North Carolina Conference. While Brother Lyda's early educational advantages were limited, he was in no sense an uneducated man. He acquired through rigid discipline the habit of study, and from every source within his reach gathered to himself useful information. His books were well selected and exhaustively studied, covering a wide range of subjects. He was a preacher of more than ordinary ability, and his sermons were delivered in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. To all the churches which he served he could have appropriately written: "Our gospel came to you not in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." His ministry was blessed with gracious seasons of revival power. He won many stars for his crown, and greatly enriched his ministry by personally leading men to Christ, in the sick-room, by the fireside, and on the public highway. His religious experience was clear and steadfast, his character pure and strong, his influence wholesome, and his reputation, through more than a half-century in the ministry, unblemished. It was the privilege of the writer of these lines to be with him often during his last illness, and from those hours of loving fellowship he brings the assurance that to this faithful servant of our Lord there came the abundant fulfillment of that precious promise, "In the evening time it shall be light." His end came suddenly and peacefully in the midst of loving friends. His body sleeps in the beautiful little cemetery at Weaverville, awaiting the resurrection call that shall at last bring all of us who are faithful to the complete and final inheritance of the saints in light.—J. H. West.

JAMES W. WHEELER was born at Chesterfield, S. C., September 26, 1835, and died at his home in Charlotte, N. C., January 2, 1913. He was the son of Rev. J. H. and Ann Warren Wheeler. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under his father's ministry, at Newbern, N. C., in his eighteenth year. He was educated at Cokesbury College, and licensed to preach June 18, 1855. He was ordained deacon in 1857 by Bishop Pierce, and elder in 1859 by Bishop Early. On November 27, 1861, he was married to Miss Lucy M. Plunkett, of Wadesboro, N. C., who was to him a helpmate in the highest and best sense until the end of his earthly pilgrimage. He is survived by her and one son, W. M. Wheeler. He was first cousin to Arthur T. Pierson, editor of The Missionary Review of the World and author of "The Crisis of Missions." At Wilmington in 1855 the North Carolina Conference admitted him on trial. With splendid fidelity, courage, and zeal he served the following charges: Tar River, 1856; Kinston, 1857; Winston, 1858; Pittsboro, 1859-60; Wilmington, Fifth Street, 1861; Montgomery, 1863; Wilson, 1864-5; Winston, 1866-8; Iredell, 1869-70. He received a nominal appointment to Salisbury during the year 1871, that he might take the rest made necessary by overwork. Statesville, 1872-5; Wadesboro, 1876; Halifax, 1877; Morganton, 1879-80; Happy Home, 1881; Charlotte, 1882-3; Lincolnton, 1884; Mountain Island, 1885; King's Mountain, 1886. In 1886, after serving faithfully for thirty-one years, he asked for the superannuate relation. He was a great admirer of Mr. Wesley, and modeled his own life largely after his. His style of preaching was evangelistic, as was evidenced by the result of his labors, hundreds being converted and brought into the Church under his ministry, many of whom are now living and filling positions of honor and trust both in the Church and State. His arduous work on large circuits for several years in succession proved too great a strain on his constitution, never at any time robust, so that after serving two years on the Iredell charge, at the close of the second he was sent to Salisbury Station; but his health continued to decline, and at the advice of his physician asked to be relieved of the work and rested during the year, which proved beneficial; and at the next Conference he was stationed at Statesville, where he remained four years and was very successful, the membership doubling during that time. A comfortable parsonage was built the first year, and at the end of his fourth year the roof was on a handsome brick church. He looked after his collections with great interest, and it was his custom to take from his own meager amount received and apply it to them, rather than report a deficit. He was scrupulously conscientious in regard to his finances, never leaving an appointment owing a dollar, which meant sacrifice and self-denial all the way through. It was not his fortune to live in but two parsonages, and with three exceptions, when his congregation paid his rent, he had to pay his house rent out of the small amount he received from his charge. He never had any choice in his appointments, not knowing, except in one or two instances, until it was read out, where he was going. He went wherever he was sent without a murmur or complaint. In his last sickness, which was of about two years' duration, his patience, gentleness, and meek submission were beautiful to behold. During all that time he was deprived of his speech, yet never showed the least impatience, but always wore a smile and enjoyed his friends and church privileges as much as he ever did. Consecration was the keynote of Brother Wheeler's character. His faith was sublime, his trust perfect, his service never-failing; his zeal, his love, his earnest striving for the salvation of souls, constant; his purity of heart and life beautiful, and his daily life a sermon. His life was one of perfect submission, of exaltation, so sweet, so gentle, he need not open his lips. As he walked among men, all who saw him recognized the passing of a man of God. He was stricken with paralysis on February 10, 1911, and never regained his accustomed health. November 27, 1911, he and Sister Wheeler celebrated their golden wedding, and on December 15 he attended his last church service. Religion with Brother Wheeler was not a matter of intellectual belief merely, but a vital part of his nature. All his life-interests centered in preaching the gospel and furthering the influence of the Church for good. He believed that in Christianity, and in it alone, are the principles of eternal life, and that hence it deserves first and last consideration. As a preacher he was forceful, plain-spoken, and earnest, hewing to the line, never compromising the truth, omitting no doctrine merely because to some it seemed a hard saying; and yet delighting to proclaim the encouraging promises of reward for the righteous and succor for the weak. It was in perfect trust and faith in these same messages of hope that Brother Wheeler met the end, confident that, though his earthly career was ended, the best was yet to be; that the rewards of his decades of service lay just ahead. He had fought a good fight, he had kept the faith, he had finished his course. Well done, good and faithful servant!—T. F. Marr.

FRANKLIN HARRIS WOOD was born in Randolph County, N. C., August 19, 1836, and died at Trinity, N. C., October 2, 1913. He was the son of Penuel and Callista Wood, who in their day were prominent both in Church and State, in social and religious circles. They were industrious, intelligent, and godly; noted for their physical, mental, and moral strength, and for their religious integrity. Thus it is seen that Dr. Wood was born in a Christian home, reared in an atmosphere of piety, and soon took into his life definite and correct principles of creed and conduct. He was brought up on the farm and in the church, and studied agriculture and the Bible, God and nature, and cultivated industry and religion, and developed a sound body, a strong mind, and a sturdy character. While yet young he consecrated himself to God, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and through the culture of the home, Sunday school, and the services of the sanctuary, ripened into a beautiful Christian manhood, which he faithfully maintained to the day of his death. He attended the high schools of his county, and being an ambitious and ardent student, made good in his studies; and while he did not attend college, he laid a broad and solid foundation for a lifelong advancement in knowledge, and attained a highly practical, working scholarship that made him eminently useful, efficient, and successful as a preacher of the gospel. He was happily married, October 23, 1858, to Miss Elizabeth Pierce, who faithfully walked with him in all his toils and labors for more than half a century, and who still survives him. He was admitted on trial into the North Carolina Conference at Beaufort, December 14, 1859. He was admitted into full connection and ordained deacon at Louisburg, December 8, 1861, by Bishop Andrew; and ordained elder at Greensboro, December 6, 1863, by Bishop Pierce. He continued his itinerant ministry without a break till 1901, when at Gastonia, on account of broken health, he obtained the relation of superannuation. Thus it is seen that his career as an itinerant preacher covered a period of more than fifty years—a ministry that was distinguished as one of more than ordinary diligence, usefulness, and success. During this long ministry he served the following charges: 1860, Cape Hatteras; 1861-2, East Rowan; 1863, South Iredell; 1864, chaplain in the Confederate Army, with Twenty-second Regiment, North Carolina troops; 1865-6, Montgomery Circuit; 1867-8, Deep River Circuit; 1869, Magnolia Circuit; 1870-1, Fifth Street, Wilmington; 1872-4, Wilson Station; 1875-6, Wayne Circuit; 1877-80, Trinity Church, Durham; 1881, Front Street, Wilmington; 1884-5, Hay Street, Fayetteville; 1886-9, Randolph Circuit; 1890-2, Mooresville Circuit; 1893-4, presiding elder of Morganton District; 1895-8, presiding elder of Winston District; 1899-1900, presiding elder of Greensboro District; 1901, Wadesboro Station. As a man Dr. Wood was one of nature's noblemen. Nature endowed him with a fine physique, a striking personality, a commanding presence, and a strong mind. He was noble, unselfish, self-sacrificing; high-toned, urbane, dignified; gold tried in the fire—refined, pure; symmetrical in moral build, chaste in thought, polished in manner; his was a well-rounded, stately manhood. He was kind, brotherly, and amiable; sincere in his friendships, strong in his attachments, honest in his intercourse with men, royal in his love for the brotherhood of itinerants. Those who knew him well appreciated and esteemed him highly for his excellent qualities, for his solidity of character, for the strength of his convictions, for the integrity of his life, for his candor, and for his sterling worth. While he was courageous and fearless, he was tender, benignant, sympathetic. There was no alloy in him, nor dissimulation, nor hatred, nor bitterness. He was a manly man, a good and great man—great-hearted, great-minded, great-souled. It was always pleasant and profitable to be associated with him. He was optimistic; he helped you to step out into larger regions of thought and being, into wider horizons, into a larger faith, a firmer hope, and a deeper grasp of truth. As a preacher Dr. Wood was profoundly conscious of the divineness of his call to preach, of the sacredness and magnitude of his high calling, of the gravity, the responsibility, and the meaning of the vows and obligations which he assumed at the bar of the Conference. A glance at the appointments which he received shows the quality and service of his ministry. Early in his ministerial career he took high rank, both as a preacher and leader in the Conference, filling many of the most important charges and worthily gaining a position of leadership. Dr. Wood was a preacher of pronounced ability; his sermons were always strong, packed with gospel truth, and delivered with earnestness and force. He had strong convictions of the truth, of the great cardinal doctrines, of our holy Christianity, and his messages always rang clear and true and powerful. As a preacher he was sound and sane; he stood square on the great positive verities of his Lord and Master, and proclaimed the truth as it is in Jesus. He believed intensely in something that was definite, and preached something that was definite; he did not parley with negations, nor deal in a diluted divinity; he did not handle the work of God deceitfully, but by the manifestation of the truth he commended himself and his message to every man's conscience. He believed intensely in and loved the doctrines and polity of Methodism, and was an able, courageous, and fearless defender of them. Dr. Wood was a profound theologian; he studied theology and came to a mighty grasp of it by his contact with the Bible, living men, and the best biblical and theological literature of his day. In his formative period as a preacher he lived and moved in the company of great men, of men who were giants, who had faith in God and were consecrated to his service; and in the association and tuition of such men young Frank Wood could not but learn, and he did learn. For many years he was the Conference singer, and it was inspiring to hear him, in clear musical tones, sing such hymns as, "And are we yet alive," "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord," etc. But his voice, in sermon and song, is hushed; he is gone from us, but he has left the record of a great and good life—a life consecrated to God and highest service, of wide usefulness, and that touched thousands of lives, helping to make them meet for the inheritance of the saints in light. He fought the good fight, kept the faith, finished his course, and was ready to go. In his last sickness he found occasions to express his unshaken faith in God, his confident hope of eternal life, and his preparation for the heavenly world. A day or two before his death he quietly and calmly made arrangements for his funeral, burial, and memoir; and when asked as to the other world, in his characteristic way he confidently and calmly answered, "That's all right, that's all right." And thus he passed away; and it was the passing of a great and a good man.—J. R. Scroggs.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? T. P. Fincher, W. A. McCann, Hugh M. Gillis. 3.

REV. THOMAS PRINCE FINCHER was born in Lee County, Ala., September 14, 1861; and died at Asheville, N. C., on March 14, 1913, being fifty-one years and six months of age. He was one of eight children of John and Mrs. Julia Fincher, five of whom survive him. He joined the Church under the ministry of Dr. W. P. Dickinson, the date of which is unknown to the writer. On June 24, 1896, he was married by Dr. J. S. Frazer to Miss Bessie Lloyd, of Bladen Springs, Ala. To them five children were born, three boys and two girls. In December, 1890, he was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference at Pensacola, Fla. To him were assigned the following charges: Mauville Circuit, 1891-93; Salitpa Circuit, 1894-97; Suggsville Circuit, 1898-1901; Whistler Station, 1902-03; Notasulga Circuit, 1904-07; Coffeenville Circuit, 1908; Havana Circuit, 1909-10; La Pine Circuit, 1911-12; Trinity Station, Phoenix City, 1913—living only about three months after this assignment. He preached until a month of his death. Seeing his failing health, his congregation granted him a season for rest and recuperation. He went to Asheville, N. C., with the hope of recovering his health, but to no avail, for he passed into the better land soon after arriving there. His body was returned to his church for the funeral services, which were conducted by Brothers Powell and Prince, just one month to the hour from the time he had preached his last sermon. The interment took place in Opelika with Masonic honors, Brothers McNeill, Hurt, and Fontaine taking part in the same. Thus ended the earthly career of our friend, our brother, a faithful colaborer, a saint in Israel, and a servant of God. No man among us lived more largely in the hearts of his brethren, enjoying greater confidence or sharing more of our love than he. As a preacher he was scriptural, spiritual, practical, convincing, sometimes rising to great altitudes of spiritual power, becoming prophetic in the sweep of thought and range of vision. In the early years of his ministry he and the writer exchanged in revival work. In assisting us sometimes we have seen him rise to his best efforts, when the power of God would come down, sinners be convicted, penitents converted, and Christians transformed into greater lives, and many brought into the kingdom of God. As a pastor none of us ever surpassed him. He knew his people, their joys, their sorrows, their weakness, their strength, and their every need. His visits to and among them were always religious and not merely social. Face to face he talked to them about God and destiny. Around their sick beds and family altars he always prayed. When he was gone, all knew that he was a man of God who always brought to them a message from God. But it was in his home life that he was at his best. There, as father, husband, and head of the household, he reflected in his daily life the gospel he loved to preach so well. He lived this gospel there better than any tongue can ever tell it from the sacred stand. A thousand times blessed are the children and the widow to have had such a father and husband as he. May God's comforting grace and guiding hand always come to the widowed mother, and the father's prophetic cloak fall upon the children left behind! In disposition he was sometimes timid and shrinking, never pushing himself to the front, but preferring a modest place among men. Gentleness, sweetness, and kindness were some of the many crown jewels of his character. Though he made no pretension to great piety, yet he knew the deep things of God, walked in the highway of holiness, and lived in unhindered fellowship with God. His knowledge of God, understanding of the Scriptures, and life of prayer made him strong in Christian character, firm in his conviction of duty, steadfast in his contentions for right, a herald of a mighty passion, and an evangel of Heaven's reclaiming grace. His life gladdened his family, enlarged his Church, blessed his generation, enriched the world, and glorified our Father in heaven. A letter from him to the writer a short while before the end stated that never in all his ministry did prospects seem so bright for a good and great year. His people had received him and his gladly, and responded most heartily to his ministry. But all were to be disappointed, for the foundation of his health gave way and his work was done. God wanted him in another part of his kingdom. His transfer was quiet, serene, and triumphant. Soon after reaching Asheville he fell into a restful sleep. Later his lips were seen to be moving, when the nurse, bending over to see if anything was wanted, heard him whisper: "Peace, peace." In a minute more his foot was in God's chariot and he, like Elijah, was soon at home with God. Farewell, our brother and faithful friend, but not forever, for after a while we shall join you over there.—J. A. Seale.

REV. WILLIAM ARMSTRONG McCANN was born at Newbern, Ala., January 5, 1859; and died at Pine Apple, Ala., April 30, 1913. The son of the late Rev. John W. McCann, of the Alabama Conference, and his sainted wife, he possessed the advantage of good heredity and enjoyed the blessed privilege of Christian training in a truly Christian home. Under these influences he early gave his heart to God and joined our Church at Newbern in May, 1871. He received his education in the best preparatory schools of Newbern and of Greensboro, and his college training in the Southern University. At the University he completed the junior and had commenced the senior course, when the death of his mother led him to relinquish his college studies and engage in the active duties of life. He entered upon the work of teaching, and was employed in that pursuit when, realizing that he was called of God to consecrate his life to the work of the itinerant ministry, he applied for and was granted admission to the traveling connection by the Alabama Conference at its session held in Selma, Ala., November 29, 1881. Being under contract as a teacher, he received no pastoral appointment at this time; but on the death of Rev. C. H. Kelley, in February, 1882, he was appointed to fill out the year on the Uniontown Mission, and thus entered upon that work of the pastorate which was to be his one work to the end of his life. During his ministry he served the following charges: Uniontown Mission, 1882; Greene Circuit, 1883-84; Greenville Circuit, 1885-86; Grove Hill Circuit, 1887-89; Havana Circuit, 1890-91; Rocky Mount Circuit, 1892-94; Lower Peach Tree Circuit, 1895-97; Villula Circuit, 1898-1901; Louisville Circuit, 1902-04; Jackson Station, 1905-06; Brewton Station, 1907; Dayton and Spring Hill, 1908; Lowndesboro, 1909; Columbia and Gordon, 1910-11; Livingston and Cuba, 1912. In December, 1912, he was appointed to the Pine Apple charge, and entered upon his work by filling his pulpit at Pine Apple on the last Sunday of the year. This was his last work as a preacher. He was never able to enter the pulpit again. The insidious disease from which he had been suffering for many months had finished its work; and after lingering in pain and weakness for a few weeks, on April 30 last he rested from his labors and went from us to be with the Lord forever. Loving hands prepared his body for burial, and on May 1, 1913, he was buried at Newbern, the place of his birth. On November 30, 1881, the day after his admission into the Conference, he was married at Newbern to Miss Minnie Bennett, who, with their six sons and two daughters, survives him. This marriage was an ideal one. Through all the years, until God called our brother to himself, the husband and wife walked hand in hand, helping each other in all the duties of the home and the pastorate, building a Christian home, and doing the work of the Lord. Their children were reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and are following the footsteps of the parents in ways of righteousness and of service. As a pastor Brother McCann was untiring, vigilant, painstaking, and sympathetic. His presence was a benediction to his people in the house of mourning. As a preacher he believed his gospel with all his heart and conscientiously preached it as a messenger who realized the importance of his message and felt his responsibility to the King who sent him. The evangelistic note was clear and strong in his preaching, and under its influence many souls were converted. The people of God were not neglected, and where he labored the Church was edified. Quietly and unobtrusively he did his work faithfully and well and received his recompense in the conscious favor of the Master. For weeks before the end came he knew that it was imminent and quietly proceeded to put his house in order for time and eternity. Having served God all his life, he was not afraid to go to him. He regretted having to part with his work and his family, but he did not murmur. Several times he expressed to his wife a regret that he could not serve as long as did his honored father. He felt that fifty-three years was a short life for one who had a great work to do and was doing it. He suffered much during the last weeks of his life, but was always patient and full of faith. His heart was full of love for men in his dying hours, as it had ever been amid the activities of life. Will McCann was a lovable and loving man, and it is not strange that we all loved him. More than once he said to his devoted wife: "Be sure to give my love to the Alabama Conference. God bless the Conference, every member of it!" He rests from his labors, and his works do follow him.—A. J. Lamar.

REV. HUGH M. GILLIS was born in Barbour County, Ala., in 1842 or 1844 (we are unable to secure the exact date of his birth), and died in Castleberry, Ala., November 18, 1913. He was about sixteen years old when the Civil War began, which he entered promptly and fought gallantly to its close. His bravery soon attracted attention, and in spite of his youth he rose from the ranks to the office of lieutenant. In 1856 he was converted and joined the Church at Old Zion Chapel, in Barbour County, Ala. In 1866, in the Elba Circuit, he was licensed to preach, and joined the Alabama Conference the same year. In 1869 he married Miss Mary V. Lewis, from which union there were born several children, two of whom are still living, one daughter and one son, Hugh M., Jr. For about forty-eight years Brother Gillis labored faithfully on various circuits in the Alabama Conference. No work ever suffered in his hands. He was admitted on trial into the Montgomery Conference at Jacksonville, Ala., December 5, 1866. His appointments were: Union Circuit as junior preacher, J. W. Shores being preacher in charge, 1867; Millville Circuit, 1868; Rocky Mount Circuit, 1869; Elba Mission Circuit, 1870; Brundidge Circuit, 1871; Sylvan Grove Circuit, 1872; Newton Circuit, 1873; Greenwood Circuit, 1874-75; Mobile Circuit, 1876-77; Henry Circuit, 1878-79; Crawford Circuit, 1880-81; Loachapoka Circuit, 1882-84; Fort Deposit Circuit, 1885-87; Gainesville Circuit, 1888-90; Pine Apple Circuit, 1891-94; Orrville Circuit, 1895; Warrior Stand Circuit, 1896-97; Loachapoka Circuit, 1898-1900; Mobile Circuit, 1901-02; Pine Level Circuit, 1903-04; Perote Circuit, 1905-06; Sweetwater Circuit, 1907-08; Lower Peach Tree Circuit, 1909; Pollard Circuit, 1910-11; Castleberry Circuit, 1912-13. Brother Gillis was very social and brotherly. He delighted in having his brethren of the ministry in his home. Refreshing entertainment was always given them. No one ever visited his home without a desire to return. His presiding elder always looked forward with pleasure to the time when his appointment took him into the household of Brother Gillis. He was always careful in his dress and in everything with which he was connected. He never owned a horse long before everybody wanted it, for his kind attention had enhanced its value. Horses, dogs, hogs, chickens, and cats—all felt the touch of his tender and nourishing hand. His religion went up from these creatures to his fellow-man, whose soul he drew and won for God. He never desired a work other than a circuit, and in this class of work he had few, if any, superiors either as a pastor, a preacher, or a man of affairs. The spirit of Brother Gillis was unconquerable. In the Civil War his place was in the very front of the battle, for he believed with all his heart that there he was answering the call of duty. After the war closed and the battle flags were furled, for nearly fifty years he followed with never-diminishing ardor the banner of the Cross, where his mission was not to kill but to make alive. I am quite sure that he never thought seriously of quitting this work so long as he was able to go to an appointment. He was spared the pain of having to stand and endure while he watched his brethren press onward in the fight. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," rang out sweet and clear from the Master's lips ere his golden sun had gone down in the west. When Caleb was in his prime he went over into Canaan to spy out the land, and then he saw the best grape-bearing portion. He was attracted by Mount Hebron. When eighty-five years of age, after the Jordan had been crossed and the land was being divided, he asked for Mount Hebron, the most difficult portion of the entire country to conquer on account of the people who held it. The same enthusiasm which burned in his heart at forty, when he first saw Hebron, burned in his heart at eighty and moved him forward until he conquered Hebron for his posterity. Happy is the man who in youth sees in the far-away distance some lofty mountain to which he journeys and in old age finds himself climbing its vine-clad sides as he looks toward its summit, which towers above him in the blue. Brother Gillis was still climbing the heights which loomed up before him in youth, still running for the prizes which glittered before him, when he was released from the struggle and crowned by the Righteous Judge.—O. C. McGehee.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters passed, except that of John A. McBryde, who was suspended from all functions of the ministry for one year.

JAMES MADISON WEEMS, the son of Samuel R. and Mary Ann Rhodes Weems, was born in Scott County, Miss., nine miles south of Lake, on July 14, 1846. He joined the Church at Carr's Church in September, 1860. He joined the Confederate Army in July, 1863, and surrendered with Gen. Joseph E. Johnston in North Carolina on April 26, 1865. He went to school in 1866, and was licensed to preach that summer by a Quarterly Conference held at Boykin, Smith County, Miss. He supplied Ochay charge in 1868. In 1869 he served as junior supply under Rev. H. P. Lewis on the Mount Carmel charge. At the close of that year he was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at Jackson, Miss. In 1870 he served as preacher in charge on the Mount Carmel Circuit. In 1871 he served the Carthage Circuit, then in the Jackson District. In December of that year he was ordained deacon at Meridian by Bishop Kavanaugh. This writer was ordained with him. In 1872 he again served the Carthage Circuit, as he did also the next year. In December, 1873, he, with this writer, was ordained elder. He had been married on December 13, 1872, to Miss Elizabeth Dawkins, who died in April, 1874, leaving him an infant daughter, whom they named Zula. She is now the wife of Rev. John A. Moore, of this Conference. In 1874 he served the Brownsville Circuit. In 1875-8 he was pastor at Hazlehurst. On February 17, 1876, he was married to Miss Sophie Galloway, who survives him. Only one child, a daughter, came to them. She died in infancy. He was at Shubuta in 1879; at Moss Point in 1880-3; at Enterprise in 1884-5. He was presiding elder on the Brookhaven District during the years of 1886-8. At the Conference of 1888 he was sent as a missionary to Mexico, where, during the years of 1889-92 he served as presiding elder of the Mexico District, Central Mexico Mission Conference. Returning to Mississippi, he served the Brookhaven Station in 1893. He was presiding elder of the Vicksburg District in 1894-7; the Brookhaven District in 1898. He was at Central Church, Meridian, in 1899-1901, and again on the Vicksburg District in 1902; at Yazoo City in 1903-6; on the Forest (later Newton) District in 1906-7; at Shubuta and Quitman in 1909. At the close of that year he was sent to First Church, Laurel, where his ministry and life found their close far into the fourth year of his pastorate there. Thus for nearly forty-six years he wrought faithfully and efficiently into the Methodist itinerancy. I was in the Brookhaven District during his first term as its presiding elder, and was impressed with the unusual efficiency of his administration. The country charges grew in liberality and got larger visions of their obligations and opportunities during his service there. He greatly quickened the missionary spirit, and in every way set the district far ahead of any degree of prosperity it had known since the war. I have often declared his presiding eldership on that district the best I have ever known anywhere and by anybody. The section and the time were fully ripe and sorely in need for what he brought them. During those three years he preached, especially in the country places where he was ever at his best, as if inspired, and he really was. He was not what we call "an occasions preacher"—he was never at his best preaching before an Annual Conference or on a college commencement occasion. But at a country quarterly meeting on Sunday morning, or even on Saturday with but few others than the members of the Quarterly Conference present, he would thrill his audiences, rising at times to heights of eloquence that astonished me. It was during this time—in 1887—that being deeply impressed with his fine, strong expositions of the Word, and knowing how he had toiled to reach such excellence, for his educational advantages had been very meager, I induced the Kavanaugh College, of which I was president, to confer upon him, pro causa honoris, the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was worthy. Dr. Weems was a well-rounded Methodist itinerant—a revivalist, a good pastor, as well as a preacher of unusual power. In his pastoral ministrations he was so sympathetic and tender, so wise and careful, that his people were drawn strongly to him. He was a church builder as well. Two of the handsomest and best-arranged churches in our Conference—the one at Yazoo City and the First Church at Laurel—stand as monuments to his fine architectural taste, undying energy, and business sense. To the very end of his long term of service he was progressive as well as aggressive. A loyal son of his Church, he kept step with the changes she adopted. He organized Epworth Leagues when they were made an institution of his Church and learned how to keep them going. He fostered the Women's Missionary Societies. He used the Order of Worship adopted by his Church, and her Hymn Book. Among the last things that he did was to introduce into his church at Laurel the individual communion cup. He was too great a man to be either a foggy or a crank about anything. Dr. Weems's faith was simple and strong. Out of it grew an optimism that was splendid. Though menaced and tortured, during we know not how many weary months, by the gnawing of an insidious malady at his vitals, yet he never lost the sunshine of manner that characterized him; and as we visited him he greeted us all with a voice and manner as cheery as ever. The day before his death he sat with us and talked and laughed in his old way; and the last utterance that fell on our ears was a rollicking jest, as he was borne on a stretcher up the stairway to the operating room in the Sanitarium: "See me; I'm in an elevator!" He went bravely to the operation, not certain at all what its issue would be. He knew that his days of service were over, and that probably his life was ebbing out; but he burdened no one with a word of regret, and showed not the slightest fear. When the surgeons had done their work, their best, I asked: "How is it?" The answer was: "Cancer in the very worst stage—better far for him that he never come out of the anæsthesia." And he never did: he went up "in an elevator," and the angels were the bearers of it. The soldier-man of sixty-seven was the same hero as was the soldier-boy in his teens marching with Joe Johnston. Friends and loved ones and loving ones, his late parishioners from Laurel, his clerical brethren from the towns and cities and country places, as well as a large company of kinsfolk, gathered to his burial. He died on Wednesday, July 30, at 1:30 P.M., in the Sanitarium at Newton, having removed from the parsonage at Laurel to his own house at Newton a week before. He was buried (from the church) in the cemetery at Newton, July 31, 1913.—H. Walter Featherstun.

CLAIBORNE McDONALD was born in Covington County, Miss., October 21, 1826. His parents were Hugh and Catherine (McCollum) McDonald, who had migrated from Richmond County, North Carolina. In 1852 he went to his grandfather's in North Carolina, to help in caring for the old man, and attended school near the grandfather's home. Later he attended Bennettsville Academy in South Carolina, and still later the Lovensburg High School in North Carolina. In 1857 he returned to Mississippi and taught school at Pleasant Grove, now Mount Olive. While hearing a sermon by Dr. Fullenwider in the Presbyterian church at Mount Olive, July 12, 1857, he was converted; and in September he joined the Methodist Protestant Church. He was licensed to preach on October 10. He served as a local preacher and taught school until November, 1858, when he entered the itinerancy. His first work was as junior preacher under Rev. William McCormick on the Chicasaha Circuit; and he did most of the work because his senior was very feeble. In 1859-60 he served the Bucatunna Circuit. In 1861 he was pastor of Clarke Circuit; but in May of that year he entered the Confederate Army—Wayne Rifles, Thirteenth Mississippi Regiment. At Corinth, Miss., Union City, Tenn., and then in the Army of Northern Virginia, he saw active service. At the battle in front of Richmond he was wounded. In 1863 he was made chaplain of the Twenty-first Mississippi Regiment, and served as such until the end of the war. He was appointed by the President of his Conference to a small circuit in Wayne County, which he served, teaching school for a living, until the close of the Conference year. In 1866 he was on the Waynesboro Circuit, teaching school and studying dentistry as well. In 1867-8 he served the Strong River Circuit, and in 1869-70 the Enon Circuit. He was Secretary of his Conference when the union of that Conference with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was consummated. His first charge in our Church was Morton, which he served during 1872-4. In 1875-6 he served Forest and Lake; Hillsboro in 1877; Raleigh in 1878; Newton in 1879; Trenton, 1880-2; Strong River, 1883-4; Morton, 1885-7. In 1888-91 he was presiding elder of the Wcodville District, and of the Brandon District in 1892-

5. In 1896 he was pastor at Morton and Forest; 1897-8, Caseyville; 1899-1901, at Providence; 1903, at Satartia; 1904-5, at Benton; 1906-8, at Lake. At the Conference held at Yazoo City in 1908 he asked for the superannuate relation. He then removed to Pelahatchie, where he made his home until his translation. Brother McDonald was twice married—in November, 1868, to Miss Eliza S. Sims, who bore two children; and, after her death, to Miss Rachel R. Flannagan, of Morton, Miss., who bore nine children. All of his children and the second wife survive him. He lived a long and useful life, having served one year as a local preacher, fifty years as an active itinerant, and more than four years on the honor roll. He was a good preacher, a faithful pastor, and a wise administrator of the Church's affairs. He was a man of strong convictions, a genuine Scotsman, as his name indicates—a Christian Scotchman. He was careful in his plans and thoroughly systematic in all his work. He kept for years rather a full diary. He was true to his Church, its regulations and customs. He was greatly loved by the people whom he served, and by his brethren of the Conference. Shortly before his death he dictated a loving message to his brethren. It was published in the Advocate at New Orleans. He was a patient sufferer, and met death unafraid. A few days before the end came he said to his family: "Watch the clock; the minute my breath leaves me, I am entering Heaven." On April 1, at one o'clock and five minutes after, the Lord said: "It is enough; come up higher." The funeral services were held in the village church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. H. W. Featherstun, D.D., J. M. Weems, D.D., A. F. Watkins, D.D., J. M. Morse, A. M. Broadfoot, C. C. Griffin, W. N. Roberts, pastor of the Baptist Church in Pelahatchie, and C. S. Lewis. By loving hands he was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pelahatchie. Farewell, my brother; we shall meet you again.—J. T. Abney.

JOHN WESLEY SANDELL was born September 18, 1829, at the Sandell home three miles northwest of Magnolia, Miss., and passed to his eternal reward from his home in Magnolia, May 17, 1913. Brother Sandell spent his early life on the farm, where he grew to manhood, availing himself of such educational advantages as were afforded. For a time he superintended a large plantation near the home of his nativity under the régime of slavery. Later he entered the mercantile business at Magnolia, in partnership with Dr. J. H. Laney, who was both a dentist and a minister of the gospel. Heeding the call of his country for volunteers, the subject of this sketch enlisted in the service of the Confederacy, leaving Magnolia on April 29, 1862, as second lieutenant of Quinn's Guards, afterwards known as Company K of the Thirty-ninth Mississippi Regiment of Infantry. He was soon promoted to the rank of first lieutenant, which position he held till captured in the siege of Port Hudson, July 9, 1863. As a prisoner of war he was transported to Johnson's Island, where he was held till the close of the war. A surviving member of his company remembers Brother Sandell's war record as that of a brave and faithful soldier who never shirked a duty nor quailed in the presence of danger. He sometimes preached to the soldiers in camp, neither the strenuousness of army life nor the demoralizing influences incident thereto deterring him from the exercise of the sacred functions of the gospel ministry. Following the death of Dr. Otkin, the first chaplain, Brother Sandell was elected chaplain of Stogdell Camp No. 334. U. C. V., which office he held at the time of his death. One of his last appearances in public was on Decoration Day, April 26, at the Magnolia Cemetery, when he officiated as chaplain in the ceremonies incident to the decoration of the graves of some two hundred Confederate soldiers. On this occasion an original poem from his pen was read by one of the Daughters of the local chapter of the U. D. C. Brother Sandell was married three times. His first wife was Louisa Thompson, to whom he was married December 11, 1856. To them was born two sons: Hugh Murray, born September 29, 1857—died January 6, 1872; and Daniel Ford, born November 12, 1859—died September 28, 1861. The mother of these sons died September 17, 1862. The second marriage was to Permelia Louisa Powell, September 10, 1865. This union was dissolved by the death of the wife on December 12, 1893. The last marriage, September 15, 1894, was to Mary L. Simmons, who survives to mourn his departure. The following facts relating to the religious and ministerial life of Brother Sandell are gathered from a record kept in his family Bible and from private memoranda found among his papers after his death: In 1855, at the age of twenty-six years, he was received into the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Topisaw Church, now known as Topisaw Camp Ground. Two years later, on July 4, 1857, he was licensed to preach, the original license, still in a state of preservation, being signed by the late J. G. Jones as presiding elder. His gifts were exercised in the local rank for thirteen years, while he followed the profession of teaching. His ordination papers show that he was ordained deacon at Canton, Miss., December 1, 1861, and elder at Brookhaven, Miss., December 4, 1866, Bishop Paine officiating in both instances. In December, 1870, he was admitted into the traveling connection on trial in the Mississippi Conference. The record of appointments served by Brother Sandell is as follows: Holmesville, 1871-2; Amite, 1873; Bogue Chitto, 1874; St. Helena, 1875; China Grove, 1876; Rocky Springs, 1877-8; Magnolia, 1879-81; Pearlinton, 1882; Meadville, 1883-4; East Feliciana, 1885; Lake, 1886; Springfield, 1887-8; supernumerary, 1889; Beauregard, 1890; Franklinton, 1891; Wilkinson, 1892; supernumerary, 1893-September 1900; Fernwood, 1900 (part of the year); Lincoln, 1901; Bogue Chitto, 1902; Osyka, 1903-5; superannuated, 1906-13. Thus it appears that he was a minister of the gospel for fifty-six years, and that for nearly forty-three years of this time he was a member of the Mississippi Conference. The writer's impression of Brother Sandell as a pastor was that he was diligent and painstaking, attending with great care to the smallest details of a pastor's work. Believing in the dignity and importance of the work in which he was engaged, he attended to it in a business-like way. In his views, as expressed privately, and publicly, Brother Sandell was thoroughly evangelical. He delighted to see what he called the old-time revival fires kindled on the altars of the Church. He loved his own Church, and believed that the doctrines of Methodism constitute the best statement of the doctrines of the Holy Scripture; but his love for Methodism did not render him intolerant toward other evangelical denominations. He loved all God's people. He was fervent in prayer. It was a blessing to hear his trembling voice leading the congregation in its supplication to the throne of grace. He loved the house of God more and more to the last, and if he was absent from worship on Sunday morning, it was known that physical infirmities had kept him away. Brother Sandell delighted to preach, and neglected no opportunity to do so as long as his physical strength would permit. He was sweet-spirited in retirement. With him subjective weakening and physical decline did not result in that morbid condition that sees the Church being degraded and the world growing worse. Never a robust man, he realized that in his weakness God was his strength. Having put his hand to the plow in the long ago, he resolutely went forward without looking back. He did not set out to build without first having counted the cost. "For the joy that was set before him," like his Master, he "endured the cross, despising the shame"; and the joy made light the cross he bore. In his last illness Brother Sandell lingered for two weeks, the last several days of which he lay in a comatose condition, from which he aroused at intervals for a few lucid moments. His last periods of consciousness were passed in full view of impending death. At such periods it was a benediction to be about his couch. He calmly talked about death, and expressed the wish that all his friends might be present to witness how peacefully a Christian can die. He hastened in the race with death to dictate messages of love and counsel to relatives and friends. He called by name many of the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and requested that they should be informed of his affection for them in his last hours. To the little children who gazed upon his wasted form he spoke words of endearment and gave most wholesome advice. For the smallest effort to contribute to his comfort he did not fail to express his gratitude, declaring himself unworthy of such kindness. He entered most heartily into the prayers offered at his bedside, responding with fervent amens. As long as speech was afforded, passage after passage of Scripture and line after line of familiar hymns were heard to fall from his trembling lips; and even when the voice became too husky to be intelligible, occasional words of praise and of transport could be caught by the ears of the anxious attendants. Toward the end came clearly and distinctly the words of the old hymn:

"Jesus can make a dying-bed Feel soft as downy pillows are,
While on his breast I lean my head,
And breathe my life out sweetly there."

On the afternoon of the holy Sabbath, May 18, the body was borne to the Magnolia Methodist Church and placed before the chancel, hard by the seat he had been accustomed to occupy through the hour of worship. The writer was assisted in the funeral service by Revs. J. C. Ellis and B. W. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, and R. L. Bunyard, pastor of the Magnolia Baptist Church. From the church the body was carried by loving hands to its last resting place in the Magnolia Cemetery. In his death a disconsolate widow is left to mourn a devoted husband; a community suffers the loss of one of its most honored citizens; the Mississippi Conference loses a worthy veteran from its ranks; and the militant Church has made a contribution to the Church triumphant. We shall see our fallen comrade again, and in a fairer clime, when for us life's fleeting day is done and we go home to our Father's house of many mansions.—J. A. Moore.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? M. H. Neely. 1.

MATTHEW HAMMOND NEELY, son of Greenleaf and Nancy Lawrence Neely, was born in Warrick County, Ind., March 6, 1836. When he was about ten years of age his parents moved to Texas, locating near Sulphur Bluff, Hopkins County. In this vicinity, in the twelfth year of his age, he embraced religion under the ministry of Rev. James M. Johnson and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was licensed to exhort by Rev. Samuel Lynch in March, 1854; to preach, by Rev. J. R. Bellamy in August, 1855; was admitted on trial in the East Texas Conference in the fall of 1856 at Paris, Bishop Paine presiding; ordained deacon at Tyler, by Bishop Pierce, in 1858; and elder, by Bishop Andrew, at Jefferson in 1860. In 1855-6 he was a student at McKenzie College, and later received the A.B. degree through the Southwestern University as a successor of McKenzie College. He was thrice married; his first wife was Miss Eva Sanders, and from this union were born four children; one died in infancy, two were twins, Ava and Eva. Ava grew to womanhood and married Prof. S. J. King, of Sulphur Springs, and to them were born six daughters, now bright, promising young ladies. The mother died a few years since at Como. Eva died in girlhood at Dallas, and Ella, the oldest, died later in life—dearer to her father by reason of her lifelong affliction. His second wife was Mrs. Sarah Dowell, of Sherman, who was a most devoted, loving mother to the three little girls, as well as a faithful, helpful wife. His last marriage was with Mrs.

Winton, of Gainesville, May 13, 1896, an accomplished Christian woman, who mourns her loss. Dr. Neely was a man of small stature and compact build, possessed of a bright intellect, quick perception, ready utterance, a lover of good books and current literature, well grounded in the doctrine and polity of his Church, and an able defender of the same when occasion required; but in the main his preaching was of an expository and evangelical character. He was a charming preacher, never lacking for word or thought; elegant in diction, graceful in manner, forceful, earnest, and convincing in speech; out of a well-stored mind and a soul on fire of God he never failed to instruct while he edified and inspired his hearers. The pulpit was his throne, and he easily ranked among our best preachers. His was a fruitful ministry—many will call him blessed—his converts were legion. He was a born gentleman—observant of the amenities and proprieties of social life—he never gave offense to any, and in turn was jealous of the rights and feelings of a gentleman. He was an artless, unsuspecting man—lived in the open—free, frank, confiding, and abiding in his friendships. The designing could have deceived him; the true would not—he was too noble and magnanimous. He enjoyed in a very high degree the love, confidence, and respect of the brethren of his Conference. Beginning with circuit work, he arose to the leading appointments, such as Denton, Sulphur Springs, Paris, Jefferson, Bonham, Sherman, and Dallas stations, and Kaufman, Sulphur Springs, and Terrell districts, and the leading appointments of the Denver Conference—Trinidad District and Denver and Pueblo stations—during his six years' connection with that Conference. Bating the few years of transfer to the Denver Conference for the benefit of his wife's health, he had a continuous membership of over fifty years in the North Texas Conference and territory occupied by that Conference, though for a short time under the name of East Texas and Trinity Conference. For twenty years he served acceptably on the General Board of Church Extension; for a number of years he was a curator of the Southwestern University, and received the doctorate from that institution in recognition of his distinguished service to the Church. He was a delegate to the Centennial Conference of American Methodism that met in Baltimore in 1884. He was for six consecutive terms a delegate to the General Conference, beginning with the Conference of 1874 and ending with that of 1894. He was an acceptable member of the order of Masons and of Odd Fellows; but more than anything else he was a Christian, a minister, and a Methodist. He was a man of remarkable health. For fifty-three years, consecutively, he answered to Conference roll call; and then the wheels of life began to give way, and he surrendered his charge at Jacksboro Station in 1909, and retired to his home in Gainesville, where he spent the evening of his life as a superannuate, surrounded by loving, helpful friends. When the end came he had gone on a visit to San Antonio, and on Sunday, April 27, 1913, died under the shadow of the Alamo, on the date of whose tragic event he was born seventy-seven years go. The body was returned to Gainesville for interment, and an imposing and beautiful Christian burial was given this deserving man of God, after the order of the Church he had served so long and faithfully. A most impressive and appropriate sermon was preached in Denton Street Church by the pastor, Rev. J. L. Pierce, to a large and sympathetic audience, from the text, "And, behold, a door was opened in heaven," Revelation iv. 1. Revs. J. F. Pierce, J. E. Roach, F. A. Rosser, and the writer, members of his Conference, were present and participated in the services. Revs. S. M. Black and H. C. Hand were also present. A long train of loving friends followed the body to its last resting place in the Fairview Cemetery, where it was formally committed to the grave, "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," April 29, 1913, awaiting the general resurrection. Thus ends the consecrated life and successful career of one of our oldest and most honored ministers and one of the nearest and dearest friends of the writer. Our friendship began when students at McKenzie College and intensified with a companionship of nearly sixty years. My life was ennobled and enriched by his. He baptized our firstborn. His name will ever be a household word with us and with many. Heaven is near and dearer by his going. May his consecrated mantle fall upon the brethren of his Conference and quicken to greater zeal and more faithful service, and may a gracious Providence comfort and sustain the bereaved wife and children.—John H. McLean.

MARCUS CICERO THOMAS was born in Beaufort, N. C., January 15, 1831. His father was a sea captain and lived much of the time away from his family. But Marcus did not lack religious training, and was converted early in life and joined the Methodist Church. His conversion was accompanied by that experience that characterized early Methodists—the witness of the Spirit. So abiding was this experience that he never for a day wavered in his Christian duties. He began active work in the Church before he was grown, being made class leader in his Church at the age of eighteen. Before he had attained his majority he felt the call to preach, and responded gladly. To him the call to preach was a call to get ready, and to this task he addressed himself at once with zeal. He entered the State University in 1851, and graduated four years later. At the University his life was an exemplary one. He worked hard at his books and ranked high as a student, but he did not forget his religious duties, being an active worker in all that pertained to the religious life of the students. Graduating in the spring of 1855, he applied the following fall at Wilmington for admission into the North Carolina Conference and was admitted. Here he began an itinerancy that lasted for more than a quarter of a century. Only twice during this period did he cease from the active ministry, and then for short periods. During the year 1864 he was agent for religious reading for soldiers, and served his Master well in this field. He went back into the itinerancy in 1865. Again in 1871 he had to give up preaching, owing to a runaway accident that cost him the loss of one of his lower limbs. This occurred while he was on the Roxboro Circuit, and forced him to lay off for two years. As soon as he was able to go he took up the itinerancy again, and for nine years served the Lord in whatever field he was assigned to. At the Conference of 1883, his health having failed, he took the superannuate relation. The charges he served are as follows: Franklinton Circuit, Rowan Circuit, Mocksville Circuit, Louisburg Station, Halifax Circuit, Wentworth Circuit, Goldsboro Station, Roxboro Circuit, Snow Hill Circuit, Ansonville Circuit, Concord Circuit, Pleasant Grove Circuit, Davidson Circuit, Smithfield Circuit, and Cokesbury Circuit. In 1858 he was married to Miss Henrietta Lea, daughter of Rev. Solomon Lea, who was the first president of Greensboro Female College. In this good woman he found a suitable companion for his chosen work. To them were born eight children, five of whom, with his widow, survive him. After his superannuation, Brother Thomas moved to Cary, N. C., and lived for a while. Here he met with another runaway accident that seriously impaired him for getting about. After living at Cary several years, he moved to Leasburg, N. C., the home of his wife's father, and bought a little home and settled down for life. It was at Leasburg that I came to know him in an intimate way. Being his pastor, I called on him frequently, and always received his blessing. I count it one of the greatest blessings of my life to have been thrown with this saint of God for two years. He was eighty years old when I first saw him in his home, but one would hardly have thought so, he was so active. He followed strictly Mr. Wesley's advice with regard to the use of time, and was never triflingly employed. He divided his time between his books, his garden, and the sick. He was of a cheerful disposition, and never allowed his health or circumstances to destroy his happiness. He said he had as soon swear as to fret. He was loyal to his pastor and to his Church. As long as he was able he preached for his pastor or neighboring pastors when they desired him to do so. When too old to go out and preach, he was still faithful in attending preaching and prayer meeting when he could possibly get to church. Never shall I forget the evening of his eighty-second birthday. It was prayer-meeting night, and the night was dark and cold, for it was the fifteenth of January. I was not expecting many out that night, and no old folks at all. But as I neared the church door, I saw Brother Thomas going up the steps. He had come out to meet with God's people in a prayer-meeting service. I called on him to offer the opening prayer, and he responded heartily. What a prayer it was! He had so much to thank the Father for, and especially was he grateful for the many years he had been allowed to live. Standing up, for that was his custom in prayer, and supporting himself on his cane, the old saint poured out his soul to God in prayer. I could not help thinking of Jacob, who, we are told in Scripture, worshiped leaning upon the top of his staff. It was last May that his health suddenly began to fail. He had set his heart on attending Trinity College commencement and the Durham District Conference, which occasions came off in June. His health would not permit his attending either, and it was a sore disappointment to him. He now gradually gave up all his plans for the future, and his hold on life was correspondingly loosened. Early in October it was plain the end was not far off. He became unconscious Sunday, October 12, and from then till his death, the following Monday evening, he had but one period of consciousness. But that was glorious in its testimony, and will long be remembered by those who were with him. On Tuesday, October 14, the funeral service was held in the church he loved so well and had attended so faithfully. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Leasburg, beside a son who died some years ago. There he, with a company of saints, sleeps, awaiting the coming of the Lord.—C. R. Ross.

WILLIAM WALTER ROSE.—In Warren County in the year 1857, that great prophet of our God, the Rev. John Tillet, united in marriage a young couple descended from Revolutionary heroes—Robert F. Rose and Bettie Penix Duke. Of this marriage William Walter was born October 21, 1858. He was a child of deep religious nature and of studious mind, of ready obedience to parents and of marked reverence toward God. In 1877, under the ministry of the Rev. A. A. Boshamer, he was converted to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1884, after keen introspection and out of much prayer, he answered the call of God to the ministry, and joined the North Carolina Conference at its session in Wilmington. His first charge was Hobgood Mission, which he served in 1885. During this year he was married to Mary Jordan, of Warren County. In 1886-9 he served La Grange Circuit; 1890-3, Fremont Circuit. In the fall of 1893 he moved to Prescott, Ariz., for the health of his wife, and served that station until March, 1894, when, with a forlorn hope as to his wife's health, he returned to North Carolina. Before the year closed his wife was taken. In 1894-7 he served Pittsboro Circuit; 1898-1901, Mount Gilead Circuit; 1902-4, Weldon Station; 1905, Central Academy; 1906-9, Warrenton Circuit; 1910-13, Franklinton Circuit. On February 5, 1913, in his home at Franklinton, he heard another call of God, and laid down his work among us. In 1896 he was married to Emma Foushee, of Chatham County, who, with three children of the first marriage and four children of the second marriage, survives him. Thus is given in brief statement the material lines that bounded his ministry among us; but to the widening spiritual range of his work no bounds can be given. A worker at peace with God and with his fellow-men, bending to his task with a glad heart, trying to serve his generation by the will of God, has been released from labor while

It is yet day. A prince of the realm, busy with the affairs of the Kingdom, concerned about the King's honor, and faithful in the field and upon the most distant frontier, has received the summons to appear at court. "The King can do no wrong"—and so it is well. Those of us who knew him—and many of us knew him, for his life was in the open and there was nothing hid—those of us who knew him knew that some day God would call him; but we did not expect that call to come while the full task was in his hand. I doubt not that he was ready—his sandaled feet were always ready. Heaven had no message that Will Rose was not ready to obey. But I cannot contemplate his going without a keen sense of shock and of loss. We had no worker whose name gave greater assurance of the completed task. The Conference knew that it had done the best that could be done for a charge when he was sent to it; there was never any doubt or question about the work; the Church had absolute certainty as to the results. He was not our greatest orator, he was not the best educated of our preachers, he was not a man of the most resplendent gifts; and yet there is not a man among us who has done finer work than he, there is not a man who has builded more surely and more firmly. For effectiveness and for moral uplift there are few that may be ranked with him. He stood out of the common class. Go over the charges that he has served and see how deep and abiding are the tracks that he made, and you will say that there have been but few like him. What was the secret of his power? What was the cause of his greater usefulness? How was it that he excelled so many of his brethren? It was his absolute devotion to duty, it was his entire consecration to God, it was the perfect surrender of himself to the work of the ministry. He showed the world what a man can do that is wholly given to his work. He had many advantages. He was born in a home that was built under the covenant, he had the example of God-fearing parents, he was reared in the refinement of a Christian community, he was a student from his youth, his mental habit was philosophical, his judgments were unusually safe, his social nature was delightful; but the thing that gave him power above his fellows was his deep earnestness and his conscientious devotion to his work. He was always about his Father's business. Men loved him, men honored him, men consented to be admonished of him, men became pure-minded and gentle in his presence, men had faith in religion when they looked upon him. He doubtless was not perfect, and yet I never saw him act in any manner unbecoming the ambassador of heaven. I never saw him blunder, I never saw him make a mistake, so careful was he with the King's business, and so completely did he give himself to the leadings of the Spirit. His last public ministry was to call sinners to repentance. The friends at Franklinton tell us of how impassioned was his appeal to sinners at the close of his last service on Sunday evening before his departure.

"Happy if with my latest breath

I may but gasp his name,

Preach him to all and cry in death,

'Behold, behold the Lamb!'"

He is not dead. "He that liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." Such a soul is secure in the wide freedom of life. You cannot bind him; you cannot so seal the tomb but that an angel will roll the stone away. There is such a thing as death, but not for the righteous. The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life. He is not dead, he has entered into life.—J. N. Cole.

KENNETH DAWSON HOLMES.—When Kenneth D. Holmes fell on sleep, the King of kings recalled a royal ambassador. The warm clasp of his hand and his cheery smile were outward tokens of sincerity, courage, and sympathy. He was truly a good fellow and a good mixer, getting close to men in their daily lives. But he was true to his King and unafraid. Gentle and friendly when he might be, and stern only when duty demanded, his life and conduct carried a message of goodwill to men without any overture to the powers of evil for compromise. And so the people loved him and mourn his departure—not those of his own Church alone, or of all the Churches, but his acquaintance generally. And yet he was a man who not only could, but did, rebuke the rich and powerful, and the lowly as well, when duty called him to the task. Kenneth Dawson Holmes was the son of Richard Ruffin Holmes and his wife, Amanda Bridgers, and was born in Franklin County, N. C., November 7, 1858. He died at Sanford, N. C., April 24, 1913. At fourteen years of age he professed a saving faith in Christ and was received into the membership of the Christian Church at Pope's Chapel, not far from his home near Franklinton, N. C. He was educated at Horner's school, Henderson, N. C., and entered commercial life, becoming a popular and successful traveling salesman, which business he pursued for a number of years. He was happily married on October 26, 1882, to Ida Norman Long, daughter of Norman and Mary E. Long, of Franklinton, N. C. Of this union were born Maude, May (now Mrs. M. Stuart Davis), Jessie, Ida, Richard, and Russell Holmes, who, with their mother, survive him. In 1891 Brother Holmes became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was licensed to preach, and the same year received into the traveling connection, on trial, by the Conference at Greenville, N. C. At the Conference held at Fifth Street Church, Wilmington, N. C., in 1893, he was elected to deacon's orders and ordained by Bishop Duncan; and at the Conference held at Elizabeth City, in 1895, he was elected to elder's orders and ordained by Bishop Wilson. He served by appointment the following charges: Brooklyn Station, Rolesville, Tar River, Oxford, Smithfield, and Roxboro circuits, and Fifth Street and Sanford stations. Brother Holmes was taken ill on July 8, 1912. As soon as his condition permitted, he was taken to the Medico-chirurgical Hospital in Philadelphia by Dr. Lynn McIver. There he was operated on for gallstones on September 17, 1912. He returned from the hospital on October 20 of that year and resumed his work on November 3, but never regained his strength. At seven o'clock on the evening of April 23, 1913, he was again taken violently ill, and died in about seven hours, of acute indigestion and angina pectoris. The funeral was conducted from the parsonage in Sanford, N. C., at nine o'clock, A.M., April 25, 1913, by Rev. R. B. John, assisted by Revs. A. D. Betts and R. C. Beaman. He is buried in the old family burying ground five miles from Franklinton, N. C. Brother Holmes was a good preacher. He was a clear and logical thinker and a firm believer in the way of salvation pointed out in God's holy Word and in the interpretation of the Scriptures sanctioned by the Church of his choice. His sermons always rang clear and were characterized by the emphasis of personal conviction. But the broadness of his mental vision and the gentleness of his spirit always tempered his speech and kept him from any appearance of intolerance. Believing that his message was from God, he always realized that other men might both receive and give that message in other forms. So he was tactful in his utterances. And God blessed his ministry with many conversions. To his pastoral work, as to the pulpit, Brother Holmes brought the experience of "the road." Before he entered the ministry, he had learned to know men and how to approach them. He had gained an insight into their needs and learned to win them to his "House." When he came to deal with deeper needs and to represent eternal interests, he had acquired a tact that gave effect to his natural sympathy and his realization of the importance of his mission. We shall miss Brother Holmes. But, as we pay this last tribute to his memory, faith tells us of the eternal mansions prepared in heaven for those who rest from their labors; and we believe that our departed brother has carried to the Better Land a good report of his ministry. We love him well and esteem his faithfulness and zeal, but we doubt not that God's clear vision shall approve many acts of sacrifice and devotion that were hid from our dim sight, and give him a reward which human eye has not seen, nor mortal ear heard, nor heart of man conceived.—J. T. Gibbs.

DANIEL CLARK GEDDIE was born in Cumberland County, about twelve miles east of Fayetteville, N. C., on October 4, 1859. He was the third son of Daniel and Elizabeth Geddies. When fourteen years of age he was converted and joined the Methodist Church; and early in life he received his call to preach the gospel of Christ and began his ministry by individual work, talking and sending messages to comrades and friends. He was educated at Jonesboro High School and at Trinity College. He remained three years at the latter place and made an average grade of ninety-two. He loved the institution, always speaking a word for it and encouraging young men to enter therein. Only a short time since, he desired to have work near Durham, so that he might have the advantage which Trinity College offers. Brother Geddies was licensed to preach April 17, 1886, and was admitted on trial at the Reidsville Conference, 1886, Bishop Granbery presiding. On January 25, 1888, he was joined in matrimony to Miss Leanna M. Maxwell, to which union there were twelve children born, nine of them, with his wife, surviving him. Always in the effective ranks, except the year 1912, Brother Geddie was absent from no session of his Conference. He received his appointments from year to year, as a faithful, loyal itinerant preacher, serving on circuits for twenty-five years.

"Through heat and cold and storm his way has lain;
He never heeded Pleasure's siren strain,
Telling of easier paths, nor turned aside
To pluck the flowers in meadows green and wide."

His appointments were: 1887, Zion and Prospect; 1888-9, Jackson Hill Circuit; 1890, Deep River Circuit; 1891-2, Bladen Circuit; 1893-6, Magnolia Circuit; 1897, Craven Circuit; 1898, Clinton Circuit; 1899-1900, Grifton Circuit; 1901-4, Jones Circuit; 1905-8, Onslow Circuit; 1909-11, Whiteville Circuit; 1912, superannuated; 1913, Kenansville Circuit. As a preacher Brother Geddie was sound and evangelical, having a passion for souls. He would weep over them, and was powerful in prayer. As a pastor he was true and faithful, making strong friends, and his friendships were sincere and lasting. The poor and afflicted soon learned to love him and realized in him a great sympathizer. Quiet of nature, he was not known till association brought him and the people closer together. "Those who knew him best, loved him most." He was the soul of honor, and his life was clean. He was in the highest sense of the word a Christian gentleman. It was in his own home that his character shone brightest and best. Always gentle and kind, shielding his wife from hardships as far as possible and holding his children as confidants and companions. At the Conference at Kinston, N. C., in 1911, Brother Geddie's health was such that he superannuated, and resided at Rose Hill, N. C., where he farmed. The year proved very beneficial. He preached often, and he enjoyed it. Many times he said he wanted to die in the harness. His health having seemingly improved, he was given Kenansville Circuit at the Fayetteville Conference, which work he went into with a glad heart, full of the Master's spirit, desiring to be of help to humanity. Only a few short weeks of labor, when disease reappeared in its worst form, and after an illness of about eight days the summons came to him in Raleigh, N. C., January 30, 1913. A good man gone, a comrade has fallen, a faithful servant of God has been called to his reward. May the comforting power of God be with the bereaved wife and children, relatives and friends. Dear Brother, rest in peace, and may a happy reunion await us in our Father's home.—B. H. Black.

JAMES BUCHANAN BRIDGERS.—To Burgess and Jane Martin Bridgers, in Northampton County, N. C., July 5, 1856, was born James Buchanan Bridgers. His early life was spent in his home community, where his educational advantages were confined to the old-field school. His marriage, January 6, 1876, to Miss Georgiana Cooke, a teacher of his native county, was providential. She diligently instructed him until he had acquired a practical knowledge of business, to which he long and industriously devoted himself. Meanwhile he was not a Christian, though loyal to Methodism, and principally by his own efforts built a church. He rigidly practiced and zealously advocated temperance, never using either strong drink or tobacco, and discouraging their use by others. His devoted wife was importunate in believing prayer for his conviction and conversion; these came in the good old-fashioned way, when after a painful protracted struggle, he was gloriously converted, October 23, 1895. At once he felt definitely called by the Holy Spirit to the work of the ministry. Having unreservedly consecrated his life to God's service, the next year, while attending camp meeting at Mountain Lake Park, Md., he received a special anointing, by the power of which he undertook the preaching of the divine Word. With him, too, this was original, as he fully depended upon the Holy Spirit for interpretation and utterance. Brother Bridgers never wrote a sermon—made no use of condensed manuscript in the pulpit; but after thoughtful reading, careful study, and fervent prayer, he earnestly delivered the inspired message; like Paul, "he reasoned out of the Scriptures." Soundly converted, divinely called, anointed by the Holy Ghost, depending upon divine help, armed with the sword of the Spirit, with a consuming passion for souls, he went forth in Jesus' name, and God owned and honored his assiduous labors. At the organization of the Atlantic Mission Conference in Morehead City in 1898, he became a charter member, and was appointed by Bishop Mallett to mission work, which he faithfully and successfully did for several years. Following a period of evangelistic work, in the fall of 1908 he was accepted for the Fremont Circuit, Washington District, North Carolina Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to fill out Rev. C. R. Taylor's unexpired year. This done, at the Durham Conference he was received as an elder from the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was assigned by Bishop Wilson to the Ayden Circuit, where he had two good, prosperous years. His only other appointment was the Bath Circuit, a charge of ten preaching places. In the midst of his third year of abundant and fruitful labors, after some five weeks of declining health, without the tediousness and trial of confinement to a bed of affliction, at 8:45 p.m., July 15, 1913, with the evening refreshed by grateful showers, James Buchanan Bridgers answered the final summons, saying, "My work is finished." He is survived by his wife and five of their eight children. A son, Rev. Luther B. Bridgers, is a prominent evangelist. His attachment to his family and their devotion to him were alike beautiful. Under the constraint of love and sincerely indorsing the itinerant system, God's servant asked no favors, but gladly took what was given him, and endeavored to do his best, whether as preacher or pastor. He spared not himself. He loved his work and his flock, and visited freely and cheerfully from house to house, reading the Word to and praying with and counseling the people, who loved and trusted him as their friend and pastor. He put energy and enthusiasm into gathering the collections, and took pride in carrying encouraging reports to the Conference. His short record shows more than one hundred souls added to the Church on profession of faith. The spirit of optimism had much to do with the achievements of his ministry; for he always claimed that he had the best charge in the district. Many of his brethren, while sadly missing him, will gratefully remember the congeniality of his companionship. Brother Bridgers's remains were interred near Bethany Church, in the neighborhood of his birth, after appropriate services led by Rev. D. L. Earnhardt, assisted by Revs. W. C. Merritt and C. A. Jones. Serving, as we did, adjoining pastorates for eighteen months, it was my privilege to know Brother Bridgers well; and, while I felt unworthy to write this memoir, I am humbly glad to pay a sincere, affectionate tribute to one whose consistent life was an inspiration to all and whose fraternal bearing greatly blessed me.

"If coming days, good friends, be dark or fair,

May the dear Father keep me in his care,
As he kept you too—I will always pray,
Until we meet again, some happy day."

—R. H. Broom.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? C. W. Carter. 1.

CHARLES W. CARTER.—Of the six daughters of George Dougherty, an emigrant from the North of Ireland, and Mary Higginbotham, the youngest, Emeline Elizabeth, became the wife of an Englishman by the name of Thomas Carter, who came to Louisiana by way of Georgia in 1830. Mr. Carter settled in East Feliciana Parish, La., where his only child, Charles William, was born November 27, 1833. He died in 1835, and two years later his widow was married to Mr. W. F. Flynn, who removed his family to a plantation in the parish of Tensas. Mrs. Flynn was a devout Presbyterian, and ministers of all denominations were welcomed to her home. The family became identified with the Methodist Church, and held membership in Davies Chapel, named after one of the early circuit preachers. From his youth up Charles W. Carter walked in the way of the holy commandments. Religion was normal to the household life, and the children early came under the influence of the gospel as preached from Methodist pulpits. His early education was had of private tutors, and in 1851 he entered Centenary College of Louisiana, where he graduated in 1855 with twenty-two others, taking the first honors. With T. C. W. Ellis, his lifelong friend and co-honor man at Centenary, he entered the Law Department of the Louisiana University, where he graduated in 1857, again bearing off the first honors, and by unanimous choice of his class delivering the valedictory address. Mr. Carter practiced law in New Orleans for a short time, and then returned to his home in the parish of Tensas, where he married Miss Clara L. Pentecost, March 17, 1859. This marriage was an ideal one. Mrs. Carter became the mother of eleven children, six of whom survive both parents; the others died in infancy or early childhood. The living children are Briscece, a minister in the Louisiana Conference; Mattie (Mrs. F. Peace); Elizabeth (Mrs. A. D. McVoy); Thomas, a member of the Louisiana Conference and Professor in Vanderbilt University; J. Van, Secretary of the Louisiana State Sunday School Association; and Fannie (Mrs. Edward Gardia). Mrs. Carter died at Arcadia, La., after forty-six years of fidelity and zeal in the Methodist itinerancy. Shortly after Mr. Carter's marriage his stepfather turned over to him his maternal inheritance, an estate amounting to one hundred thousand dollars value in slaves and lands. It was in 1861, while civilian in charge of army supplies under the Confederate Government, that Charles W. Carter faced the crisis of his life under the ministry of Dr. Henry C. Thweatt, and chose the Methodist ministry as his life work. He had told his friend Judge Ellis while at the law school that he felt a call to preach the gospel. He was admitted on trial into the traveling connection at Alexandria, December, 1861. He ever thereafter.

amidst hardships and losses as well as the joys of the service of his Master, exemplified one of his favorite texts: "Neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." He endured hardship, abounded in labors, from beginning to end made full proof of his ministry. He sought not high things, but rejoiced in unstinted giving of himself to the service of Christ. He confessed late in life to an ambition—to be junior preacher on a large circuit. The record of his appointments is as follows: 1861, Point Coupé; 1862-5 were years of war and disorganization, and the General Minutes give no returns for the Louisiana Conference for that period, but C. W. Carter was preaching the gospel most of the time in the neighborhood of Bastrop. Resuming the record in the Minutes, we find him in Baton Rouge from 1866 to 1868; in 1869-70 he was again at Bastrop; in 1871-2 he was at Mansfield; in 1873-5 he was presiding elder of the Delhi (now the Monroe) District; in 1876-7 he was pastor at Trenton; in 1878 he was again at Bastrop, and the following year at Monroe and Trenton; in 1880-4 he was at Felicity Street, New Orleans; in 1885-6 at Carondelet Street; in 1887-92 he was editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, in connection with that position serving also during 1888 the Dryades Street Church, and in 1890 Carrollton and Gretna, and in 1892 he was also presiding elder of the New Orleans District. He remained on the New Orleans District two years, having no other work during the second year. In 1894 he was elected President of Centenary College of Louisiana, and remained in that important post among the scenes of his college life four years, cherishing and sustaining his alma mater. From 1898 to 1901 he was presiding elder of the Opelousas District (afterwards known as the Crowley and now as the Lafayette District); from the Crowley District he went back to First Church, Baton Rouge, after an interval of twenty-four years from the time when he had there declined the attractive prospects opened by an urgent call to St. Louis, preferring to remain in his own needy State to enjoying ecclesiastical and personal advantage. In 1904-5 he was stationed at Arcadia; in 1906-7 at New Iberia; and at the conclusion of his last year at New Iberia, with blessings resting upon him, with honors and achievements associated with his name, a man greatly beloved, he requested and was granted a superannuate relation. In 1879 the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Centenary College. In 1884 he was Fraternal Messenger to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting in Philadelphia. He collaborated in the preparation of the Hymn Book that preceded the Hymnal now in use. He was a member of the Board of Missions from 1887 to 1906. Eight times successively he was delegate to the General Conference—from 1878 to 1906. He was often in demand as preacher or speaker for special occasions, and never did he disappoint the expectation that had been raised by his great reputation as an orator. Dr. Carter was a great preacher. The elements of his greatness are easily catalogued, but they are not easy of achievement. His thorough classical and linguistic studies during his college course and his discipline in the law school afford the basis of his intellectual preparation. To the end of his days he continued a systematic and extensive reader. He carefully recorded the names of volumes read and the dates of reading. At seventy-five his year's list would equal for comprehensiveness and surpass for excellence of selection the five-foot library of Harvard's ex-President. He has recorded the reading of one thousand and seventy volumes, besides his perusals of the Bible in English. From 1858 to 1912 he had read the Old Testament through consecutively sixty-one times, and the New one hundred and seventy-five times. He was a deliberate student of style. He had read everything on rhetoric that he could lay his hands on, from Quintilian down to the latest Yale lectures. His voice had been cultivated until it was a marvel of sweetness and power and was under absolute control, the flexible vehicle of his feelings and his thoughts. The musical character of his utterance goes along with the fact that he was an amateur musician and in his youth had played the cornet. His flute afforded him recreation until late in life. His style was simple. He loved short, strong Anglo-Saxon words, and often demonstrated their power in persuasive address or in denouncing sin. He was picturesque and at times dramatic in utterance, though never in gesture. In conversation he was reticent, though not taciturn, sometimes becoming merry in reminiscence and discussion; but his passion for expression found vent in preaching. Another element in his greatness as a preacher was his careful preparation. Nothing but beaten oil did he bring into the sanctuary, yet his style never betrayed the marks of toil, never became stiff or stilted. But above all, Dr. Carter's preaching breathes the steadfast faith of a man who has proved the gospel the power of God unto salvation. I have never known one more calmly and fully persuaded of the efficiency of the gospel to cure human ills as well as to save the penitent sinner. He preached on great themes, and served his congregations with the "finest of the wheat." His preaching suffered no deterioration with advancing age. For years it was understood that he was to preach the sermon on the occasion of the ordination of elders at his own Conference; and on these occasions he was not below the power and excellence of his prime. Dr. Carter spent his superannuate years with his daughters in Natchitoches, where on December 30, 1912, he peacefully lay down at night to awaken in the new world. He was great in every aspect of his life, and he loved simplicity as only the great can. The genetic power of his noble and pure life will long be felt in the Church to which he consecrated his all.—Fitzgerald S. Parker.

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except in the case of Elton Wilson, who, by joining the Universalists, ceased to be a member of our Church.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Josephus Anderson. 1.

JOSEPHUS ANDERSON was born in Hanover County, Va., October 7, 1829; died in Leesburg, Fla., August 11, 1913. Thus briefly is recorded the span of life—born, died, with a significant blank between. However, the record of Dr. Anderson's life is not thus indicated, for between those dates there lies a biography of a high life and noble service. In January, 1848, he was licensed to preach, and in the same year joined the Virginia Conference and became, according to the custom in those days, junior preacher on Lancaster Circuit. Then followed his itinerant career of so many years, serving Hampton, Farmville, and Richmond, being transferred to the Florida Conference in 1854 and stationed at Tallahassee. Other appointments in our Conference were Quincy, presiding elder of the Tallahassee District, a supernumerary relation at Monticello, 1860. Left effective in the following year, he served Monticello, Thomasville, and Jacksonville, Leon Circuit, and other charges in Middle Florida. In 1875 he was transferred to the White River Conference, and was in 1886 transferred again to the Florida Conference, serving that year at Orlando. In 1887 he was appointed editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, remaining editor and publisher for fourteen years. In 1902, resigning the editorship, he took a superannuate relation, worn with toil and the burdens of years, to spend the evening tide of life like Abraham, looking for that City whose builder is God, while the kingdom of God was forming itself gloriously within his soul. Dr. Anderson was married December 11, 1851, to Miss Virginia L. Venable. They together walked the path of a united life till she was taken home to God, July 4, 1904. From that time Dr. Anderson was a lonely old man—and yet not alone, for God was always consciously with him. This God-consciousness—the witness of the Spirit, the assistance of Sonship, the sweet privilege of a spirit-born son of God and marks of a divine parentage—was, all in one, the measure of his attainment in grace; in nature much like the loving John, he was spiritually-minded; the one supreme purpose and dominant passion of his life being to “know Him,” and to enter into the “fellowship of his sufferings,” and thus as an imitator of Christ to perfect for himself a character so like that of his ascended Lord that it would admit him to the citizenship of heaven. His spiritual perceptions were clear; he saw the supreme value Christ placed on the affections, and gave his love; saw that mighty works were wrought by men whose hearts God had touched, rather than their intellects; that divine recognition was based on conditions of the soul, and not on mighty works; that the meek, the pure in heart, were the blessed ones of God; that what a man does is little—what he is, all important. Dr. Anderson was deeply spiritual; as a man of faith and prayer, we must esteem him most. He was a truly great preacher—the last that types his pulpit age, since which there has been a steady decline in our Church of pulpit eloquence and power, with a consequent loss of immediate results that attended their appeal to sinners. Dr. Anderson was a scholarly man—a lifelong student, an able expositor of the doctrines of our Church, and a defender of the faith. He wrote much and well, his pen reaching where his voice could not go to spread scriptural holiness over these lands. Our young men had in him a wise counselor and firm friend. The children loved him, because he loved and always noticed them. No man has left so many friends to sorrow; no man in our State has left such an influence for good. His name will not perish: his works do follow him; and he being dead, yet speaketh. God will establish the work of his hands, while in heaven the beauty of the Lord shines upon him. "Made perfect through sufferings" should be his epitaph; for he was not "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease," but learned obedience by the things which he suffered, and being made perfect, God gently said, "It is enough, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Ques. 22. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed. H. Reina and R. V. Atkisson withdrawn.

Ques. 23. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 20. Who are superannuated? None.

Ques. 21. What preachers have died during the past year? Daung Mok-san, Van Tsung-fco, Tsaung Li-sung. 3. (No memoirs of the two last named.)

DAUNG MOK-SAN was born in 1863 near Au Hai (Hsiahai) temple, village of Hong, in the country north of Shanghai, Kiangsu Province. His father died when he was a child, and he was reared by his mother, whose maiden name was Wang. In 1873 our Church opened a primary school on Zeh Zien Ka, Soochow, which was conducted by Rev. Dzao Tz Zeh (C.

K. Marshall). The old conservatism had not then been broken, and so progress was slow. At that time Brother Daung's mother had a good friend in the daughter of Rev. Waung Tsiak I, an elder of the American Episcopal Church, and through her got her son entered in the school. This was in 1874, when he was in his eleventh year. The next year Rev. A. P. Parker came to China and took charge of the Mission's work in Soochow. He shared with Mr. Dzao the work of the school and planned enlargements whose accomplishment laid the foundation of what is now Soochow University. The subject of this sketch was the first stone in that foundation. Though young, he was self-reliant and able to help other small boys, and so he won the love and respect of all his schoolmates. In his fourteenth year he was baptized and joined the Church, being the first fruits of our Soochow educational work. Now, fully matured and ready, he has been garnered in the heavenly storehouse. As the school prospered, and he grew older, the business manager of the school appointed Daung as his assistant, and he performed his new duties with diligence and efficiency. In 1879, when Daung was sixteen, Dr. Parker established Buffington Institute at Tien Sz Tsang. With his schoolmates to the number of seventeen, Daung was transferred thither. Thenceforth, both in intellectual attainments and in character, his progress kept pace with the years. As the organization of the school was not then complete, he did not receive a certificate, though the work he did was equivalent to that of a middle school course. In 1881, at the age of eighteen, he received license to exhort, and was appointed by Dr. Parker to do mission work and teach a school in a village to the east of Soochow. The next year he was licensed as a local preacher, and was moved to Luh Chih (Loh Dzeh). In 1883, not having proved suited to country work, he was transferred to Shanghai as a teacher in our "Hwo Zoen Daung." About two years later he was again preaching and assisting Dr. J. W. Lambuth in translation and similar work, in which he was very diligent. In 1885, at the age of twenty-two, he was married to Miss Ling Zok Yoen. Miss Ling was a pupil of Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, and was of an amiable and industrious disposition. Being a perfectly mated pair, their union in purpose and character greatly promoted the effectiveness of his work as a preacher. In 1886, aged twenty-three, he was appointed to Tsih Pao Circuit in charge of mission and day-school work. Two years later he went up to the Annual Conference and was admitted on trial. In 1890 he was appointed to Quinsan Circuit. In 1892 he was admitted into full connection in the Annual Conference. The next year he was moved to Chang Shu, where he served four years, and was then moved to Nanzing. In 1897 he was transferred to Sz Ching in the Shanghai District. As there was no church at Sz Ching, he lived at Huangtu (Wang du) two years, and from there was moved to Nanziang. In 1906 he was moved to Hongkew. In 1909 he was moved to Sungkiang, which was his last appointment and the scene of his best labors. For seven years he was a pupil in our schools; a teacher two years; and a minister of the gospel, first and last, twenty-nine years. Of a naturally kindly disposition, the sight of any one in want aroused his sympathy. Faithful in his relations with all men, he was trusted by them and resorted to for help. Slow of speech, he first thought deeply before he attempted to express himself. He sought earnestly the meaning of the Scriptures, that he might edify his hearers. In the pulpit he had a most earnest manner, while he was a good pastor, without reproach. He loved music, and delighted to lead the young in singing. Though able as a writer, he had no literary aspirations, and so he has left nothing written. A devoted preacher, he shirked no hardships. When already past fifty, he walked erect like a young man in his prime. Ever free from sickness, he bade fair to live to a green old age. But about the first of April he had a slight attack of fever. A doctor was consulted without benefit. He gradually became worse, and though other doctors were consulted, it was in vain. On June 3, at half-past four in the afternoon, he was called up higher. As he was about to pass away, he said to his wife: "Clothe me in white, for the Lord has prepared for me a crown." This desire of his she faithfully carried out. Brother Daung lived to the age of fifty-one. He left behind his second wife, née Miss Lu, three stalwart sons, and two daughters. Two of his sons are yet at school; the rest of his children are full-grown and independent. Alas! a good man is gone, but his example remains. May we follow in his footsteps!
